which showed the ballots cast for district clerk to be for B. Boykin 1001, when it should read 1011, and that of Ed Land 985, when it should have been 985, which places the vote 26 in favor of Mr.
Boykin.

A Practical Joke.

Tuesday evening when M. J.
Loeb reached his gate, on his way to supper, he met a lady clad in the habiliments of a nun, who stated that she had escaped from the convent on account of ill-treatment received there. Mr. Loeb invited her into the house, where she again told her story and appealed to Mr. Loeb to keep her all night. This Mrs. Loeb could not do, but offered to pay for a bed at the hotel, which was refused.

The nun went away leaving the Loeb family wondering what it all meant. An explanation came later when it was learned that the so-called nun was a certain young lady typewriter who wanted to play a trick on some of her friends.

Dance Tonight.

This is the night of the masquerade ball, which is given to raise money to help the deserving poor, and it is to be hoped that every one who can afford it will buy a ticket even if they do not wish to dance. The ladies who have arranged this affair deserve much credit for their efforts and they certainly are entitled to the support and encouragement of everyone in the city. It will be an interesting sight to see the masked dancers even if you do not wish to dance. Buy a ticket anyway.

Dallas is enjoying (t) a street car strike.

The "Havloerats" seem to be bothering the Houston Post's Austin correspondent. The Post always has a sleep losing ailment of some kind.

The DALLAS ENTERPRISE'S editorial in favor of drawing the party lines seems to meet with the approval of a large number of people. It is a good time now to avert trouble by keeping the elections clean.
