THE CHIEF OURAY'S DEATH.

How the News was Received by the Utes at Los Pinos Agency.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Col. Meacham, one of the Ute Commissioners, writing on the day of the receipt of the intelligence of Ouray's death at Los Pinos, Aug. 26, says:

"When the Indian courier brought the news of Ouray's death this morning, Indians were seen running from camp to camp, bearing the sad story. About noon one of the most ambitious candidates for high honors came to the agency, and did not hesitate to announce his candidacy, nor to say: 'Ouray dead, That is all right. Some time all good men die.' A few minutes later seven other prominent men arrived and demanded 'a talk' with Agent Berry. The agent invited them to his room, and the talk was begun by a peace man (Indian) asking the agent if he would be their friend and stand between them and the white men, as Ouray had done. This question tells the whole story, and shows clearly that the Utes have no intention of going to war. Upon Major Berry's assurance that he would protect them with all the power of the Government if necessary, the Indians were evidently relieved from apprehension of trouble with white men. Then they spoke of Ouray's widow in terms that would have touched the hardest heart. One of them said: 'Poor Chip-pe-ta, who will take care of her now?' The agent, deeply moved by this appeal, replied: 'The Government will take care of Chip-pe-ta as long as she lives; Ouray's widow shall never come to want.' For a few minutes every eye in the room was filled with tears. 'Who will be our chief?' asked the warrior, who was himself a candidate. It was the opportune moment for action. Had Major Berry faltered or evaded the question, no prophet can foretell what might have transpired in the Rocky Mountains in the next ninety days. Without hesitation the agent replied: 'You have but one man that is able to receive the position of Ouray; that man is Sapovonaie.' The head of the ambitious young chief bent forward; his hopes were nipped. The work was done, and we all sleep soundly to-night."

TESORIERO DISCHARGED.

The Italian who, an Aged Brooklyn Widow Swears, Promised to Marry Her.

In the case of Antonino Tesoriero, the Italian who was arrested on a charge of obtaining $1,500 in money and a mortgage for $1,650 under false pretences from Mrs. Catherine Schafer, an aged German widow, of 2 Hope street, Brooklyn, Justice Courtney yesterday dismissed the complaint. Mrs. Schafer testified that the Italian, who, it is alleged, represented that he was a Count, had protested his love for her, and asked her to marry him. She consented to the match, and he got the money from her, saying that he was going to Italy to get a patrimony of $14,000, which he intended to make their common fortune when he returned. If he married her he was not to give the money back, and she said she was generous with him, because she believed that he was going to be her husband. He went to Italy and was gone eleven months. He did not write to her in his absence, and when he returned he did not come to see her.

Justice Courtney decided that money obtained under promise of marriage did not come within the provisions of the statute relating to false representations, and he discharged the Italian. Mrs. Schafer has a breach of promise suit for $10,000 pending against Tesoriero.

AN ALLEGED GIRL BURGLAR.

Only Fourteen Years of Age and Held for the Action of the Grand Jury.

Annie Murtha, the fourteen-year-old girl who is accused of having committed a number of burglaries to enable her to gratify her love for dress, was before Justice Bloom in Brooklyn yesterday on a charge of robbing Andrew Johnson's residence at 1,039 Pacific street of jewelry and other articles worth $50. The jewelry was traced to James O'Neil, a Bridge street pawnbroker, who identified the girl as the person who pawned it. Kate Johnson, the complainant's eight-year-old daughter, testified that the prisoner, who lived next door, entered her parents' house when she (the witness) was alone there, and, on the pretence of wishing to borrow two needles, gained access to the bureau where the jewelry was kept. Soon after the jewelry was missed.

The girl offered no defence and she was held to await the action of the Grand Jury, as had been done upon another of the four charges made against her. She then broke down and began to weep. She protested that she was innocent, and said that she went to the pawn shop for her mother, and that she believed that persons were prosecuting her to escape punishment themselves.

Mr. De Morgan's Antiquities.

Henry de Morgan, who is charged with defrauding the revenue by the customs officers at Rouse's Point, testified yesterday before United States Commissioner Deuel, before whom the case is pending. The witness said that the antiquities in dispute had been in his possession several years. Some of them he found himself in excavations in Europe and Asia. The collection was exhibited at the Paris exhibition in 1878. Some time ago he consigned them to Mr. Feuardent, a dealer in curiosities, in Lafayette place, and was informed that they could not be entered at the Custom House without the payment of heavy duties. From New York they were exported to him at Montreal, and afterward he took the collection to Rouse's Point, where, after making a declaration that the new works of art for his own use, he was permitted by the Collector to bring them into the United States free of duty. He had twenty statuettes at the Hippocampic Fair in Madison Square Garden. They were destroyed when the Garden fell, and the managers paid him $500 for them. He said that the statuettes at Mr. Feuardent's were marked "Not for sale."

Paying Men for Doing Nothing.

When the new One-head Department bill was passed by the last Legislature to make room for Republican politicians in Brooklyn, a clause, designed to help the bill through, was added, providing for the payment to the ousted heads of departments of their full salaries until the expiration of their terms of office. The effect of this was to give Frederick Massey, W. H. Hazzard, Hugh McLaughlin, Marcus Otterbourg, Philip Brennan, John Fyfe, Jr., and O. B. Leich salaries, while new officials, who were also paid, did the work. Mr. Hazzard alone of these men gave notice that he would not accept the money, and he drew up the necessary papers to enable the Comptroller to cover the amount monthly into the Treasury for the sinking fund. In view of the injustice done to the taxpayers Comptroller Steinbrenner and Corporation Counsel De Witt's opinion about the payment of the other men's demands. Mr. De Witt yesterday decided that the salaries of the ousted Commissioners must be paid.

One Boy Sues Another for the Loss of an Eye.

Judge Reynolds yesterday granted an order issuing a commission to the American Consul at Dusseldorf to take the testimony of Mrs. Schmitz of 404 Manhattan avenue, Brooklyn, and William Schmitz, her son, in a suit for $1,000 damages for the loss of an eye. The suit is begun by William Walter, aged 10, through his guardian, and is against William Schmitz, aged 11 years of age. The plaintiff's eye, it is alleged, was destroyed by the defendant, who thrust an umbrella rib into it. Soon after the accident the defendant and his mother went to Germany. A stay of proceedings has been granted in the suit pending the arrival of their testimony.

Freight Cars Wrecked.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., Sept. 3.—The New York special express going east, while passing the Agricultural Fair grounds this morning came in collision with several loaded freight cars, which, unobserved, had broken loose from a heavy train and run from a side track to the main line. The new passenger cars, loaded with corn, were wrecked, and the corn was strewn in all directions. The passenger locomotive was badly smashed. Fireman Barrie of the locomotive engine struck his head against a fence in jumping from the engine and was badly cut. There were only two passengers on the train, both of whom escaped unhurt.

Accident on the Hudson River Railroad.

HUDSON, N. Y., Sept. 3.—At about 1 o'clock this afternoon an engine on the Hudson River Railroad, drawing a mixed freight train composed of fifty-three cars, bound north, jumped the track soon after crossing the Stockport bridge, carrying twelve cars with it. No lives were lost, but considerable damage was done to the engine, cars, and contents. Orders from headquarters were given to send all passenger trains, both ways, over the Boston and Albany road via Chatham Village to and from this city. It is thought the road will be clear for regular traffic this evening.

Maud S. yet on the Track.

HARTFORD, Sept. 3—The Courant says that Capt. Stone, who has charge of Maud S., has received a cable despatch from Mr. Vanderbilt consenting to permit the mare to be put on the track again this season. She is now at Cincinnati. There are some fast tracks in this country so well adapted for fast time as the Charter Oak track. They are Rochester and Chicago, and the efforts of Maud S. will probably be on the last named.
