CRIME AND THE SABBATH.

The Ideas of Pastor Williams on Car Conductors, Capitalists, and Sunday Trains.

"It is a fact that conductors on the elevated railroads are less civil to-day than they were yesterday, and they will be still less civil to-morrow," said the Rev. C. S. Williams, in the course of Sunday's sermon in the Seventh Street Methodist Church. His subject was "Sunday Crime," and he was seeking to show the effects of continuous labor.

"Labor, without a day of rest," said he, "makes men sodden. Hopefulness dies out. The elements that inspire men with better ambition are absent. It is the same with the conductors on the surface roads as with those on the elevated roads. I have talked with them. They are held down for seven days in the week. They say they have time during the day to snatch only a morsel of bread. Continuous toil depresses them physically, morally, and intellectually. They have no opportunity to read or study. Arriving home at night, they have time only to put into their stomachs the large amounts of food needed to repair the waste of their bodies, and then to throw themselves into their beds. The nervous system is called on to digest this mass of food during sleep, and in the morning there is no power left in the brain. The repair of the waste of life is all that these men can accomplish.

"Sunday is a day of education. The church is a college. Wherever you find a lack of observance of Sunday as a day of rest and meditation, you will find a lack of character. The vast masses of the people, more and more widely separated from the rich and well-to-do, are more and more given over to rum and evil influences. When the right man comes to unite these vast and vicious masses, what a ruin there will be! The observance of the Sabbath lies at the foundation of prosperity. The vicious and criminal poor are only partly responsible for their crimes. A great responsibility lies with men of prosperity and character.

"You would naturally say that the police are responsible for much of the crime of this city, but you must remember that through the working of politics a large part of the police force comes from the very class I am speaking of.

"What is to be said of a man who knows a certain politician is unfit for the duties of the office for which he is a candidate, but who votes for him because he belongs to his party? Each political party is rotten and foul with corruption. In the Republican party in this city there is a man who draws $8,000 a year as a Justice. He fills an office that requires a knowledge of the law. He possesses the kind of knowledge necessary to advance him as a politician.

"Men should stay at home on Sunday. The law must lay its hand on that iron injustice, the elevated railroad, whose thunders are heard all day long in place of the Sabbath bell.

"The cause of all these anti-Sunday efforts is greed. It is capitalists that are doing it. They are now preparing iron steamboats to run seven days in the week. They are preparing the means to tumble this city every Sunday out upon the beach. They want the profits of two or three days of the workingman's labor, and in return for it they will give him fresh air, riot, rum, and robbery. These trains must stop, and these steamboats must lie up on Sunday. You cannot compel this to be done? You can compel a man to pull down a wall of his house and to build it up in a certain way, to prevent danger to the community.

"Ah! that's the whole trouble," said the preacher. "There is no honest faith. How long, if such a state of affairs continues, will it be before an eruption occurs? How long before the vast masses rise up and tear down your pasteboard castles and trample your stocks and bonds in the street? The nation that sows the seeds of crime will reap destruction. More and more the poor are being converted into many-passioned animals, many-horned, many-hooved, robbed of foresight, of religion, and of God, and there is put before their eyes only a gigantic devil in the shape of capital. Depend on it, they will throw themselves upon this devil, and tear him to pieces."

ANNIE CRAWFORD TO BE SENT HOME.

Her Father Held for Trial on the Charge of Assault and Battery.

Judge Donohue gave his decision yesterday morning in the case of Annie Louise Crawford, the child who was punished and chained up by her father. Two questions were presented under the statute for the Judge to decide: whether the father should be held to bail for trial for cruelty, and whether the child should be restored to her parents or remain in the custody of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Judge Donohue gave his opinion in writing, as follows:

"This case is not one rendering any discussion necessary as to the right of the father to use corporal punishment on the child, admitting that the child had been guilty of the offences charged and the right to punish existed. The power is accompanied by a limit as to the character and extent of the punishment, and the excuse that the father liked the child greatly neither justifies the extent nor manner of the punishment in the case. Having in the first place punished without the existence of the cause, and in the second place exceeded, if the charges are true, the limit, he must be committed.

"In addition to this result for the assault there is another branch of the case, as to the disposition of the child, that is not so easily determined. While the acts proved do not, so far as the father's custody is concerned, entitle him as a matter of right to the custody, yet the wishes of the child herself and what may be supposed to be her desires, I feel bound to consult; and, without the father's treatment has not been what it should be, her desires and wishes to be with her brother and sisters, and her expressed affection for her stepmother, leads me to the conclusion that she should be returned to her home, as best for her future interest. There is nothing in the case at all reflecting on her stepmother that would lead to the supposition that the child's expressed wish in that matter was not her own.

"The proceedings of the society in bringing the matter to the attention of the courts is entirely commendable, and adds another evidence that, in the exercise of the duties of their office, of children who are in some instances without protection will in their hands always be carefully watched.

"It is to be hoped that the result may impress on the father the fact that, in dealing with this little one, more care and kindness are necessary. I have not commented on the evidence at length, because it might hereafter be a source of unhappiness to the child to have a more extended record of its grievances."

The father was required to furnish $500 bail to await trial, and was told that the child would be delivered to him to-day.

Entertaining the Newsboys.

Gen. H. B. Carrington, formerly in command of the Rocky Mountain Department of the army during the years from 1865 to 1870 lectured before the boys in the Newsboys' Lodging House last night. He recited something of his observations during a life among the Sioux Indians. The room was filled with as curious an audience as ever a lecturer addressed. The boys were, perhaps, first noticeable for their abnormally well-washed faces. Many of the urchins wore shoes, but many more at bare feet, and five daughters. Packer Institute was closed yesterday and will be closed to-day out of respect to his memory.

Shooting His Wife and Committing Suicide.

ROME, N. Y., March 14.—John Schreever of this city, a teamster, has not been on friendly terms with his wife, and they have not lived together for some time. Schreever is addicted to drinking. This morning, while intoxicated, he met his wife in a meat market, and without any warning, deliberately drew a revolver and shot her in the neck. He then placed the revolver to his head and fired, making a ghastly wound. Mrs. Schreever may recover. Mr. Schreever died.

THE LAST OF A GANG.

Inspector Murray Makes the Final Arrest for the Astoria Masked Burglary.

Inspector Murray, accompanied by Sergeant Meakim and Roundsman Tiernan, yesterday arrested, at 129 Division street, Larry Madden, who is said to be the last of the perpetrators of the burglaries in Astoria in Christmas week, 1876, remaining at liberty. The arrest was based on a bench warrant procured by Benjamin W. Downing, the District Attorney of Queens County, on Feb. 8, 1877. Madden was the leader of a gang of six men who rowed in an open boat from a point in the Fourth Ward to Astoria, where they broke into the house of Mr. Hillier, a Wall street broker. They gathered all the inmates of the mansion in one room, and, after securing everything else they could lay their hands on, despoiled them even of their earrings and finger rings. They then went to Green's Hotel, where they robbed the fifteen boarders in the same way. On their way to their boat they robbed a man, whom they met driving in a cutter, of everything but his underclothing.

In returning down the river in the boat, Madden quarrelled with Farrell, who, with him, was one of the originators of the expedition, over division of the spoil, and shot him in the arm.

Three of the burglars were captured by Inspector (then Captain) Murray, on the night of Jan. 3. John Roberts, on trial, was sentenced to twenty years in State prison, but was pardoned out in the autumn of 1879, by Gov. Robinson.

James, alias "Fatty," Farrell, was convicted on a charge of entering Mr. Hillier's house, for which he was sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment. He pleaded guilty to entering Green's Hotel, and received an additional sentence of fifteen years, making 35 in all.

James Reilly turned State's evidence, but nevertheless got eighteen years. James, alias "Juggy," McCarty pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to twenty years.

Patrick, alias "Whitey," Purssell, with Madden, escaped capture at the time, but was subsequently arrested by Inspector Murray for robbing Farmer Engel's house in Fairview, N. J., about a year ago, for which he is now serving a twenty years' sentence in Trenton prison.

Madden, who escaped capture until yesterday, when he was arrested at the house of his sister, has served one long term in State prison and is a member in the penitentiary. Inspector Murray has no doubt of being able to convict him, as all the victims to the Astoria outrages are still living, and will doubtless be able to identify him, as they did his confederates.

THE MYSTERIOUS ROBBERY.

Complaints by the Brooklyn Police that their Efforts are Obstructed.

The police have not yet cleared up the mystery surrounding the robbery in Miss Elizabeth Robert's house at 100 Second place, Brooklyn, by four armed men, on Saturday last. The detectives complain that Miss Robert is so distrustful of the police that they have been able to get information only by degrees, and that they have been obstructed in their investigation by facts concealed from them, and by contradictory statements. The police and the reporters were both repeatedly informed that Miss Robert lived in the house with only a servant, but it has been ascertained that she had two boarders, one Miss Laura Grinhard, a Swedish woman, who was spoken of by Miss Robert as Miss Grinshaw, a dressmaker, and another, Mr. Eckstein, also a foreigner, who occupied a room in the upper part of the house. Police Sergeant Cadden was anxious to see these persons, but his efforts to do so were circumvented, although he spent five hours in the attempt. Miss Grinhard is an artist, and has for some time boarded in the house. Mr. Eckstein, who introduced Miss Grinhard to Miss Robert, lived in the house for some time before Miss Grinhard came.

The fact that the robbers seemed to know that it was Miss Robert's habit to carry her pocket-book in the bosom of her dress seems to indicate that they were previously informed of her custom. This information, the police believe, was given by some one in her circle of intimate acquaintances. Miss Robert says she is convinced that this theory is correct, but adds that she has no suspicion of any person. She insists that her servant is innocent, and that the information was not given by any one in her house; and she has no suspicions to give the police to follow up. A set of false sandy whiskers was found in the house after the robbers went away. Miss Robert suspects that one or two of the robbers called at her house earlier in the week on suspicious pretexts.

Miss Robert yesterday declined to assist Police Captain Leavy in holding an interview with the only male occupant of her house, saying that she did not see what possible reason the police had for making his acquaintance.

A Jersey City Street Caving In.

The large hole in Newark avenue, Jersey City, caused by the break in the sewer in the recent rains, is yet growing larger. The authorities have done all they could to stop the break, but without success. The break is about half way up the steep hill leading to the Heights. The fall of the water from the top of the hill is about fifteen feet. It was decided that the only available plan was to dam up the sewer just below the manhole at Waldo avenue, a short distance above the break, and then let the water run out of the top of the manhole. This was tried yesterday afternoon and nearly all the water was shut off. Mr. John Condon, who has charge of the work, found that there was another break about fifteen feet above the old one. This is about six feet long. At the junction of Eighth street, about 100 feet below the break, the street has begun to cave in. This is believed to mark another break.

Swindled by a Rogue Detective.

CARBONDALE, Pa., March 14.—A medium-sized man with sandy waving hair registered at one of our hotels one week ago as G. A. Halstead, and introduced himself as a member of Pinkerton's detective force. He was here to watch a prominent resident who, he said, was interested in the great bank robbery which was committed in this city six years ago. He was a visitor in this city at that time, but was not recognized as one of the detectives who were successful in searching out the thieves and the stolen money. Halstead negotiated with Hickox & Co., extensive flour merchants in Cleveland, for the purchase of a brick bakery which has lately come into their possession by the failure of a leading firm. The Cleveland parties accepted his offer, and sent Frank Barnard, their travelling agent, from Buffalo to this city on Saturday to close the bargain. Halstead disappeared, however, a few hours previous to Barnard's arrival. He left his hard bill and other debts unpaid.

John H. Prentice's Death.

Mr. John H. Prentice, a wealthy resident of Brooklyn, died on Sunday in his residence at Grace court. He was Park Commissioner, Treasurer of the East River Bridge, trustee of Greenwood Cemetery, and Treasurer of Packer Institute. His sister, Harriet L. Packer, founded Packer Institute, and Mr. Prentice assisted her in the execution of her plans, and also aided in founding the Polytechnic Institute. He owned Prentice's store, near Wall street ferry, from which he derived a large income. He was a member of the Church of the Pilgrims. In Dr. Storrs's absence in Boston, where he is delivering a course of lectures, the Rev. Dr. Taylor of this city will officiate at the funeral services, which are to be held at the house this evening. Mr. Prentice leaves a widow and four sons and five daughters. Packer Institute was closed yesterday and will be closed to-day out of respect to his memory.
