DR. KON CIBULKA'S VISITOR.

DEMANDING WITH PISTOL IN HAND HIS NAME ON A DEATH CERTIFICATE.

A Brother's Fear that the Doctors would Mutilate his Sister's Body—Arrested on the Complaint of the Doctor and Held for Trial.

Mary Daily died in Yonkers last Sunday night of consumption. She had been sick for a long time and had been attended by Drs. Benedict Pike and Cibulka. Her mother is a widow, and others of her children have died of the same disease. As the young woman's condition was hopeless, her medical attendance was desultory. There is no doubt that Dr. Kon Clemens Cibulka was the last physician who attended her, but whether he saw her a few days before her death or at a more remote period is a matter of dispute.

Undertaker Edward Connell of Yonkers was engaged to attend to the burial. He went to Dr. Kon Clemens Cibulka to get a certificate of death, so that he could get a burial permit from Health Officer Brown. On Monday the undertaker notified the family that Dr. Kon Clemens Cibulka had refused to sign the certificate of death, on the ground that he had not attended the young woman within thirty-six hours. The Doctor said that he was prohibited by law from granting a certificate under the circumstances.

The family were indignant at this news, and especially at the announcement by Undertaker Connell that unless a certificate was procured the Coroner would be obliged to hold an inquest. The matter was discussed at the wake, which was held on Monday night. It was urged that the cause of the girl's death was well known; that her incurable disease had been a subject of common conversation in Yonkers, and that it was a shame for the Doctor not to give a certificate.

John Daily, a brother of the dead girl, a stout blacksmith of 30 years, who works in this city, was especially indignant. He seemed to regard it as a reflection on the family that an inquest should be thought of. To him it seemed an imputation that his sister had not received proper medical attendance. Mrs. Daily was excited, and she said that she would not permit any doctors to cut up the body. She looked upon it as a scheme of the doctors to get the body for dissection, and declared that she would resist them to the utmost of her strength. Various methods of compelling Dr. Kon Clemens Cibulka to grant a certificate were canvassed at the wake; but John Daily assured his mother that she need not be alarmed, for he would find means to compel the signing of the certificate.

On Tuesday morning John placed his brother on guard over the body while he went off to prevent the holding of an inquest. He first applied to Dr. Pike, but was assured that, as Dr. Kon Clemens Cibulka was the last physician who attended Mary, he was the person by law required to sign the certificate. John then went to the home of Dr. Kon Clemens Cibulka, in Hudson street. He rang the bell, and was ushered into the Doctor's office. Almost immediately afterward a telegraph messenger rang the bell to deliver a message to the Doctor. The message was taken by little Mattie Fuller, a child of 8, living in the house, who went to the Doctor's room to get the boy's book signed. As soon as she entered the room she said that she was aroused by her piercing screams. Persons who hastened to the door of the Doctor's room heard the voices of men inside, and Dr. Kon Clemens Cibulka said several times:

"Would you shoot me? Would you shoot me?"

Then the door was flung open suddenly and John Daily rushed out, pulled away from Mr. Pilson, one of the inmates of the house, who tried to grab him, and nearly knocked down the telegraph boy in his flight to the street.

Dr. Kon Clemens Cibulka was greatly frightened. He was wet with perspiration. He is a medium-sized man, has a wooden leg, and is far from being physically equal to the athletic blacksmith. He said he was sitting in his office when John Daily rushed in, wildly flourishing the certificate of death and shouting:

"I tell you, sign that paper or I will blow your brains out."

"I cannot sign it; I am forbidden by law to sign it," cried the Doctor.

"Sign it, I tell you, or I will shoot your brains out," shouted John Daily.

"I tell you I shall be fined $25 if I sign it," the Doctor persisted.

Mattie Fuller says that Daily pointed the pistol straight at the Doctor's head and kept saying, "Sign the paper."

Dr. Kon Clemens Cibulka made a complaint to Capt. Mangin of the Yonkers police, who detailed Policeman Wm. Carroll to hunt up John Daily and arrest him. John was arraigned before Judge Ellis, who held him in $1,000 bail to answer at the next term of the court in White Plains. The prisoner got bail in time to attend the funeral. He quieted his mother by telling her that he was all out of his trouble.

The certificate of death was finally signed by Dr. Pike after consultation with Health Officer Dr. Brown. It appears that Dr. Kon Clemens Cibulka was in error. Dr. Brown says that the law distinctly permits the physician who is attending a case of lingering disease, like consumption, to give his certificate although he may not have attended the patient for some time. Knowing the circumstances of this case, and having no doubt that the young woman died of consumption, he concluded to accept Dr. Pike's certificate and grant the burial permit on that, although Dr. Pike had not visited her since February.

John Daily represented to Dr. Pike that Dr. Cibulka refused to give the certificate unless he was paid $25, but Dr. Cibulka avers that the money was mentioned as the fine that he believed he would incur by signing the certificate.

At Dr. Cibulka's residence the inmates said that about a month ago Mrs. Daily called and gave the Doctor a scolding because he refused to attend her daughter further. The Doctor has a certificate to practise founded on an examination before the New York County Medical Society. He has been practising in Yonkers for about two months.

POLYGAMY AND DIVORCE.

Two Questions that Agitate the Members of the Newark Conference.

The twenty-fourth annual session of the Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church convened on Wednesday morning in St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, in Third street, Jersey City. Bishop Harris presided. Many of the preachers were late. They entered carrying their satchels in their hands, their umbrellas tucked under their arms. The roll was called by the Rev. James Fitzgerald, who for many years has acted as Secretary of the Conference. The Rev. Mr. Dodd was elected Secretary to succeed Mr. Fitzgerald, who declined a reelection. The usual committees were then appointed.

The venerable Dr. Porter, the oldest minister in the Conference, then arose. He wears a fringe of long white hair around a bald spot on the top of his head. He said he desired to direct the attention of the Conference as a Christian body to a great and absorbing question of public morality. He alluded to polygamy, a terrible evil which was being permitted to stalk abroad with impunity in the most populous Territory of the Union. He moved that a committee of five be appointed to consider the subject and report appropriate recommendations in reference to it. The motion was passed.

The Rev. Mr. Daniels said that while he agreed with Dr. Porter as to the necessity of abolishing polygamy, there was another matter that he deemed almost equally dangerous to public morals, and which he desired to have referred to the same committee.

"I mean," he said, "the looseness that prevails in many States on the subject of divorce, by which the marriage relation is so easily severed for other causes than that taught by our Lord Himself."

Dr. Porter objected to his committee taking the existing laws of divorce into consideration, as the two abuses complained of differed in their nature. A special committee consisting of Messrs. Daniels, J. H. Daily, A. M. Harris, and W. H. Haggerty was accordingly appointed to consider the divorce question.

The Value of Expert Testimony.

In the Whittaker court martial yesterday Mr. Chamberlain, the colored cadet's lawyer, put Henry D. Hyde, a Boston lawyer, on the stand to show that Expert Southworth's opinion as to handwriting was not of any weight. Mr. Hyde said that when he was Assistant United States Attorney he had a case of a forged certificate to investigate. Southworth examined writings submitted to him in the case, and at the end of a month reported that they were all written by the same person. Southworth was so positive that he said were he a juryman he would hang a man on such evidence. Mr. Hyde told Southworth that there was the writing of two persons in the lot. The expert made another examination and found the different specimens. He was then told there was the writing of a third person in the lot, and after a third examination he found that too.

On another occasion Mr. Hyde was defending Spence Pettis on a charge of forgery, and Southworth was a prosecuting witness. The latter testified that four or a package of five letters handed to him by Mr. Hyde were in Pettis's handwriting. As a matter of fact, Mr. Hyde said, one letter was written by a Boston merchant, another by the President of an insurance company, and a third was written by Mr. Hyde. The fifth letter, about which Mr. Southworth was in doubt, was written by Pettis. Pettis was discharged.

In answer to a question from the Court, Mr. Hyde said: "Mr. Southworth is a man well known in Boston, and he is not regarded as a man who would knowingly make a false statement. But he has become a monomaniac on the subject of the identification of handwriting, and claims to be able to do a good deal more than he can do. I should not attach any importance to his testimony beyond what I could see for myself when pointed out to me. I should not believe him any further than that."

An Elephant's Fall.

One of the twenty elephants of the Barnum-London Shows fell through the flooring in the menagerie yesterday morning, and went half way down an excavation that was made some years ago to aid in producing spectacular effects.

POST OFFICE CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. Pearson Removes Several Heads of Departments and Makes Other Changes.

Henry G. Pearson qualified as Postmaster yesterday, his bondsmen being Abram J. Dittenhoefer, William S. Opdyke, John J. Murphy, Daniel C. Birdsall, Gustav Schwab, Hugh J. Hastings, William H. Guion, and Charles L. Tiffany. They gave a bond for $400,000, justifying in double the sum. The bond was forwarded to Washington. After qualifying, Postmaster Pearson announced a number of removals, transfers, and promotions in the staff of the Post Office. He removed officers Dwight A. Lawrence, Superintendent of the Foreign Department, which division is abolished and consolidated as the Foreign Branch of the Third Division; Thomas R. Bannerman, Inspector of Branches, and recently Secretary of the Postmaster; Col. George F. Hopper, Night Superintendent, the position being abolished, and John H. Furdy, Superintendent of the Missing Letter and Inquiry Department.

Mr. Lawrence is a particular friend of Roscoe Conkling and Gov. Alonzo B. Cornell. He has been in the Post Office about seven years. Mr. Bannerman is an appointee of ex-Collector Thomas Murphy. He has been in the Post Office ten years. Col. Hopper has been an official twelve years. Mr. Furdy has been employed in the Post Office from boyhood.

The only explanation of the removals was that some of the superintendents had for a long time neglected their duties at the Post Office to attend to primary elections and to manipulate political nominating conventions. Their conduct did not commend itself to the new Postmaster's views on reform in the Government civil service.

Other removals made were Charles A. Adams, chief clerk of records; Henry J. Lee, clerk in the Auditor's Division; William S. O'Brien, Superintendent of the Unpaid Department, and H. Fitzgerald, mailing clerk in the Newspaper Department. The following promotions and transfers were made: James Gaylor, late General Superintendent of City Delivery, to be Assistant Postmaster; Anthony Yeoman, late General Superintendent of Mailing and Distribution Division, to be Inspector of Branches; E. P. Jones, late Assistant Superintendent of Inquiry and Dead Letter Office, to be Superintendent of the same department; Haughwout Howe, late Secretary to the Assistant Postmaster, to be Secretary to the Postmaster; Jere M. Wood, late Clerk to Secretary, to be Appointment Clerk; Edward S. Post, late Head Clerk of Records, to be Chief Clerk of Records; William H. Wareing, late Assistant General Superintendent of Mailing and Distribution Division, to be General Superintendent of the same division; John Richards, late Superintendent of General Post Office District Delivery, to be General Superintendent of City Delivery; Samuel Bowen, late Superintendent of Carriers' General Post Office District, to be Superintendent of General Post Office District Delivery; Charles D. Conklin, late Chief Clerk of Carriers' General Post Office District, to be Assistant Superintendent of same; Edward A. Landers, late Assistant Superintendent of Unpaid Department, to be Superintendent of same department.

Mr. Yeomans has been in the Post Office thirty-one years. Timothy Griffin, the late Secretary of the Postmaster, is transferred to the Post Office Department at Washington.

Postmaster Pearson issued an address to the officers and employees of the office, in which he said that it was not his intention to depart from the principles which had governed his honored predecessor with respect to appointments, promotions, and removals.

Postmaster-General James arrived from Washington late in the afternoon, and conferred with Postmaster Pearson concerning the changes.

DR. HAMMOND'S TESTS.

Expert Medical Testimony in the Trial of Mrs. Deputy's Lawsuit.

In Mrs. Henrietta Deputy's suit in the Brooklyn City Court for $25,000 damages against ex-City Works Commissioner W. H. Hazzard for alleged assault and battery, Dr. Bronson, one of the physicians who called to see Mrs. Deputy after the assault, testified that she was injured so that she would not recover.

Dr. William A. Hammond testified that he saw Mrs. Deputy for the first time yesterday morning, and that he had come straight from her bedside to the court room. After learning the history of the accident, and her physical history, Dr. Hammond said he began his personal tests, first covering her face with a piece of thick wrapping paper so that she could not see what he was doing. He first tested the sensibility of her hands and arms with an instrument made for the purpose, and he discovered that she could not tell whether pressure was exerted or not. Above the knee she gave evidence of slight sensibility, but below it she felt nothing. He applied a hot brass match to the sole of her foot, and held it there long enough to discolor the skin. She said that he was touching her, but gave no evidence of pain, adding that she felt cold. He made various other tests.

"From your examination, what do you conclude that she is suffering from?"

Dr. Hammond—Her symptoms are not those of hysteria. She is suffering in two centres, either from congestion or myelitis. One is the precursor of the other, and it is difficult to distinguish between them. I do not think that her recovery is probable. Even if her back was cured to-day by a miracle, she could not walk.

Dr. Hammond was cross-examined all the afternoon by Gen. B. F. Tracy.

Opening the Base Ball Season.

The professional base ball season is to be opened to-morrow in this city by a match at the Polo grounds, between the newly organized Metropolitan Club and the Jasper nine of Manhattan College. The game is to be the first of a series of twenty odd matches, to be played at the Polo grounds in April, between the Metropolitan team and five of the eight League championship teams, not including those of Yale and Princeton Colleges. The Metropolitan nine in the match on Saturday will consist of James Dorcan, catcher; Daly, the noted one-armed player, pitcher; Esterbrook, Brady, and Muldoon at the three bases; Jennings, a short stop, and Kennedy, Clinton, and Poorman in the out field, the latter being the other pitcher of the team. The field has been improved since last season, and a new grand stand has been erected. The following games are to be played:

April 2—Metropolitan vs. Jasper of Manhattan College.
April 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9—Metropolitan vs. Detroit.
April 11, 12, and 13—Metropolitan vs. Worcester.
April 15—Metropolitan vs. Yale College.
April 18, 19, and 20—Metropolitan vs. Princeton College.
April 23, 25, 26, and 27—Metropolitan vs. Providence.
April 28, 29, and 30—Metropolitan vs. Boston.

The Sunday Beer Question in Astoria.

The residents of Long Island City are watching with interest the proceedings of two conflicting organizations that have recently sprung into existence in Astoria. One is called the "Law and Order Society," and has for its President Mr. F. H. Wolcott. The other has not yet effected a permanent organization, but it has held a meeting and declared itself opposed to the actions of the Law and Order Society. Not, it says, that it is averse to law and order, but that it wants its beer on Sunday, and deprecates any efforts to close the lager beer saloons on that day. Some two weeks ago the Law and Order Society met in Crowther's Hall and adopted a constitution that promised dull and quiet Sundays in Long Island City for the future. The opposition society met in Koch's Hall on Monday. Mr. Christian Borbeck, the President of the Long Island City Turnverein, presided. Resolutions were passed strongly protesting against the proceedings of the Law and Order Society, and these were sent to the Mayor and Police Commissioners and the President of the Law and Order Society. The "Boycotting" of the members of the Law and Order Society and its supporters was talked of.

The Man Under the Bed.

James P. Hagan, 27 years old, of 463 West Forty-second street, was accused in the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday of breaking into the room of Charles Miller, who lives in the second flat at 237 West Thirty-ninth street. At 2½ A. M. yesterday, Miller said, he awoke and saw a man's head projecting from beneath his bed. He ran to a neighboring room and, borrowing a revolver, unchanged it. At the same time calling for help. The man came from beneath the bed and ran around the room. Miller discharged the pistol out of the front window and called "Police." The man jumped through a window leading to the hallway. He was arrested on the stairs by Policeman Trizony, who had heard the pistol shots. In the Thirty-seventh street station he gave his name as James P. Hagan. He said he had been drinking, and had mistaken the room for the apartment of his cousin in the story above. He was held for examination.

Col. Ross's Body Cremated.

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 31.—The remains of Col. I. N. Ross of Holden, Mass, arrived here at noon today, and were at once borne to the crematory and incinerated. Col. Ross was 56 years of age, 6 feet 2 inches in height, and weighed 240 pounds. He was a native of New Hampshire, but afterwards moved to Ohio, where he was at one time a member of the State Senate. In the late war he was Colonel of the Nineteenth Ohio Volunteers. He leaves a wife and two daughters. The ashes will be taken to the widow.

Jewelry Robbery.

PHILADELPHIA, March 31.—Yesterday morning two men entered the jewelry store of Joseph K. Davidson, 929 Chestnut street, and one of them asked to have a diamond ring, which he had bought several days ago, exchanged. After the departure of the men it was discovered that they had taken a tin box containing between $3,000 and $4,000 worth of diamonds, sapphires, and other precious stones, and left in its place a duplicate box.

Twenty-five Men Injured by a Collision.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, March 31.—A construction train ran into a west-bound freight train on the Rock Island road, near Walnut, in this county, today, demolishing the cars of the former, including the caboose. In the latter were twenty-five emigrants, all of whom were more or less injured, and several probably fatally. The accident was the result of a failure of an operator to place signals for the freight train to stop at Walnut.

Sale of Jay Cooke & Co.'s Estate.

PHILADELPHIA, March 31.—The sale by auction of stocks bonds, Western lands, and other real estate belonging to the estate of Jay Cooke & Co. was resumed today. The catalogue embodies all the property not previously disposed of, and about $30,000 was realized. The sale will be continued to-morrow.

THE SEAWANHAKA'S INSPECTORS.

Passengers Testifying that there was Lack of Boats and Life Preservers.

The trial of Austin Jayne and John K. Matthews, United States Inspectors of Steam Vessels, was resumed before Judge Benedict yesterday. Assistant District Attorney Fiero called George W. Skidmore, who said that he had travelled on the Seawanhaka for fourteen years, more or less, between New York and Great Neck, Long Island, where he lives. He was on board, with his brother, who lost his life, on the day of the disaster. The first he knew of the disaster was a sound like a heavy box turning over. He looked back and saw smoke and fire bursting out around the engine room. He started forward to find a life preserver, but could not discover any. There was no life raft that he could observe, and only two lifeboats.

Judge Benedict (to Mr. Fiero)—You haven't put in the regulations. How many lifeboats do you claim the vessel should have had?

Mr. Fiero—We claim that there should have been six lifeboats on board.

Gen. Foster, for the defendants—That's a question, and it is continent on the number of passengers carried and whether the boat was a Sound or river boat.

Witness said that the wooden lifeboat that he saw was capable of carrying fifteen passengers with safety. The boat was on the starboard quarter. He never knew of new lifeboats being put on the Seawanhaka.

Lawrence P. Decker, who owns boats at the foot of 115th street, East River, saw a wooden boat on the evening of the disaster which contained some of the crew of the Seawanhaka, and which he supposed was the Seawanhaka's lifeboat. A lifeboat half filled with water and containing three men came to his float.

Several passengers on the Seawanhaka were called to show the difficulty in getting life preservers at the time of the fire.

Charles Spiro, a lawyer, was a passenger in the Seawanhaka on the 28th of June, with his friend, Joseph L. Stein. They were on the upper forward deck on the left-hand side. Mr. Spiro said the first thing noticed was the passengers rising up all around him. He looked back and saw the centre of the boat on fire. He called to his friend, but got no answer, and did not see him afterward. He ran aft. He looked for life preservers. A number of persons were in the water without any. He saw only two or three life preservers either in the water or on the boat. He saw one boat in the water on fire. He stopped to examine the wooden lifeboat on the Seawanhaka about a week before the disaster, and observed a seam or hole in the bottom.

By Gen. Foster—Have you sufficient knowledge of boats to tell whether the boat was flush or clinker built?

Witness—No, sir. The seam was at the fourth board from the keel, and about eighteen or twenty inches from the gunwales.

Assistant District Attorney Fiero offered in evidence the official rules and regulations for the inspection of steam vessels, and then announced that he rested his case for the prosecution. The defence will open to-day.

J. & C. Johnston's Opening.

The severe rain storm of the day before only brought out the larger number of ladies to the openings yesterday. Before noon J. & C. Johnston's store on Broadway, Fifth avenue, and Twenty-second street was thronged with the beauty and fashion of the city, who came to see the wonderful costumes of Dusugean, the rising rival of Worth in Paris. Many charming confections from this artist, from Worth, Pingat, and other Parisians, were on exhibition alongside the productions of the artists of the house. The prices of these suits are very reasonable, considering the fineness, variety, and beauty of the materials used in their construction. Ombre effects, shirred draperies, and jet, steel, gold, and silver embroideries, and fabrics and fringes, were the marked features of the dress department. The wraps of this house are in original and unique forms, showing an individuality that distinguishes all the garments made in the house. The millinery display was very interesting, displaying the extremes in large and small as well as medium sized bonnets, and these in all the variety of shapes demanded by fashion at the moment.

In the carpet rooms are seen fine specimens of those wondrous Eastern rugs and carpets of which this house makes a specialty. Agents have been sent to Asia Minor, Persia, and India every year to make selections of additions to this already remarkable collection of Oriental carpets.

Stern Brothers.

The exposition in the house of Stern Brothers is unusually fine this spring. At the opening yesterday the raiest and most attractive novelties were displayed in every department. At the trimming counter was seen tablets for dresses, composed entirely of network of beads and fringed with the same. These are in gold, steel, silver, and jet beads. Accompanying them are bead embroideries in bands, and flower and figure patterns to match, intended to trim the corsage, sleeves, and back draperies. There are also embroideries in silk in colors, roses, aglantine, and other designs that can be bought in any quantity and used in trimming costumes, evening toilets, fichus, or any fancy article of dress desired. In the suit room is the second story the display of costumes, including those for morning, afternoon, and garden party dresses, and dresses for all occasions was immense and bewildering. "Who will buy and wear all these wonderful and costly robes?" is the question that suggests itself to every observer. Still they sell with astonishing rapidity, showing how inexhaustible are the purses of the wealthy women of New York. Several of Worth's styles were on exhibition, and it is evident that the great Parisian dress artist exerts himself for the house of Stern Brothers. In every department interesting, cheap, and beautiful goods are seen. The opening is well worth a visit. It will be continued to-day and to-morrow.

Altman's Spring Styles.

The spring styles of this house were shown to a select number of ladies on Monday last. The suits, of which there were a great variety, including carriage, street, reception, evening toilets, and 5 o'clock tea gowns, were exhibited by the salesladies, who are fine, well-formed women, carrying themselves with ease, doing the garments and walking to and fro in the large, well-lighted parlors, which is the level floor. The ladies sat on sofas studying the effect of each costume, robe, tea gown, or garden party dress as shown by the wearer, with grace and aplomb.

The great success of the house is based on the increasing beauty, tastefulness, fineness, and style of their goods and garments as shown from season to season.

More Room for Coogan Bros.

Coogan Brothers, the dealers in carpets and furniture, who now occupy four stores in the Bowery, near Grand street, have begun to extend two of their stores, 121 and 123 Bowery, through to Chrystie street. This will enable the firm to move their large loads of goods from Chrystie street, and allow their customers to enter without obstruction from the Bowery. The firm now employ, directly and indirectly, nearly 2,000 men. They have eighteen floors, which are inadequate to the display of all their wares. The new arrangement will give them better show rooms for the exhibition of their many new styles of furniture and carpets. Their trade is at present unusually active.
