WOMEN AT THE CHURCH POLL

WHAT CAME OF REVIVING AN OLD STATUTE IN PORTCHESTER.

Trustee Pond Accused of Securing his Election by the Votes of his Wife and Women Boarders—The Trouble Not Settled.

The trustees of the Presbyterian church in Portchester, although elected on the 24th of February last, did not organize until about ten days ago. The reason for this delay lies in the claim made by some of the congregation that the election was irregular, owing to women having been allowed to vote. Some of the trustees who held over were at first inclined to resign, and the matter has been much discussed.

J. W. Finley, a real estate agent, said on Saturday week: "I was requested to attend the meeting to elect three trustees. I hadn't been to the church regularly, but I thought I would drop in and have a hand in the election. I saw an effort would be made to prevent the reelection of John Miller, Jr. You see Mr. Miller had been trustee for fifteen or twenty years, and he thought he was going to be there forever, and had become arbitrary. There were several ladies present, among them the wife of M. C. Pond and two ladies, Miss Finks and Miss Camp, who board at his house. Surprise was expressed by the old trustees that woman should be present, and when it was proposed that they should vote D. A. Amber made some sneering remarks in opposition. M. C. Pond was elected over John Miller, Jr., and it is claimed that he started the movement in favor of woman's suffrage and got his wife and boarders there to vote. As a matter of fact, Mr. Pond had no idea of running; he was dissatisfied with Mr. Miller's management and wanted another man in his place. When opposition was made to women voting H. T. Smith produced the statute of 1813, which says that any member of a church of full age shall have a right to vote for trustees. There is nothing in the act prohibiting women from voting. There are, I believe, statutes forbidding women to vote in the Dutch Reformed and Episcopal churches; but this is a regular Presbyterian church. It seems to me that the women have worked hard for this church, and that they ought to have a vote at the election of trustees and other officers."

Mr. Raymond, one of the old trustees, who is a butcher, said: "You see it has not been the usage in this church for women to vote. It has been managed heretofore by male members of the congregation, and, as I believe, satisfactorily. This business of women voting was sprung upon the meeting, and it took us all by surprise. I thought of resigning, but I concluded it was best to remain in and to do my utmost to prevent similar occurrences in the future."

T. F. Smith said: "The church has been run all along by a lot of gentlemen among whom the offices have been divided. John Miller, Jr., wanted to have things his own way. He has been a trustee for a long time, and he wanted to be trustee forever. He sent a friend around electioneering for him. When his friend came to me I showed him the statute allowing women to vote at church meetings, and said I was going to get ladies there to vote, so that all talk about the affair being sprung on the meeting is nonsence. Why, as soon as Mr. Miller got wind of what I'd said, he at once set to work to secure the votes of the ladies who boarded at Mr. Pond's house by nominating their brother-in-law for one of the vacancies. He was elected, too, but after he was elected he got up and nominated Mr. Pond. Mr. Miller even got a man down from Connecticut to vote for him, and brought men to the meeting who hadn't been in church for six months. The whole trouble arose from Mr. Miller's wanting to stick. At the meeting I read the law allowing persons of full age to vote. When I came to the words "full age" one of the ladies who had come to vote declined to do so. Mr. Pond had no idea that he would be nominated in Mr. Miller's place. He only wanted to see a new man in the Board. Miller wanted only those to vote who had subscribed a certain amount to the church, and at the meeting he got up and read a list of such persons. But we soon gave him to understand that anybody who contributed to the collection had a right to a vote. The women do most of the work for the church, and they ought to have a voice at meetings."

D. A. Amber, a real estate agent, told the following story: "For years the male members of the church have managed the church affairs satisfactorily, and there has never been a disturbance until the last meeting. Then in came some ladies, among them Mr. Pond's wife and two boarders at his house. He has wanted to be trustee for many years. He wants to be trustee, preacher, chorister, and elder, and perhaps he'll want to be sexton soon. He must want to get the office pretty badly if he brings three persons from his own house to vote for him. Mr. Smith was in favor of Mr. Pond, because he wants Miller's trustee too. Mr. Miller has held the office for fifteen or twenty years, and has attended to his duties most assiduously."

Mr. Pond was found at his shirt factory, near the railroad depot. "I did not originate this movement," he said. "Mr. Smith and Mrs. Montgomery Lyon suggested that women should vote. I was not a candidate, nor did I canvass. Mrs. Pond did not vote for me, as has been insinuated. Mr. Miller is a man of integrity, and has filled his office to the best of his ability. But I don't think his method of procedure was agreeable to us all. He let the church debt accumulate, and then he'd get up concerts and amusements bordering on theatrical at the Public Hall to pay it off. I and my friends would rather pay as we go along. I was surprised to ask Mrs. Pond if she voted for me."

Mr. Pond then took the reporter to his residence on a high hill overlooking Portchester and the Sound, and introduced him to Mrs. Pond, Miss Finks, and Miss Camp. Mrs. Pond said: "I didn't vote for my husband, though I don't see that it would have been improper for me to do so. I'm sure I ought to know better than any one else it he's fit or not to be a trustee. This was not an organized movement; our voting was first suggested by Miss Finks."

"You see," said Miss Finks, who is a school teacher, "we women do the most of the work and contribute more than one-half the money to support the church. Two years ago we were allowed to vote for a minister, and we don't see why we shouldn't vote for trustees and at other elections." Miss Camp gave similar reasons for voting. Trustee Miller is all denied that Mr. Pond had sought the office.

Mrs. Montgomery Lyon lives near the village common. "The insinuations about Mr. Pond," she said, "and the statement that feeling exists here on the subject are false. I don't see why our little village, with our little church, should be dragged into the papers. If the old trustees didn't know that we had a right to vote it isn't our fault. We'll have a right to vote for President pretty soon. When I run for trustee I'll send word to THE SUN. We women do all the work, and why shouldn't we vote?"

John Miller, Jr., is a grocer. He spoke very calmly about the matter. "It is," he said, "against our usage for women to vote, but, of course, this is no legal objection. It was never done in our church until the last meeting, when a man brought down his wife and two boarders to vote for him. There is, of course, a little feeling about the matter among those who think women should not vote."

The church is an unpretentious wooden structure, painted white, and standing on Main street, corner of Church street. Next to it is the parsonage. The pastor, the Rev. W. W. Dowd, declines to take either side of the question.

ROBUST IMAGINATIONS.

Some Very Able Stories Alleged to Have Been Told in Nevada.

From the Carson City Appeal.

Yesterday afternoon, when the lawyers in Justice Cary's court were waiting for the verdict in a petty larceny case, Attorney Soderberg related an incident of his early childhood in Minnesota, illustrative of the peculiar customs in vogue in that State:

"I knew an old farmer there who owned ten acres of timber land where millions of pigeons came each year to roost. They devastated the wheat fields, and the old coon used to catch the birds in nets and thrash them out on the barn floor. Each bird had three ounces of wheat in his crop, and it was a bad year for 'Old Thompson' when he couldn't skip a thousand bushels of wheat to market at $2.60 a bushel, and it ranked A No. 1 when it reached the Chicago elevator. If there had been a few millions more of pigeons he would have come pretty near getting a corner on the Minnesota wheat crop."

"I know a planter down in Alabama," said Kittrell, "who was fully as sharp as that. He trained an alligator to work up and down the river and catch the little picaninnies that played along the bank. The alligator would take the little kids in his jaws and swim back to the plantation. It was a dull day that he couldn't corral three or four. The planter raised 'em carefully, and when they got big sold 'em in New Orleans at prices ranging from three to ten thousand apiece. He was rolling in wealth when Lincoln's emancipation proclamation was issued, and after that the alligator never did any more work. The man is now barely keeping body and soul together in Washington, clerking in one of the Government bureaus at eight thousand a year."

Judge Cary evidenced the greatest interest in these weird tales, and edged up to the group.

"These are curious yarns, gentlemen, but I believe them all. I had a dog once, back in Nebraska, that I kept to herd lumber."

"Beg pardon, Judge; did you say the dog herded lumber?"

"Yes, sir, cottonwood boards. We always kept a dog there to bring the lumber in at night."

Everybody now paid the closest attention, as they knew that the boss was at work.

"It was this way. Cottonwood boards warp like thunder in the sun. A board would begin to hump its back up about nine in the morning, and in half an hour it would turn over. By eleven it would warp the other way with the heat, and make another flop. Each time it turned it moved a couple of feet, always following the sun toward the west. The first summer I lived in Brownville over ten thousand feet of lumber skipped out to the hills the day before I had advertised a house raisin'. I went to the county seat to attend a lawsuit, and when I got back there wasn't a stick of lumber left. It had strayed away into the uplands. An ordinary board would climb a two mile hill during a hot week, and when it struck the timber it would keep wormin' in and out among the trees like a garter snake. Every farmer in the State had to keep shepherd dogs to follow his lumber around the country, keep it together, and show where it was in the morning. We didn't need any flumes there for lumber. We sawed it east of the place we wanted to use it, and let it warp itself to its destination, with men and dogs to head it off at the right time, we never lost a stick. Well, here comes the jury," continued the Judge. "The witnesses lied so I guess they will disagree."
