Propaganda—A Secret Chapter of War History

Has the History of the World War been finally written, or will there be an appeal from popular judgment? How much do we know and how much has been concealed from us? This article affords a glimpse behind the curtain. The episode itself, as well as the record of sundry related things following in its train, forms one of the most interesting revelations thus far published.

One Man's Love for One Woman

The story of an Indian Emperor, his Queen, and the Most Beautiful Building in the World.

Uncle Sam's Irrigation Projects

He is building great commonwealths, creating homes and adding to the wealth of the nation.

Jewish Testimony in Favor of Bolshevism

This Chapter in the series of articles on The International Jew may well be regarded by some as one of the most vital links in the case against the "Jewish idealism and Jewish discontent," to quote the American Hebrew of September 10, that "so powerfully contributed" to bring about the present state of Russia. The American people, even as prophesied by this same publication, must and will take cognizance of the problem thus presented.

The Alaskan Settler's Hardships

Third installment of the powerful contribution by Mr. Drayton on Alaskan conditions.

Mr. Ford's Page and Editorials

The usual well-balanced editorial page, dealing with subjects in which you are interested.

Gospel Mission Gives Him His Work and Fun

This is the story of a young chap who finds it easiest to keep on smiling as he does his work of mercy among the down-and-outers of a middle-western city; there is also a splendid tale having to do with a man who writes jokes for a living—the man is J. A. Waldron, the literary editor of Judge; all these of course do not begin to exhaust the budget spread before you in this week's edition.
