MRS. CORA WALKER'S SUIT.

Abandoning Psychometry in Boston to Marry Herself by an Oath in New York.

The suit of Cora L. Walker against William P. Chesley to recover $200 has been on trial for three court days in Justice Langbein's civil court in Yorkville. The woman is the Mrs. Walker who testified in the Theophilus Youngs case the other day. She is attractive, and dresses richly. The defendant is a member of a well-known building firm. Mrs. Walker testified that in December last she went to live at 318 West Fifty-ninth street, and that Mr. Chesley was to pay her $100 a month for rooms and his board. He quitted the house in the latter part of March, she testified, and has failed to pay her $200 for April and May.

In the course of her cross-examination the plaintiff testified that she did not know where she was born. She was married when about 14 or 15 years old to a man named Walker. She was not sure what his given name was, but she thought it was George. They lived together about two years, and then they separated because she was tired of supporting him with money she had received from her grandmother. She first met Mr. Chesley in Boston, where she was giving psychometrical readings under the name of Cora L. B. Hayward. She first knew Mr. Chesley as William P. Haskell. She testified that she came from Boston to this city with Mr. Chesley about six years ago, and that in the New York Hotel she took an oath to be his wife, and he took an oath to be her husband. She believed an oath more binding than any religious ceremony; but still she did not now want to recognize the defendant as her husband.

The woman testified: "Five years ago last October Mr. Chesley shot me. We were then living on Sixth avenue, and had a row. It was on account of a letter I found revealing the fact that he had a wife in Boston."

"Where is that letter?"

"I burned it, the same as I burned all the rest of his letters, to shield him. The letter was signed his 'dear wife.' I told him I was going to leave that night because he was not divorced from his wife, as I had supposed he was. If I went, he said, I'd leave a dead woman. After some words he shot me three times. He shot me near the heart. Next morning he fell on his knees before me imploring forgiveness, with his whiskers off. Then he suddenly hurried away. I was attended by Surgeons Fleming, McClelland, Powers, and Liddell, who told me I had but a few days to live. I told them I shot myself, in order to shield the man who did it. I first saw him after the shooting at 25 Converse street, Boston. I told him I wanted him to go back to his wife. He threatened to shoot me again. I immediately came back to New York."

When asked whether she inserted in a newspaper an advertisement reading, "Lady psychometer and psychologist, 1,263 Broadway; mining stocks a specialty," she replied that a friend inserted the advertisement.

"What did 'mining stocks a specialty' mean?" she was asked.

"It meant that I undertook to give people points in mining stocks."

"Do you take money for such information?"

"I do the same as you do." [Laughter.]

"Do you know anything about stocks?"

"I don't think that has anything to do with the case."

Being told to answer, she said: "I have done little in that way. I have been too busy with my psychometrical readings."

"What is psychometry?"

"Psychometry is getting at the soul of a thing. It draws conclusions by comparisons. That is the best definition I can give of it."

"What do you mean by a comparison?"

"I give a reading the same as a phrenologist, but I don't go feeling over all the little bumps on their heads. I just look at them, and tell them all the same. As to stocks, parties ask me what stocks are best to buy, and I tell them."

"Can you name a stock?"

"Well, I might say Silver Cliff, for instance is going down, or Little Pittsburgh gone up, and so on."

"Where is Silver Cliff?"

"In Colorado."

"Who is the President of the company?"

"I don't know."

"What is the capital of Silver Cliff?"

"If I had supposed you were going to ask me those questions I would have been prepared to answer them."

She was interrogated as to her evidence on the Theophilus Youngs identification case, where she testified on behalf of Mrs. Youngs that the man claiming to be Theophilus Youngs, the husband, was not such. She was asked how she could say so, being "nearly blind," as she said she was. She replied that the man was very close to her, and she formed her judgment rather by his clothing and voice than by appearance.

Justice Langbein has under consideration a motion to dismiss the suit.

A MYSTERY OF THE SEA.

Bodies Washed Ashore, Followed by a Letter in a Can Telling of Disaster.

At intervals during the past two months large quantities of wreckage and three bodies have been washed ashore on Rockaway Beach, between the new hotel and Long Tom's Point. None of the bodies, which were apparently those of seamen, was identified, and they were buried on the beach. It was thought by many that they came from the bark Ajace, wrecked on Rockaway Shoals, but old beachmen say that this is impossible, as the bodies would have been washed ashore at Coney Island. Others are of the opinion that the bodies and wreckage came from the wreck of an unknown bark that is believed to have foundered off the point on the same day as the Ajace. On the day that the Ajace was wrecked, the crew of Life Saving Station No. 36 assert that there was a bark in company with her when she passed the station. A dense fog shortly afterward obscured both vessels, and when it lifted neither was to be seen.

On Tuesday Abraham Hamer, a watchman in the employ of the Rockaway Beach Improvement Company, found on the beach, near the point, a quantity of wreckage and a tin can, tightly sealed. Two bottles were fastened to the can to keep it afloat. The can was opened, and found to contain a piece of paper on which the following was written:

SHIP EMMA H. BIRDSALL, March 10, 1880.

We have been experiencing severe weather since the 1st of March, and it still continues to storm. We have been under our storm trysails ever since the 1st. To-day she has sprung a leak, and we cannot keep her free, and it is so rough we cannot launch our boats. The men are all beastly drunk, and we cannot get any work out of them. It is a very bad look for us, as the sea is breaking over the ship. There is but five of us left out of eighteen men; it is a bad look for the rest of us. I will not have time to say much more. If any of my friends get this they may know me, for I used to live at Patchogue, on Long Island. My name is George Bane.

A search in Patchogue failed to discover any one who knew George Bane.

TRIAL OF A BANKRUPT JEWELLER.

A General Sessions Jury Investigating the Transactions of Post & Speir.

Eugene E. Post, son of the President of a Newburgh bank, was to have been tried in General Sessions on Wednesday on a charge of obtaining by false pretences, on March 3, 1878, two pairs of bracelets, valued at $145, from William H. Ball of 9 John st. Post, who was out on bail, did not answer when his name was called, and his counsel, William A. Beach and John Hill, said he was ill in Goshen. Assistant District Attorney Lyon said he had his doubts about the seriousness of Post's illness, and obtained a bench warrant for his arrest. Mr. Hill telegraphed to Post to come to the city, and Detective Field arrested him on his arrival Wednesday night, and took him to the Police Central Office. Yesterday Post was arraigned and the trial began. Post, Mr. Lyon told the jury, was a member of the firm of Post & Speir, manufacturing jewelers, in John street, and got the bracelets from Mr. Ball by representing that the jewelry firm had been increased from $15,000 to $200,000, and that it had $18,000 in good outstanding accounts. Seven days later the firm failed, with $50,000 liabilities and $15,000 nominal assets. It was apparent, Mr. Lyon said, that the firm had bought $20,000 worth of jewelry in March, and made sales to this amount in the same month to a many-named firm, which had been in the jewelry business in Baltimore, but was a bankrupt, on Post's four months' notes, with the privilege of renewal. The notes were deposited in Post's father's bank, and not passed over to the creditors. The only witness called yesterday was Mr. Ball, who substantiated part of Mr. Lyon's statement.

The Demands of Ohio Temperance Men.

COLUMBUS, May 19.—A People's Temperance Reform Convention to-day adopted resolutions that the temperance people will not support any member of the late General Assembly who sided in the defeat of the Local Option bill; that they will not support an administration officer who is capable of using his influence against the enactment of laws which can only serve the public good; that they will not support again any state officer who sided in the defeat of the Local Option bill, if, although the next election is of great importance, for the reason that the next Legislature will redistrict the state, yet the temperance men will be drawn in favor of those men who will support temperance laws; that the State Convention should be so modified as to empower the General Assembly to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors; that it is the duty of the temperance advocates to attend all primary meetings of both political parties, and see that sober temperance men are sent to the state and county Conventions; that if the great political parties fail to nominate candidates who are in favor of temperance, a convention will be called to nominate a State Temperance ticket; that the co-operation of the National Women's Temperance Union be asked to aid in the work.

The Father of Fast Postal Service.

CHICAGO, May 19.—The unveiling of the memorial monument of the late George B. Armstrong, the organizer of the United States Postal Railroad Service, took place to-day. Ex-Vice-President Schuyler Colfax was the orator. The monument consists of a bronze bust of Mr. Armstrong, of heroic size, on a granite pedestal eight feet high and four feet square.

Two Men Missing.

BOSTON, May 19.—Joseph Andrews, aged 31, and John Fritsher, aged 18, are reported as missing from their homes at East Boston since 2 o'clock on Monday morning last. They went out for a drive in a dory, in the direction of long Island, Boston harbor, since which time one has been heard of them.

MRS. MORGAN'S SUIT FOR $25,000.

Her Former Attorney Says Dr. Sayre Called it Blackmail—A Motion Twice Denied.

Mrs. Annie Morgan went to the witness stand for a few minutes yesterday for the last time in her suit before Judge Lawrence against Dr. Lewis Hall Sayre to recover $25,000, on account of her alleged poisoning by an excessive dose of nux vomica, which she says was prescribed by Dr. Sayre. Mrs. Morgan testified that she sent James, a servant, for the medicine, but did not receive it from his hands; she merely found the box of pills on the table in her room, and no other box of pills was in the room at the time.

Lawyer Meyer M. Friend of 3 Broad street testified that in 1879, when Mrs. Morgan suffered from the alleged poisoning, he was her lawyer. In the course of his testimony he said that Dr. Sayre had pronounced Mrs. Morgan's charge an attempt to blackmail him. At Mrs. Morgan's request he wrote on April 19, 1871, to Dr. Sayre, saying:

I have been informed by Mrs. Annie Morgan of circumstances in consequence of which she has sustained injuries, and for which it seems you are responsible. I desire to inquire in reference thereto, and deem it proper to inform you as above. If you consent that an interview is desirable, I should be glad to have you call in the afternoon, between 2 and 5, any day before Thursday. I trust some definite answer will be received by that time.

A few days after this letter was sent, the witness continued, he found Dr. Sayre and his father waiting in the ante-room of his law office when he came down town.

"What is this about Mrs. Morgan?" said the elder Dr. Sayre.

Mr. Friend replied that she had taken four pills on Dr. Sayre's prescription, and that they had caused her a great deal of suffering. Dr. L. H. Sayre, the defendant, said it was all a mistake, and that Mrs. Morgan's sickness did not arise from the prescription. He said also that he had prescribed two nux vomica pills, not four. The witness took from his pocket a copy of the prescription shown in court, and both physicians looked at it. They said that it didn't amount to much. The elder Dr. Sayre slapped his hand violently on the desk and said: "If my son takes my advice she won't get a single penny."

On May 17, 1879, Mr. Friend wrote to Dr. L. H. Sayre as follows:

In accordance with what I informed you at our meeting here, I have had a conference with Mrs. Morgan and informed her of such facts as you have communicated to me. Mrs. Morgan is determined to go on, feeling assured of the justice of her claim. You can avoid possible annoyance by informing me of your attorney's address, upon whom I may serve papers. I regret this step is necessary, having hoped the matter might have been arranged without law proceedings.

Dr. Sayre on May 21 replied, naming his attorney.

"Why didn't the case go to trial?" asked Mr. Van Wyck.

"Because," replied Lawyer Friend, "I thought that Mrs. Morgan was a lady of accomplishment and could get into better business than attending lawsuits. Furthermore, I did not think that Dr. Sayre could be held responsible for damages."

After Mr. Frank Dupignac had rested for the plaintiff, Judge Lawrence denied a motion for a non-suit, made chiefly on the ground that the defendant had not been left under responsibility by the testimony. Judge Lawrence said that as the case now stands there is some slight evidence, perhaps not to be believed by the jury, but enough to take the case to a jury.

Then Mr. Van Wyck moved to appoint a referee, before whom the plaintiff should be examined by reputable physicians appointed by Judge Lawrence. Mr. Dupignac handed Judge Lawrence an absolute denial by Judge Donohue of a similar motion recently made in the same case. "But," said Mr. Van Wyck, "in a conversation with Judge Donohue, afterward, I—"

"I want you to stop right there," interrupted Judge Lawrence; "here is Judge Donohue's full and absolute denial, and according to law it requires three Judges to review it; one cannot do it. The motion is denied."

HIS HONOR AND THE DETECTIVE.

Justice Otterbourg Refusing to Release Two Prisoners on the Latter's Assurance.

George Miller and John Gordon were arraigned before Justice Otterbourg in the Tombs Police Court on Tuesday morning by Policeman Wilbur and Detective James Oates of the New street police. Wilbur told the magistrate that the prisoners were found in the morning in the business block at 125 Pearl street by the janitress, Louise O'Neil.

"There is no evidence against them, your Honor," said Detective Oates, stepping forward.

"Who says so?" indignantly asked the magistrate. "Where is Mrs. O'Neil? I am the judge to decide whether there is evidence or not."

"She is not here," said Oates.

"Then I remand these men," the Justice said, "until she can be produced."

In the afternoon Mrs. O'Neil was present, and Justice Otterbourg learned that another man was found in the building, but was not arrested.

Yesterday morning Justice Otterbourg heard Mrs. O'Neil's testimony. She said that a little before 7 o'clock on Tuesday morning she found three men on the second landing, and saw that the door of an office had been broken open. She asked the men what they wanted, and one of them said he was looking for "Murray Lilmar." No such person had an office there, and she went down stairs, locked the front door, and told Policeman Wilbur. As Wilbur was arresting the men, Detective Oates came in. He seemed to know the men, for he addressed them familiarly. One of them was allowed to go. She afterward found that robberies had been committed in the offices of John R. Barrett and G. W. Camper.

Both these gentlemen were in court, and made affidavits to the effect that their offices had been broken open and robbed.

Justice Otterbourg held the prisoners for further examination on Wednesday next.

Killing his Family and Himself.

TERRE HAUTE, May 19.—In Honey Creek township, this morning, Alexander McPeters, Jr., killed his wife and his sister-in-law, Ellen Bloxom, shot at his mother-in-law, and then killed himself. Domestic troubles and dissipation led to the deed. McPeters and his wife, who had been married about three years, and they leave a child two months old. The couple had frequently quarrelled, and Mrs. McPeters had applied for a divorce. Both McPeters's family and his wife's are prominent and respected, and own fine farms.

Hanlan Refuses to Row Away from Toronto.

TORONTO, Ont., May 19.—Referring to the offer of John A. Kennedy of Portland, Me., to put up $1,500 if Hanlan, Ross, and an unknown would add $500 each to the sum, and row in New England, Hanlan says he will row nowhere but on Toronto Bay, and that if Ross will come here and row he will give $2,000, and find an unknown who, with himself and Ross, will put in $1,000, making a grand purse of $5,000 for the winner.

A Prosperous Seal Fishing Season.

ST. JOHNS, May 19.—The seal fishery is closed for the present season. The steamer Neptune, the last of the fleet, arrived yesterday evening with nearly 6,000 old seals. Nearly all of the steamers did well on the second trip, the deficiency in the first being fully made up. Altogether the voyage was better than the average.

The cod fishery has commenced with fair prospects. Salmon are plenty at ten cents a pound.
