THE STEERAGE OF THE GERMANIC.

Wherein it does Not Answer the Description Miss O'Brien has Qualified.

A commotion was caused in England several weeks ago by a letter from Miss Charlotte G. O'Brien printed in the Pall Mall Gazette, charging that the arrangements of the steerage in a transatlantic steamship which she had visited were such that the sexes were not separated, and that neither comfort nor cleanliness was possible. She had found, she said, long doubletier hammocks running lengthwise of the steerage, and made to accommodate about 100 persons each. Narrow strips of sail cloth divided the long bed into berths, but when the mattresses were in the berths the bed was pretty much one level surface. "In these beds," she continued, "lie hundreds of men and women. Any man who comes with a woman who is or calls herself his wife, sleeps, as a matter of right, in the midst of hundreds of young women, who are compelled to live in his presence day and night. If they remove their clothes they must do so under his eyes. If they lie down to rest, it must be beside him. The ship is supposed to carry in this manner over 1,000 steerage passengers. She carried in one voyage last year 1,775 emigrants."

Miss O'Brien added that an American flag floated over the steamer. She did not give its name, but a despatch from London printed yesterday reports Mr. Chamberlain, President of the Board of Trade, as saying that she referred to the White Star steamer Germanic, the arrangements on which are strictly in accordance, he said, with the law, and are excellent. Sir Chamberlain also said that Miss O'Brien had withdrawn the accusation in a qualified manner, but had since written that she does not withdraw from her original position, except in regard to the Germanic, and that "she is against the present system of emigrant ships."

The Germanic, which, after the publication of Miss O'Brien's letter, was specially inspected under the direction of the Board of Trade, now lies at the foot of West Tenth street.

General Agent R. J. Cortis of the White Star line said at the offices at 37 Broadway yesterday that Miss O'Brien had so thoroughly retreated from her first position that the officers of the company felt like letting her down easy. As to the Germanic, it could be inspected as much as any one pleased. All the changes that had been made in her steerage arrangements were changes for the better. In the other steamships the wooden bunks were taken down only at the end of a voyage; in the Germanic the passengers slept on canvas bunks, in every way better for convenience, ventilation, and cleanliness.

Mr. Cortis added that he had heard it said that Miss O'Brien's motive in writing her letter was to discourage emigration from Ireland to America, as it was the policy of the Young Ireland party to keep the peasants at home, while it was the policy of the Government to let them emigrate as fast as possible.

A SUN reporter visited the Germanic and found some of the canvas hammocks in the steerage in position. The steerage is on the same deck as the cabin. The hammocks against one side of the ship are occupied by married couples and their children. The row on the other side, across the deck, is for single women, who are always under a matron's charge. The steerage where single men sleep and eat is about 100 feet away, and cannot be reached except by going on deck.

The rows of hammocks are arranged in what are called "blocks" of twenty beds each, ten in the lower tier, about three feet from the deck, and ten on the second tier three feet higher. Each "block" is, however, in reality two structures of ten beds each, five on the lower tier and five on the upper tier, and a valance falling at right angles with the ship's side completely separates the two structures. Another curtain falls between the beds and the outer apartment. Each series of five beds is thus isolated. The five beds which are laid fore and aft are made on one strip of canvas supported by stanchions running between the decks and by horizontal bars from the stanchions to the ship's side. Between the blocks are passages three feet wide, going into the passageway, the passenger sees a bed for five sleepers, its five divisions marked off merely by little straps of canvas, so that the several beds in each series of five are not isolated. It is the custom, in the case of married couples, Purser Walters of the Germanic said yesterday, to put two couples in one of these bunks, leaving an empty berth between them; or a child occupies the middle berth. In getting out at the foot of his berth into the passageway the passenger need touch no one, and, Purser Walters says, can be just as retired in making his toilet as a traveller can in a sleeping car. The purser added that the Germanic never brought 1,775 emigrants to this country on one trip. Between 900 and 1,000 is her largest number.

A visit to the Celtic showed that the new system of bunks is far superior to the old, with their long, narrow alleys and their story above story of wooden berths. Ventilation is necessarily imperfect, and a sweep of air through the place when everything is prepared for the night is apparently impossible.

A paper drawn up by steerage passengers on the Germanic when she arrived on Monday, and signed by 164 names, declared that they were completely satisfied with their accommodations and treatment.

BASE BALL.

The Chicago Champions Play a Practice Game with the Metropolitans.

The noted Chicago base ball team came down from Troy yesterday to have a little practice game with the Metropolitan nine, which seems to be entirely out of good playing form at present. Several members of the home team were late, and Brady was too late to take part in the match, sitting on the bench while Pike played in the field for him. The crowd was allowed to encroach on the field as if it were a holiday match. The game was not one worthy a special description, the Chicagos having no difficulty in winning. They play ball, beyond question, much better than they did when they came in the third inning, when they made four base hits, two of them for three bases each. After that they batted quickly, so as to get through with the affair in time to catch the 6 o'clock boat. Clarkson received scant assistance from his fielders, and demoralized into the Detroit story about his fighting on the grand stand after striking Hauck. The score of yesterday's match is as follows:

GIVING UP THE STRUGGLE.

The Widow Mohr's Second and Successful Attempt at Suicide.

On Jan. 10 last Mrs. Catharine Mohr of 72 Broome street, the widow of a workman in Hoe's press manufactory, attempted suicide in a fit of melancholia by cutting her throat. She was ill, and was unable to support her six children. The wound healed, and when she was able to leave Bellevue Hospital she found that two of her children had been sent to an up-town institution to be cared for, while the others were making a bare living by doing odd jobs for the neighbors. She collected her family again and once more began the struggle for their support. But she was often seized with despondency, and at such times she threatened to take her life. At 4 o'clock yesterday morning her eldest daughter was awakened, as she says, by a dream that her mother was dead, and found that Mrs. Mohr, who slept with her, was moving from the bed. The daughter ran into the next room, and there found her hanging to the bedpost. Mrs. Mohr had twisted a strip of the sheet from her bed into a rope, and, willing one end around her neck, had tied the other end to the bedpost and deliberately thrown the weight of her body upon the rope. The cries of the girl aroused the family, and the body was cut down by the coroner's aid, a lad of 16. Mrs. Mohr was 37 years old.

A Prospect of Saving the Macedonia.

Mr. William Coverly, agent of the Anchor line of steamships, in this city, received a cable despatch yesterday confirming the news of the wreck of the steamship Macedonia. It appears that the steamer went ashore on Monday morning, in a dense fog, at Stroma Point, about a quarter of a mile north of the Mull of Kantyre lighthouse, on the Irish coast, striking the rocks so that three of her compartments broken into. She lies in a dangerous position, but if the weather continues fair she can be got off. She carried cattle bound for Glasgow, of which 40 were lost yesterday. Her crew were taken out. No lives were lost. The Macedonia is an iron freight steamship, 1,552 tons, Capt. Thomas Martin, she carried no passengers. She left this city, bound for Glasgow, on May 17 last, with a general cargo of grain, tallow, bacon, and fancy woods. She was built in 1871, and was owned by the Bombay Steam Navigation Company. The value of vessel and cargo is estimated at $300,000. The Anchor line ranks its own steamers.

A Good Year for Strawberries.

Strawberries abound in the New York market, and are of good quality. Ordinary kinds are sold at retail at from 10 to 15 cents a quart and fancy sorts at from 18 to 25 cents. The present supply comes from Maryland, Delaware, and Virginia, with a few from New Jersey. Next week the New Jersey crop will be ready, and a week later the yield of the Hudson River valley will come into the market. Dealers find no difficulty in disposing readily of their stock, but it is likely that prices will be lower in the best territory, although the dealers say that no such calamity as that of last year is to be anticipated. The strawberry is said to thrive every year in spite of the increased care exercised in its cultivation. This year's strawberries are large and firm, and, as the season has been by no means wet, come into market clean and neat.

At the Pumps Three Days.

Capt. Christiansen and eight sailors of the bark Cato were brought into port by the bark Gesnatas yesterday. On the 16th of May the Gesnatas was struck by a terrific squall from the northwest that lasted only a few minutes, but hailstones as large as hen eggs fell with force enough to break the brass tops of the side lights. To-day the Cato was sighted, the Cato and reached the port. Capt. Christiansen said that he sailed from Wilmington, N. C., on the 9th of May with a cargo of rosin for Bergen. On the 16th the Cato was struck by a gale from the west-northwest that lasted two hours, and knocked her on her beam ends, where she lay for several hours. The bark was badly strained and listed, and water gained in the wellhole. For three days the crew worked to save the vessel, and were exhausted when the Gesnatas hove in sight. The Cato had three feet of water in the hold when she was abandoned. She was built at Mandal, Norway, sixteen years ago, and was owned by Christian Blom of that place.
