VICTORIOUS CHILI

Still Pursuing her Advantages and Worsting the Peruvians and Bolivians in Each Battle.

PANAMA, June 22.—News received by the steamer which arrived here on the 19th inst. confirms the intelligence of the capture of Tacna, and reports the commencement of the attack on Arica. In the former encounter the allies were evidently completely discomfited. The last we have heard of the allied forces which awaited so long at Tacna the attack of the invading force was that less than 2,000 men—Peruvians under Montero—were pursuing one line of retreat, and Campero with a fragment of the contingent which he led into the fight, was quietly wending his way homeward, ostensibly to reorganize his army, but, it was said, really beaten, disheartened, and disgusted. The number of Bolivians who came out of the fight at Tacna is unknown, but it cannot be more than 1,000 men. They are said to have borne the burden and heat of the day, and to have suffered terribly. The Chilians subjected them to a deadly artillery fire for two hours, and then went in with the bayonet. The Chilian, or the roto, as the Peruvians derisively name him, is not afraid of cold steel. The knife is his favorite weapon, and in its use he is singularly dexterous, and a dangerous antagonist. When, therefore, he has in his hands a musket with a sword bayonet on the end of it—a knife, to all intents and purposes, five or six feet long—he is a most murderous enemy. The allies fought desperately, and the Chilians themselves admit that the assault on the town may have cost them in the neighborhood of 4,000 men. The allies, however, have to account for 6,000 men whom their despatches leave out of the calculation. A part of this force may have gone to Arica, but that is not reported; and many may have fled to the haciendas and small mountain villages, but still their loss must have been great.

Campero transferred the command, the day before the fight began, to Montero, whom the Peruvians charge with cowardice, want of intelligence and foresight, and all sorts of abominations. The reason of Campero's resignation was that his term of office as provisional President of Bolivia expired on the 25th of May, and by agreement between Peru and Bolivia the command was then to fall to the commander of the Peruvian forces. Campero, although wounded, was not made prisoner, and it is said that after the fight he found his forces so completely cut to pieces that he had left no more than a body guard to see him safely over the border.

Col. Camacho, Col. McLean, and Gen. Perez are among the superior officers killed. The list of subordinates killed, and of superior and subordinate officers wounded, is very long.

Arica was attacked by a Chilian force 6,000 strong about the 4th or 5th inst. Before the fight began, the Chilian commander summoned the Peruvian garrison to surrender, but received for reply: "We will resist until our last cartridge is exhausted." The demand was renewed on the following day, with the observation, both complimentary and humane, that Gen. Baquedano, "in deference to the energetic defence of the city, and with the desire to avoid the useless shedding of blood," begged the Peruvian officers to accept conditions. The reply was the same as before. On the 8th all communication between Arica and other points in Peru was cut off, and it was believed in Lima that Arica had fallen. The Manco Capac, it was understood, would be blown up before allowing her to fall into the hands of the enemy. The attack on Arica was made from both land and sea. The Chilian vessels engaged were the Admiral Cochrane, Magalanes, Loa, Abtao, Copiapo, and Huidoro Cousino. A shell from the Morro is said to have set fire to the upper works of the first named, the celebrated Chilian ironclad which knocked the Huascar out of time at Angamos.

TEN SPANISH BULL FIGHTERS

They will Give an Exhibition of their Art in a New York Circus.

There arrived in this city yesterday, by the French steamer St. Laurent, from Havre, a party of ten Spanish bull fighters, who have been brought to this country by Mr. Fernandez. They are to give their performances in the circus now building at 116th street and Sixth avenue. The party numbers some of the most skilful of the fighters who have risked their lives in the arena at Madrid. With the exception of the chief, Angelo Valdemore, the matadors are young men, about 30 or 35 years of age. The chief is about 45. All have fine physiques. They wear close-fitting, full trousers, made of dark-colored velvet, and short jackets of the same material, both richly embroidered with gold. A broad red silk sash encircles the waist, and a broad-brimmed hat, silk stockings, and low shoes complete the outfit. When in the arena a black silk bonnet is worn instead of the hat.

A noticeable feature are their queues, which are very small, and worn about a foot long, the end being secured with gay colored ribbons. Each of the party wears upon his breast medals and other insignia received for skilful performances. The chief baldmoro has more of these badges than his comrades among the jewels presented to him by King Amadeus and King Alfonso.

The band bring with them the swords, spears, &c., used by them in Spain. These, however, will not be used here, but in their place similarly shaped implements made of wood. Changes as to the mode of fighting will also be made, as it is not intended to kill the bulls, but simply to show how the fights are conducted in Spanish countries. The most important changes will be the omission of the picadores and the banderilleros. The former are the ones who ride ponies and urge the bulls to the fight, and the latter also incite them by placing fireworks upon the necks of the bulls. The banderilleros engage in the fights, but will use in place of fireworks some harmless device that will illustrate their part in the real fight.

The party are stopping at present at the Sturtevant House. The bulls are being brought from Texas on one of the Galveston steamers. It is expected that the circus will be completed and a performance given by the latter part of next week.

THE SONGSTERS OF THE WOODS.

The Wonderful Concert that May be Heard at Sunrising in New Jersey.

From the early spring and through the summer, lovers of nature may enjoy a delightful concert by strolling through almost any woodland in New Jersey. Just before the rising of the sun the woodland warblers sing in their fullest and clearest notes, but then their human auditors are very few. The birds' songs seem to improve with the advance of the season. They seem to vie with each other in their singing. Among the leaders in this woodland choir is the familiar robin, whose cheery notes are recognized everywhere. The bluejay, with its feathers of changing hue and an ornamental tuft on its head, is also conspicuous among the songsters. The song of the brown thrasher is a wonderful performance, high, clear, and varied. The bird is of a beautiful brown color, with wings, tail, and head of a darker shade. The oriole is the most beautiful bird of our forests. It has a little bright spot on its breast, running into a rich gold color around the neck, the tail being glossy black. Its notes are clear and melodious. The lark, although a denizen of the meadows, visits the edges of the woods and is a great warbler. Its feathers are dark, excepting at the breast, where they are of a bright orange color. Its volume of song is greatest when perched upon some slender branch, where it swings gently with the breeze. The most industrious little singer is the wren, which continuously pours forth the funniest olio of notes imaginable.

A pleasant introductory concert may be heard in the fields on the way to the woods. The bobolink greets the morn as he flies from one tuft of grass to another with a tinkling chain of music. The catbird keeps crying in the alders close by. "I ca-an't," "I ca-a-aint," while the quail persistently calls for "Bob White."

Fears of a Water Famine in Brooklyn.

Unless there is a heavy rain in the next two weeks a serious water famine is apprehended in Brooklyn. There is about five days' supply of water in the Ridgewood reservoir and about as much more in the storage reservoir at Hempstead; but the daily consumption is great, and continues to be unnecessarily large in spite of the request of the Commissioners of City Works that consumers should be economical. The supply in the storage reservoir is about 8 feet 4½ inches deep, which represents about nine hundred and eighty million gallons. If this supply is exhausted the city will have to depend upon the streams upon the island and the various ponds connected with the conduit leading to the Ridgewood pumping station. The supply from this source would be about twelve million gallons less than the average daily consumption. Commissioner French issued a circular yesterday to householders urging greater economy. The use of street washers was yesterday restricted to the hours before 8 A. M., and the sprinkling of roadways from street washers was forbidden.

Clouds of Mosquitoes.

During the last two nights Flushing, L. I., and its neighborhood have been covered with clouds of mosquitoes, the like of which has never before been known. People had to carry bushes and handkerchiefs in their hands to keep the insects off. Places of business without protection were deserted by customers. It is supposed the dry weather has driven the pests from their haunts in the fen lands.
