WHAT MAN GAVE WARNING?

One of Whitney's Agents Accused of Betraying a Contemplated Police Raid.

George S. Stebbins, employed by David J. Whitney of the Society for the Prevention of Crime to procure information against gambling houses and other low resorts, applied last Monday to Justice Wandell in the Tombs Police Court for warrants. The society having frequently complained that notice is given to persons against whom warrants are issued, and having alleged that the information was given by the police court attachés, Justice Wandell took every precaution against the possibility of such an occurrence. He caused the warrants to be drawn up in his private room, and after they were signed they were given to Sergeant James of the Tombs Police Court Squad to be executed. The magistrate, Sergeant James, and Stebbins were the only persons who knew about the warrants.

At 10 o'clock yesterday morning, Sergeant James, with picked men of his command, and a squad of police from the Mercer street station, went to the houses in Greene street, kept by Mrs. Meyers, against whom the warrants had been issued. At 1 o'clock he returned to the Tombs Police Court with the Meyers woman and three other women. He said to Justice Wandell:

"When I arrived at the house this morning, having taken every precaution that the inmates should not escape, Mrs. Meyers told me that all the women had been gone since Monday night; that she had been notified that warrants were out for her. I asked her how she got the information, and she said that George Stebbins, one of Mr. Whitney's men, who was a friend of hers, had come to her house and told her to go to a neighboring liquor store, where she would get important information. She went and met a man, who told her that George Stebbins had asked him to warn her that Mr. Whitney had a warrant for the women in her houses. She said that Stebbins had promised her that Mr. Whitney should never trouble her. She hurried back, told the women what she had heard, and sent them all away. As she said did not come off Tuesday, she began to think that she had been fooled, and three women had come back."

Justice Wandell said to the Meyers woman: "It has been communicated to me that you were informed late last Monday afternoon or evening that warrants had been issued by the Court for your arrest. Is that true?"

"Yes, sir," the woman answered; "but my counsel is not here, and I am afraid these men will get me into trouble if I say anything."

"The Court will protect you, but I want the truth about what took place."

"Well," said the woman, "this gentleman (pointing to Stebbins) came to my house between 6 and 7 on Monday evening, and asked to see me. When I came down he told me a man wanted to see me on important business. I asked him who it was, and he mentioned the name of a friend of his, whom he had introduced at the house. He told me to go and see him; that he had something of great importance to tell me. I went to the saloon and met Stebbins's friend, who told me that George wanted him to tell me to look out for myself; that there were warrants out for my houses. I didn't believe Mr. Whitney would trouble me, and I said I didn't believe there were warrants out. George's friend said he knew there were, and I had better look out for myself, as the Tombs Police Squad would raid me on the next morning about 9 o'clock."

Justice Wandell ordered the Meyers woman to give bail in $500 to appear for examination at 3 o'clock to-morrow. Bail was given. The three other women were discharged on their promise to appear as witnesses.

A little over a year ago Mr. D. J. Whitney of the Society for the Prevention of Crime explained to a SUN reporter a system of surveillance exercised by the society over the public, a feature of which was the keeping of a record of the doings of men and women, to be used in certain cases to further the objects of the society. This system was stated to be called the Black List, and it has since been called by that name. The question arose whether some of the detectives or agents of the society might not use for purposes of blackmail, or otherwise improperly, the facts obtained in the preparation of this Black List.

In an interview printed in THE SUN on Feb. 6, 1880, Mr. Whitney said:

"Every man that we have has been salted, dried, and cut, and they are in every respect true, smart, active fellows. I would not intrust any important case to a man that I believe is not trustworthy."

In an interview printed in THE SUN on Feb. 5, 1880, the Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby, President of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, was asked:

"Do you believe your detectives are trustworthy?"

Dr. Crosby said: "I believe that all the men we now have are tried men. We have been misled once or twice, but we have weeded out the bad element."

MASKED BURGLARS ARRESTED.

The Alleged Leaders of the Gang who have been Operating in the Southern Tier.

ELMIRA, N. Y., March 16.—For some time past daring robberies by masked men have been committed in isolated portions of counties in the southern tier. On the night of March 6 the house of George Kemp, an elderly farmer in the town of Newfield, Tompkins County, was visited. Kemp and his wife live alone. About the first of the month Kemp received a payment of several hundred dollars on a mortgage. On the night of the 6th, after Kemp and his wife had retired, they were aroused by a knock at the door. The old farmer opened the door and the masked men sprang in. They seized Kempand his wife. The former they bound and gagged; the latter they forced, at the point of a pistol, to give them all the money there was in the house. Fortunately Kemp had deposited all except $80 in bank the day before. The latter sum was given to the robbers by Mrs. Kemp. She was then bound and gagged, and the robbers made their escape.

Henry Ballou, a young man of questionable character, disappeared from the vicinity a day or so after the robbery. Officers were placed on his track. He was found at Breesport, Chenango County, and arrested. He at once confessed to being concerned in the Kemp robbery. He was aided, he said, by Charles Duell, but the robbery was planned by William Coates, a well-known resident of Newfield. They had driven to and from Kemp's with Coates's horse and sleigh. Ballou also said that Coates was the leader of a gang that had perpetrated similar crimes in southern New York, and that a number of others were planned for the future. Coates and Duell have been arrested, and all three of the robbers are in Ithaca jail.

An Alleged Boy Burglar.

RED BANK, March 15.—The store of Antonio Perdoni was robbed of money and goods on Sunday night to the amount of about $50. A lad named Joseph Stewart had been employed to do odd jobs around the store, and Perdoni immediately suspected him of being the thief. This suspicion was strengthened when Stewart did not make his appearance on the following morning. Perdoni informed the police. Stewart was captured on Monday evening by Constable Thomas Norman. He is only 11 years old, and, on account of his diminutive size, does not look to be more than eight. He is blind in one eye, and the sight of his other eye is defective. He entered the store on Sunday night by removing a pane of glass, and then reaching through and unlocking the back door. He spent most of the money in treating people he met, and gave away many of the cigars and cigarettes that he took. He at first denied his guilt to Justice Child, but afterward confessed. He appeared perfectly unmoved, and, when asked a question by his mother, he said:

"Shut up! Who's runnin' this thing, me or you?"

When taken to the jail for the night he was surrounded by a crowd of his playfellows, with whom he laughed and talked as they went along the street.

An Unprofitable Cargo.

The second trial of the suit of David H. Sherman and another against the Inman Steamship Company, which has occupied the attention of Judge Van Vorst and a jury, in Supreme Court, Circuit, for over a week, resulted yesterday in a verdict for the plaintiff for $32,624 29. The action was brought to recover the value of fresh beef and mutton shipped to Liverpool in the steamship City of Brussels, on April 21, 1877. On the morning of the 23d, when she was 400 miles from New York and 200 miles from Halifax, she broke her propeller shaft and then proceeded by sail, reaching her destination thirty days. After she had been twenty-one days out the ice for preserving the meat was consumed, and, except 9,000 pounds used by the ship the meat spoiled and was thrown into the sea. The judgment upon the first trial, which took place about a year ago, before Judge Landon, and which resulted in a verdict for $34,500 for the plaintiff, was reversed by the General Term on appeal because the damage was predicated upon the value of the meat at Liverpool instead of upon the invoice, or cost value, as stipulated in the bill of lading.

Expert Southworth's Blunder.

When A. S. Southworth, an expert, compared many specimens of handwriting at West Point while the court of inquiry was investigating the Whittaker case, he attached the note of warning to specimen 27, to indicate that that specimen had been written by the person who wrote the note of warning. It turned out that that specimen had not been written by Whittaker. Afterward Mr. Southworth testified before the court of inquiry that the note of warning was written by the person who wrote the specimen attributed to Cadet Whittaker. Yesterday under Chamberlain cross-examined him back and forth about 14 minutes in nearly an hour.

"There was a tremendous strain upon me at that time," explained the witness, "and great mental excitement, and during my examination from my desk for three or four days and nights I made a blunder. There were many points of resemblance between specimen 27 and the note."

Tweed's Furniture Sold.

A lot of household stuff from the residence of the late William M. Tweed, at Forty-third street and Fifth avenue, was sold yesterday by auction at the rooms of Van Tassell & Kearney, in Union square. A number of large mirrors set in gilded black walnut frames brought from $40 to $315 each. A lot of bookcases brought from $75 to $180 each. Parlor suites brought from $50 to $140 each, and bedroom suites from $60 to $175.

EXTENSIVE LAND SWINDLES.

Conspiracy to Defraud the Government Out of Several Million Acres.

ST. LOUIS, March 16.—Albert L. Lindsay, who was arrested yesterday by United States Special Agent P. D. Tyrrell, on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the Government out of lands by uttering false deeds under fraudulent titles, is regarded by Tyrrell as the chief conspirator. Other and very important arrests were made simultaneously with that of Lindsay, and still others will be made. Those arrested so far are Orland Van Hise, John K. Corwin, lawyers or real estate agents at Cleveland, George Linn of Lindale, near Cleveland, and Addison F. Burns, real estate agent, and H. R. McClellan, notary, Pittsburgh. There are still others implicated in the swindle in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, and other cities, and additional arrests may be looked for at any time. It is estimated that several million acres of land will revert to the Government when the affair is straightened out. Robert L. Lindsay has borne a good character here, and his father, James Lindsay, was Register of Land at Ironton for several years.

Herman E. Schuster, a notary, Charles Vasel, and Charles Newman were arrested to-day by Government officers, on the general charge of perjury, but the two former are believed to be in some way connected with the land frauds brought to light yesterday, and will be held as witnesses. Robert L. Lindsay failed to furnish bonds in the sum of $10,000 this morning, and was imprisoned. He claims that his arrest is political persecution, brought about by the Hon. Carl Schurz, who, he says, removed his father, James Lindsay, from the position of Register of Lands at Ironton, without cause. He also denies being connected with or knowing anything about a land swindle. He has examined a great many land titles, that being his business, but he had no knowledge of any of them being fraudulent. On the other hand, Detective Tyrrell says that Lindsay's statement about political persecution is all bosh; that Carl Schurz had nothing to do with the arrest, but that he (Tyrrell) first discovered the fraud, and has been working it up for a year.

PITTSBURGH, March 16.—Burns, who was arrested yesterday with McClellan, for forgery of land titles in Missouri, belongs to Edinburg, Clarion County, and bail was entered for a hearing in both cases on the 25th inst.

Jersey Street's Beggars.

Jersey street is about 500 feet in length. It extends from Crosby street to Mulberry street just above Prince. Probably no street in America houses so many beggars as does Jersey street. It is very narrow, the walks are only about two feet in width, and the houses on either side are on an average about four stories in height. The scene yesterday afternoon before the air became chilly was worth a short visit for any one who has an interest in the people of the metropolis and the manner of their living. Ragpickers by the score sat or lounged on the curbs, walks, or doorsteps, and talked guttural Italian, while quaint little girls, with long, full skirts, bobbed curly heads about among at least half a hundred ragged urchins who were lounging preparatory to starting out in the evening to beg in the streets. Cripples of every shade of dilapidation and disease hobbled about without the piteous looks or expressions which they invariably assume when soliciting charity from the outside world, and women beggars whose dirty shawls had been dropped from their heads, exposing in many instances surprisingly glossy heads of black hair coiled neatly behind. Almost every window in the double row of houses was occupied by some lounging form gazing idly at the festive throng, or chatting lazily with some occupant within the room. A nest, containing many hundred Italian beggars in sad need of improvement, is Jersey street.

The Chesapeake and Ohio's Terminus.

FORTRESS MONROE, March 15.—The Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company has selected Newport News as the deep water terminus of the road. One of the main arguments in favor of Newport News was that it is entirely free from ice, as was fully demonstrated this last winter. A large party of workmen have been employed there for the past three weeks building new wharves, one of which is nearly completed. It is contemplated to build seven wharves, each 125 feet long, and with a depth of water of 27 feet. This will accommodate the largest ocean steamers, and the river front for five miles is under the control of the company, so that these facilities can be extended almost indefinitely as trade may demand. It is also contemplated to put up a large elevator capable of holding over 1,000,000 bushels of grain. The work of extending the road from Richmond to the sea has already been begun, and it is expected to have it completed in time for the Yorktown centennial on the 19th. The road proper will pass within about three miles of Yorktown, to which a branch will be run, thus affording two outlets to deep water. When the road is completed there is a strong probability that a line of steamers will be put on between Newport News and Crisfield, Md., thus making a shorter and direct route from the South and West to New York.

The Street Cleaners Brought to Time.

Persons living in Leonard street east of Centre street say that the piles of ice and filth along there have been accumulating since the middle of last December. That being a densely populated region, a barrel is a scant measure for the refuse of a house, and a good deal of ashes is dropped in the street. John Ott, at 162 Leonard street, has a wheelwright shop in his cellar and a beer saloon on his first floor. He says the pile in front of his door became so high as to cut off his shop from business. He consulted with his son-in-law, Butcher Jacob Halp, at 149, and with his friend, Baker A. H. Hartman, at 151, both of whom were greatly annoyed by the high mud palisade along their curbstone. They sent a joint letter to the Police Commissioners, to the effect that unless the street should be cleaned by the succeeding Monday they would go before the Grand Jury for an indictment of the Board of Health. Right Monday and early last Sunday morning a force appeared on the scene, and by nightfall a considerable clearance had been made. Yesterday the street had been cleared up from Baxter street, but piles of mud and ice remained to be carted away. A force of street cleaners were on Baxter street working north from Leonard street. There is plenty of work for them there.

Leap-Frog at the Battery.

The spring sports among the Battery boatmen and longshoremen in the vicinity of Pier 1 were initiated yesterday afternoon by a game of leap-frog, participated in by about a dozen plyers of the oar, and witnessed by two long lines of applauding spectators.

Next there was produced a big black football. Whizz! It passed over a hundred uplifted hands and sped through the rear of a covered wagon. As the game progressed the crowd increased. There were soon over 200 participants and nearly as many spectators. The only object of the contestants seemed to be to kick the ball as high as possible, but occasionally one would hit it so that the ball bounding before him in the direction of the river. The crowd pressed close upon him, and, giving it a desperate kick, sent it flying into the water. Several of the players dashed on to a coal barge, and, seizing boat hooks, soon had the ball again upon the pier. A larger crowd than ever chased it around in a circle near the Battery. Finally, about 6 o'clock, it was lodged in front of a carriage wheel, and exploded with a mournful thud. Then the game of leap-frog was resumed.

The Fate of the Ship Jamestown.

The steamship Ethiopia of the Anchor line, which on her outward passage rescued the crew of the ship Jamestown, accounts of which have been printed in the English papers, has arrived in this port. She found the Jamestown in a disabled condition in mid-ocean on Feb. 13, seventy days out from St. John, N. B., bound for Liverpool. The Jamestown was lumber laden, and when found was waterlogged. She was built in Richmond, Me., in 1869, was three-decked, of 1,888 tons register, and was owned by James M. Hazen.

Since the Jamestown was abandoned there have been reports that a crew from the Circassia was put aboard of her to take her into port, and that she was taken possession of by the officers of the steamship Codderton a week after her crew were taken off. The officers of the Ethiopia knew nothing concerning the grounds for either report

Friends in Feathers.

A bluebird, a Virginia cardinal, a Baltimore oriole, two song sparrows, two or three snow birds, two canaries, a Brazilian cardinal, and half a dozen varieties of finches and other small birds are living happily together in a single cage in a Sixth avenue drug store. One of the sparrows is sitting in a nest, and is eyed curiously by the other birds, which do not offer to molest her. The bluebird is in full plumage, and sings merrily since he has had glimpses of spring sunshine of late. The Virginia cardinal and the Brazilian cardinal are cousins. The former is of brilliant red color all over, while the Brazilian relative is slate colored, with only a red crest. There are rarely any quarrels between the different species.

Muskrat Hunting in Jersey Meadows.

The New Jersey salt meadows are alive with men and boys in pursuit of muskrats. Last fall an unusually large number of mounds were built in the swamps by these animals, and the appearance of the domiciles led to many predictions of a cold winter, which were abundantly verified. In the recent freshet the water flooded most of the muskrat houses, and the occupants were compelled to take to the meadows for their lives. There they have fallen easy victims to the hunters. Hundreds have been killed in ditches by the roadside between Newark and Elizabeth. The skins bring 18 to 20 cents in the market, and some of the hunters make good wages in the chase.

Progress Toward Citizenship.

Patrick Burnes was arraigned in the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, to answer a charge of intoxication.

"I have only been in this country a month," he said to Justice Patterson.

"You are doing well. Keep on, and you will be a full-fledged citizen in a couple of years. Ten dollars fine."

STEINWAY HALL.—Commencing March 17. Challenge to the World for Apparatus. RIVERSTON'S COLOSSAL MOON. Never but once publicly shown, while being delivered to Riverston at the seaport of Hamburg. Leipzig Illustrated Journal: "It is a wondrous and rare production, colossal in dimensions; its technic execution excites veritable admiration; it exhibits the true aspect of the Moon by telescopic power; the Tycho objects include many new observations since Maedler's times. Viewing it falls little short of a journey to the Moon. We hail the grand and marvellous work, and wish the talent and extraordinary labor of many years may elicit the warmest sympathy and kindest reception."

Most unqualifedly endorsed by Hamburg Nachrichten, Fremden-Blatt, Reform, Court Journal, Cologne Gazette, and a few others.
