SNIFFEN AGAINST SNIFFEN.

A WIFE'S REMARKABLE STORY OF HER MATRIMONIAL TROUBLES.

Averring that She was Driven from the House that She Owned by Stories of Masked Robbers, and was Afterward Barred out of It.

Judge Donohue has granted the motion made by Jonas H. Goodman, attorney for Phebe J. Sniffen in her suit against her husband, Merwin Sniffen. Mrs. Sniffen is allowed alimony and counsel fee pending her suit for divorce or separation on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment. In her affidavit, upon which Mr. Goodman's motion was granted, Mrs. Sniffen charges her husband with abandonment and refusal to provide maintenance for herself and her child, and immoral conduct with a young woman living in the house. The action for divorce was begun in December, 1880. Mrs. Sniffen was the owner of property on Railroad avenue valued at $9,000. In May, 1880, the action for divorce was pending. She had left the handsome residence on Broadway, White Plains, where she had three servants and a carriage, and had gone to live in Brooklyn and obtained employment in a store. On May 2 Mr. and Mrs. Sniffen came to an agreement to harmonize and live together again. Mrs. Sniffen agreed to give her husband a deed of the property she owned in White Plains, and he was to give her back a mortgage for $5,000. She consented to the discontinuance of the suit for divorce, and he agreed to provide a home for her outside of White Plains. The papers in relation to the property were drawn up by a lawyer, and during the negotiations Mr. and Mrs. Sniffen resumed their marital relations.

Subsequently Mrs. Sniffen discovered that from some defect in the papers the mortgage was worthless, and she accused her husband and the lawyer of trying to defraud her. As she had received but $40 from her husband, she concluded to take her child and go back to live in the house with her husband in White Plains. She arrived there at 11:40 A. M., Nov. 24, 1880, and she met at the door Alice Hickspear, the young woman whose relations with Mr. Sniffen had caused trouble in the family.

"What are you doing here?" inquired Mrs. Sniffen.

"Keeping house for Merwin," replied Miss Hickspear.

"What do you mean by speaking so?" said Mrs. Sniffen.

"Oh! I mean Mr. Sniffen," was the reply. Mrs. Sniffen made herself at home, ordered dinner, was told there was nothing in the house, sent down to Mr. Sniffen a list of the things she wanted and a note saying that she wanted to see him to talk to him. Mr. Sniffen got home before 2 P. M., and was met by Miss Hickspear, with whom he consulted before he saw his wife. He sat at the table, ate nothing, scarcely spoke to his wife, but made friends with his little daughter, to whom he gave $10. About 5 P. M. Mrs. Sniffen says that Miss Hickspear was very nervous and much excited, and said to her:

"Mrs. Sniffen, I don't want you to stay in this house all night. They have arranged a plan to murder you and they would not harm me or the child."

"What do you mean? I am in my own house! I am not afraid of it," answered Mrs. Sniffen.

"They have come here twice masked when they thought you were here, for the purpose of taking you out and murdering you. If they got hold of the child they would put it where you could not find it."

Mrs. Sniffen says further: "She frightened the child and me. I started to go, and heard the gate open and the wood falling, and I was afraid to go. Miss Hickspear said: 'Mrs. Sniffen, let me go out; they won't hurt me.'" Then Mrs. Sniffen and the child and Miss Hickspear went out to a neighbor's, and from there to New York on a milk train. Mrs. Sniffen insisting that Miss Hickspear should go with her.

The next day, Mrs. Sniffen says, she went to White Plains and to her husband's store, and asked him to go to the house, as she wanted to talk with him. Subsequently Mr. Sniffen went to the house and met his wife. She thus narrates the conversation:

"What do you want with me?" said Mr. Sniffen.

"I want to talk with you; I did not come to quarrel," said she. "What are you going to do for me?"

"I am not going to do anything for you," he said, appearing to be angry.

"Don't get mad; if you do I will not talk," said Mrs. Sniffen. Then she says that he promised not to get mad, and they continued their conversation. She said:

"You have worked your plans and got them very satisfactory to yourself, so as to leave me without a dollar. I have been obliged to get work in a store. Do you intend to discard me?" she asked.

"I do not intend to do anything of the kind," he replied.

"Do you propose to live in this house with this woman?" she asked. "Do you mean to support her here and leave me without a dollar in the world?"

"I will live with whom I please," she says he said.

"I am your wife, and this is your child," she declared, "and I shall apply to the courts to assert my rights." She begged him to remember his child, who was present at the interview and crying. Mrs. Sniffen remained at the house the rest of the day, and Mr. Sniffen gave her $25. She wanted more, as she had bills to pay. He asked if she intended to stay all night, and she said she intended to stay all night and all the time; that it was her home, and she was going to stay. The child begged him to stay, and said: "Oh, papa, do come home and treat mamma as you ought." Mr. Sniffen went away and did not return that night, remarking that Mrs. Sniffen was a funny woman. But he told the child to the store, and bought some things for her. Mrs. Sniffen says that the next day she went to take the child to school, and stayed at her boarding house that night. On returning to White Plains she found the house locked up. She went to her husband's store and told him she wanted to get into the house, and asked for the keys. He refused to let her have the keys. She says she said to him: "Do you refuse me the home I have had? Can it be possible that you will refuse your wife and child their home?" Mr. Sniffen answered, she says, "I will do as I please, and have nothing to do with you."

Mrs. Sniffen declared in her affidavit that her husband had obtained possession of her real estate, and then refused to support her. She believed he was worth $30,000. Mr. Sniffen put in a general denial, and made counter charges against his wife. In granting the motion for alimony and counsel fee, Judge Donohue appointed a referee to take testimony, and report what would be a proper amount of allowance.

THE PALISADES TUNNEL.

A Contract Taken for Its Completion in One Year—The Details.

The contract for constructing the tunnel for the New York, Ontario and Western Railroad tracks through the Palisades from Weehawken to New Durham, N. J., has been awarded to Smith, Ripley & Coleman of this city, the contractors for the building of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western extension from Binghamton. The contractors are given about fifteen days in which to get the material on the ground and begin work. One year from that time they agree to have the tunnel ready for tracks.

The tunnel is to be 4,200 feet, or about four-fifths of a mile, in length. The hill through which it is to be dug is 250 feet high and the tunnel will be about that distance below the surface. Its eastern entrance will be about 1,000 feet back from the Hudson River at Weehawken Ferry. It will be approached by an up grade just sufficient for drainage. The contract provides that the tunnel shall be wide enough for double tracks.

In order to give as great a working surface as possible, five shafts will be sunk, so that work may be pushed on ten faces at one time. All the machinery used will be of the most approved kind. Compressed air, power drills, and other inventions to facilitate progress will be employed. The engineers expect to encounter chiefly the trap rock formation, which will make very little brick arching necessary.

Experience in the West Point Tunnel makes the company confident that the work can be done in the specified time, which is unprecedently short for an undertaking of that magnitude. The contractors will employ all the men they can use to advantage, and will carry on the work at night by the aid of electric lights. Mr. Coleman, a member of the firm of contractors, will personally superintend the work. Walter Katte, Chief Engineer of the New York, Ontario and Western, will have supervisory charge of the undertaking for the company.

Extensive purchases of land around the entrances to the proposed tunnel have been made by the company. The work of getting deeds, looking up titles, &c., has not been near enough finished, the representatives of the company say, to warrant them in giving particulars at present. They also decline to give the figures at which the contract for building the tunnel was awarded. It was learned from another source that the contract was let for $650,000. A meeting of the directors will be held to-day at which the award will be confirmed, and it is understood that Gen. E. F. Winslow, President of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, will be elected President.

Mining in Vermont.

The Northeastern Gold and Silver Mining Company is the name of a corporation that is digging for precious metal in Washington county, Vermont. Robert L. Cooke, who bought 6,000 shares of the stock of the company, claims to have had a contract to superintend the mines, but he alleges that when he reached the mines his instructions were disobeyed by those acting under instructions of the President of the company. He has begun a suit in the Supreme Court, in Kings County, to enforce his rights under the contract. He claims that there is ore in the mines, but it needs to be worked according to plans. Judge Gilbert yesterday heard certain motions upon minor points in the case with the County Clerk.

A SKELETON IN COURT.

Anatomical Information for the Jury in Mrs. Deputy's Suit for $25,000.

In Mrs. Henrietta Deputy's suit for $25,000 damages against ex-City Works Commissioner W. H. Hazzard, for alleged assault, Dr. Joseph C. Hutchison testified, in the Brooklyn City Court yesterday, that he thought that Mrs. Deputy, instead of suffering an injury to her spinal cord, caused by Mr. Hazzard's alleged assault, was suffering from a functional derangement, such as used to be called hysterical paralysis. He did not think that she was shamming, but that she was honestly mistaken about the pains she said she suffered.

Dr. Hutchison produced a skeleton of a tall woman, which he danced about as he explained to the jury how the spinal cord was protected and how it might be injured. If there was paralysis, he said, the want of sensation was always found below the spot injured.

Q.—Are hysterical patients victims of their own delusions? A.—Yes, and of the most astounding delusions. Injudicious friends or an injudicious doctor, by questions about certain symptoms, may develop those symptoms in the belief of the patient, who will resort to all means possible to make her physician think that she has those symptoms.

Dr. Hutchison said he thought that, when freed from the excitement of this trial, the patient, with judicious management, would recover. If her temperament had been predisposed to hysteria, he thought that anger and emotion might have produced her disease.

The crowd in the court room was so great and the ventilation was so poor that Judge Reynolds interrupted Dr. Hutchison's cross-examination to ask:

"Doctor, don't you think it would be better to ventilate this court room and bring down the pulses of those in here?"

Dr. Hutchison—I think it would. If I were a member of the Board of Health, and had the power, I would either ventilate it or close it up.

Judge Reynolds then ordered a recess of an hour, so that the windows could be thrown open and the air purified.

Dr. Adolph Varona testified as an expert surgeon that the violence described was utterly inadequate to produce the injury claimed, and would not have been sufficient to produce an organic disease of the spinal cord. Dr. Varona said that he was born in Cuba, of an old Cuban family, and upon cross-examination he described his wanderings, saying that he had served in the Spanish regular army, in the Spanish insurgent army, and had lived in about a dozen places.

MR. HOPKINS'S LOST VALUABLES

Graciously Restored to him by a Negro Thief in the City Prison.

Henry Raymond, the young colored man who on Friday night last stole an overcoat from the house of Ulysses S. Grant, Jr., was visited in the Tombs yesterday afternoon by Mr. Hopkins of Jerusalem street, Brooklyn, who was in search of lost valuables. While calling at the house of a friend up-town he was robbed of a handsome overcoat, the pockets of which contained souvenirs and mementoes valuable chiefly to the owner. Hearing that a servant girl in the house from which his coat was taken had lately identified Raymond as a person who called at the door on the night of the robbery, Mr. Hopkins obtained permission from District Attorney Rollins to see the prisoner. Raymond was self-possessed. Mr. Hopkins seemed embarrassed, but he soon managed to make the negro understand that he sympathized with having stolen his overcoat, and that he was particularly anxious to recover the contents of its pockets. Raymond thereupon opened his stylish coat, and with a manifest pride drew from his pocket a beautiful little card case, on the cover of which was a painted ornament of ivory.

"Thank you," said Mr. Hopkins, accepting the card case.

Raymond then folded his arms again and resumed his former attitude of indifference.

"And my little purse," said Mr. Hopkins. "Have you got that about you too?"

The colored man looked grieved, and, pushing his hand down into his trousers pocket, produced a dainty little silver-trimmed purse, which Mr. Hopkins also gladly received. A gold-mounted pistol, which completed the contents of Mr. Hopkins's overcoat pockets, Raymond apologetically said he had not about his person, but he politely gave the owner information as to its whereabouts, and also told Mr. Hopkins where he would be able to find the overcoat itself.

Warden Finn expressed much surprise that the police had not deprived the thief of these articles.

BURGLARS CAUGHT IN THE ACT.

A Stop Probably Put to the Series of House Breakings in Morrisania.

Policemen Black and Schorske of the Morrisania squad, while watching in civilian dress at 2 A. M. yesterday, saw two men skulking around the premises of Mr. Ackerman, at 136th street and St. Ann's avenue. They watched until they saw the men attempt to pry open the shutters of a window on the ground floor with a jimmy, and then arrested them in the act. The prisoners gave their names at the station as Richard Smith, a butcher, of 19 Eldridge street, and Charles Fisher, a tramper of 45 Eldridge street. Several stolen keys, a number of pawn checks, and a long knife were found upon them. They were taken to the Police Central office, where Fisher was identified as William Brown, who was arrested three years ago for burglaries in Houston street and Avenue A. Their photographs were taken, although Brown has been in the Rogues' Gallery.

Although the men denied all knowledge on the subject, they are believed to have been concerned in a number of other burglaries committed in Morrisania within the past fortnight. Among the houses entered were those of William Frambach, at 137th street and St. Ann's avenue; Dennis Sadlier, the picture dealer, at 137th street and Boulevard, and J. F. Freeman, a brother of the Judge, at 138th street and Boulevard. From each house silverware and clothing of considerable value were taken.

A BANK PRESIDENT'S INDEBTEDNESS.

His Wife Losing her Fortune by Pledging it as Security to his Creditors.

WHITEHALL, Jan. 18.—In 1876 E. W. Hall was President of the Merchants' National Bank in this village, and was liable to that institution for over $70,000. To save itself from loss, the bank extended Hall's indebtedness from time to time, and at length obtained from Mrs. E. W. Hall, who is a sister of Congressman Hammond, the assignment of Crown Point Iron Company stock, valued at over $9,000, as collateral security for her husband's liability. Hall subsequently went through bankruptcy, and was arrested on a charge of violating the national banking laws, but was discharged. Suit was then instituted to recover the stock deposited with the bank by Mrs. Hall, who alleged, among other things, that it was obtained from her by false representations. The bank obtained a verdict in the Circuit Court, which was affirmed by the General Term, and the Court of Appeals to-day, in an opinion by Chief Judge Folger, declares that the lower courts made no error. The stock was the fortune bequeathed to Mrs. Hall by her father.

Children Abandoned by Their Mother.

William and James Gillen, aged respectively 10 and 6 years, were found in a cold, bare room at 510 West Twenty-eighth street, yesterday, without food or sufficient clothing. Their mother had abandoned them while drunk. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children took them to the Jefferson Market Court, where they were committed to the Catholic Protectory.
