Don't Fish on Sunday.
Did you ever go fishing on Sunday and lose your bicycle? Well, that's what one of Beaumont's most popular wheelmen did last Sunday. It isn't very often that he fishes on Sunday, but being of the nature that delights in the angling for the finny tribe he thought that Sunday was an ideal day for such sport, and, rubbing up his "old Cleveland," to make it look nice, so when he passed any lady friends they would think he was out a short Sunday afternoon spin, then supplying himself with the necessary fishing tackle, he started on his way up the river, out by the Reliance mill, up by the cemetery and into the piney woods until he arrived at Collier's ferry. It was the work of only a few minutes to get the ferryman and have him take "old Cleveland" and its owner across. As the place he was to go to had already been decided on, a short run along a cow trail out through the woods brought him to a little lake out in the swamp that was just alive with trout and perch. So interesting was the time he was having that darkness crept upon him long before he thought it was time to start for home.
Casting away the old pole that was cut a short time before from some convenient canebrake, he wound up his line and started for his wheel, which he had left standing near a small tree by the cow trail. For a while it looked as if the earth had opened and swallowed tree, wheel and all; anyway the wheel wasn't found Sunday night. Someone had to walk about six miles home, after leaving orders with the ferryman to "go over early in the morning and see if you can find my wheel, but mum is the word."
The wheel was found, and can be seen most any morning at the express office.

May Cause War.
Chicago Times-Herald.
The greatest obstacle in constructing a railroad in China lies in the numberless funeral mounds with which the country is covered. The ancestral worship is the only religion universally respected in China. There is no sacrifice a Chinaman will not make however economical he may be, to assure the repose of his ancestors. Magi are consulted to ascertain the best locality for these mounds, and the wise man often chooses a spot of his own, and thereby turns on honest penny for himself.
Once devoted to a residence for the dead the land becomes sacred, and terrible the vengeance for any disrespect shown. The most ancient are as much respected now as in their first days, and some of them date back thousands of years. To lay out a railroad without disturbing any of them would require a genius, and to destroy them would be to excite a revolution, while it is far from certain that any individuality would determine the Chinese to permit the condemnation of these lands, which to them would be sacrilege.
