Life of the Farm Loan System Threatened

The interests of the farmer and of every man the farmer feeds are being threatened by powers which seek to control both the producer and the consumer. The extent of the attack and the possibilities of its success are discussed in this article.

Shackling the Flood Devils of the Miami

Ever since the glaciers invaded Ohio and gouged out the Miami Valley, that part of the country has been at the mercy of destructive floods. Now man is engaged in a struggle with nature to determine whether this evil shall continue and the result is the greatest flood prevention project ever attempted in this nation.

Why the Jews Dislike the Morgenthau Report

A Quarter of a Million Polish Jews are entering the United States. You have read yards of Jewish newspaper propoganda about Polish "Persecution." Did you ever read what an American Jew, sent by President Wilson, has to say about it? Probably not—Because the Jews don't want you to.

When an American Woman Can't Vote

An interesting and informative article dealing with the experiences of a Daughter of the American Revolution who discovered that under the confusing laws of citizenship she had been deprived of her right to the ballot.

The Man Who Made Harold Bell Wright

How the "Dickens of the Rural Route" rose from an itinerate pastor of the Ozarks to a place among the most popular American authors. Though critics laugh at and profess to scorn his writings, his books sell by the millions.
