ALDERMEN AND FREE RIDES.

Refusing to Pass Resolutions that they will be Deadheads No More.

At the meeting of the Brooklyn Common Council yesterday afternoon there was much sotto voce discussion between the members sitting in adjoining seats about the enforcement of the order of Receiver Corbin of the Long Island Railroad Company calling in the passes issued to certain members for free rides upon the railroad. Alderman Hacker introduced a resolution that hereafter it is inconsistent with the dignity of his position for any Alderman to accept such passes or be a party to such action on the part of the railroad companies as might reflect on their fearless and independent action toward their constituents in any measure that may be brought before the Common Council, and that in the future no free passes of any description be received from any railroad company operating within the city of Brooklyn by any member of the Board.

Alderman Hacker is a German, and represents the Twenty-first Ward. He explained that he had returned the passes he had received from the Brighton Beach, the Long Island, the Franklin Avenue and Prospect Park, and the Brooklyn, Bath and Coney Island Railroads, enclosing with each pass a note saying that recent comments of the press appear to imply an obligation on the part of the Alderman receiving the pass, with which he could not agree. To leave no doubt that the passes reached their proper destination, the Alderman caused his letters to be registered. He said that it was an outrage for the press and public to think for a moment that the Aldermen were influenced in their voting by the presentation of passes.

Alderman Seaman said that the free passes had never influenced his vote. He recognized the fact that railroad companies as well as individuals had their rights.

Alderman Roberts said that he had returned the free passes sent to him.

Alderman Le Fine, whose pass was the first that was taken up, said that he had returned his passes through counsel, and that as the discussion had arisen out of his case he hoped the resolutions would be tabled.

Alderman Fritz said that he should hold his passes until the railroad companies sent for them. If the companies desired them, they could have them.

Alderman Doyle favored the adoption of the resolutions because no one could properly explain why the passes had been taken up.

The resolutions were at length tabled by a vote of 13 to 4, the vote being as follows:

Yeas—Aldermen Kane, Malcom, O'Connell, Casey, Donovan, Le Fine, Doyle, Allison, Schmitt, Waters, Bowers, Fritz, Seaman, Kelly, and Armitage.

Nays—Aldermen Jones, McCarty, Roberts, and Hacker.

THE NEW YORK BRIDGE APPROACH.

City Hall Park to be, in Point of Fact, Enlarged by the Proposed Changes.

Mayor Grace and Comptroller Campbell have written to Senator Woodin, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Cities, explaining what part of the City Hall Park the Brooklyn Bridge bill proposes to take for the New York approach to the bridge. Accompanying the letter is a map which shows that the part of the park to be taken is a strip of land which extends along the Chatham street side for about 150 feet, thirty feet broad at the widest point, and widens to an average breadth of fifteen feet. The letter says that the Register's office will have to be taken down, and adds:

"As appears from the map, the strip of the park which it is proposed to cut off projects into the City Hall square and forms a narrow gore in the street at a point where there is much travel and where several lines of horse railroads intersect. The street at this point is already overcrowded, and the increase of travel consequent upon the completion of the bridge will render relief imperative. The Hall of Records or Register's Office is a very old structure, already inadequate to the purposes for which it is used, and its replacement by another building cannot be long postponed. By substituting for it a new building at the corner of Centre and Chambers streets, on the site now occupied by the engine house, or at some other suitable location, the park would be greatly improved and a larger open space secured, notwithstanding the widening of the roadway. We know of no other plan by which the space necessary for approach to the bridge can be obtained with so little disadvantage to the public. The portion of the park taken will be trifling in comparison with the area on the west side which was taken some years ago by local authority for the purpose of widening Broadway from Chambers street to the Post Office.

"Objection having been made to the bill on the ground that under it a street or roadway might be opened from City Hall place to Broadway, between the City Hall and the County Court House, it might be expedient to provide in the act that no such roadway should be opened."

GIVEN BACK TO ITS MOTHER.

Judge Neilson's Decision that Greatly Pleased a Throng of Women.

Mrs. Catherine J. Schroeder sued her husband, Henry W. Schroeder, a coal dealer of Kent avenue, Brooklyn, for limited divorce, alleging cruelty and inhuman treatment. When she began the suit she had the custody of her 17-months-old child; but recently, she alleges, her husband forcibly took the child away from her in the street. The infant was before Judge Neilson yesterday in response to a writ of habeas corpus served upon Schroeder. The mother, who was accompanied by about a dozen women friends, looked wistfully at the child. She related to Judge Neilson the story of her husband's alleged cruelty, in consequence of which, she said, she was compelled to leave his home.

The husband denied the charges, and said that he was willing to provide for his wife a home with the child if she would return to him.

The Judge, after hearing all the testimony, decided to give the child to her mother on account of its tender age. The instant he uttered the decision a woman darted out of the room and ran to the ladies' waiting room at the end of the corridor to see that the child was not spirited away before the mother reached it. The mother immediately followed, and soon returned, her face beaming and her child bouncing up and down in her arms. She carried it up to Judge Neilson and asked him if it was not a sweet little thing, and half a dozen women clicked after her and crained their necks forward. They were profuse in their expressions of gratitude for the Judge's decision.

Religious Discussion Resulting in Stabbing.

George Clossman, 21 years old, of 84 North Moore street, made an ante-mortem statement to Coroner Knox in the Chambers Street Hospital yesterday, in which he said that on Sunday, at noon, he left his home to go on board a steamship of the Old Dominion line, on which he was employed. On his way to the pier he was met by a friend named Peterson and another man whom he did not know. They went into a barroom at 275 West street to get a drink. Terence Condon came in drunk, and a discussion about religious matters arose. Some one made disparaging remarks about Catholics, which exasperated Condon, and he struck Peterson. Some of the men around him, including Clossman, who thought he was hit by Condon's fist. Clossman went home and to bed. As he was getting up yesterday morning he discovered that he had been stabbed. Coroner Knox notified the police of Church street station to arrest Condon, on looking over the station house Blotter Capt. Webb discovered that he was already a prisoner on a charge of intoxication. The Coroner committed him to the Tombs to await the result of Clossman's injuries, which are severe.

Accusing a Long Island Justice.

A proceeding for the removal of Justice of the Peace Charles Wagner of Breslau has been begun in the Supreme Court by some of the residents of that German settlement upon Long Island, and the petition in which they have joined will come up for a hearing at the next General Term. It is alleged, among other things, that the Justice recently held a trial in a lager beer saloon, with a jury composed of residents of Babylon; that one of the jurors was drunk, and that others were under the influence of liquor; that he refused to allow the friends of the accused to speak to the counsel during the trial; that he ordered the jury to convict the prisoners of the charge, which was assault and battery, and that he even went into the jury room with the jurors. It is alleged that two out of the five persons on trial thus convicted were personal and political enemies of the Justice.

Death of Contractor William Mathews.

William Mathews, who was a dry goods merchant in Catharine street, succeeding his father in the business in 1835, and who amassed a fortune out of Government contracts during and after the war and increased it by fortunate purchases of real estate, died Sunday at his country house in Harrison, Westchester County, soon after returning from church. He was 65 years old, and leaves a widow and seven children. He was a member of Dr. Baird's Presbyterian church at Rye, to which he had given a $20,000 granite chapel. He also founded the School for Boys and the Ladies' Seminary at Rye.

Two Fishers went Sailing.

The bark Ebenezer, Capt. C. Nielsen, arrived here yesterday from London, having on board two fishermen who were picked up in a storm off the northwest coast of Newfoundland. The men had left their schooner on the morning of June 10 in a small boat to fish, and in the heavy weather which came on they lost their bearings and were carried away. In the log which followed they could not find their schooner, and after bobbing about on the waves for thirty hours, and getting very wet and hungry, they were picked up by Capt. Nielsen. They shipped to Gloucester yesterday.

A Report in Favor of Clerk Heimberger.

At a meeting of the Board of Police Justices last evening the special committee appointed to investigate a complaint made against Victor Heimberger, a clerk's assistant in the Third District Court, reported that the facts alleged were not sufficient to constitute a just cause of complaint. The report was accepted. It was signed by Justices Gilder, Cowenhoven and Gaffney. Justice Bixby, the third member of the committee, had declined to serve. On motion of Justice Wandell, John W. Conklin was appointed a clerk's assistant, and assigned to the Second District Court.

Disturbing Public Worship.

John Monahan of 116th street and Madison avenue attended the services of the Independent Catholic Church, at 121st street and Lexington avenue, on Sunday. When Bishop McNamara passed around the contribution plate, Monahan made use of an offensive epithet, and Policeman McKeon arrested him. Justice Petterich of 127 East 122d street, who was sitting near Monahan, appeared against him in the Harlem Police Court yesterday. Justice Gardner committed the prisoner in default of payment of a fine of $10.

Fatally Hurt by a Blank Cartridge.

Oswald Jung, aged 18, a bartender at 589 Broadway, Brooklyn, attempted to commit suicide on Sunday evening, by shooting himself in the abdomen with a pistol that was loaded only with a blank cartridge. The concussion caused by the explosion of the cartridge against his body burst a blood vessel and internal hemorrhage followed, which the physicians of St. Catherine's Hospital think will prove fatal.

Another Ten-story Building.

A monster building is to be erected in lower Broadway by H. H. Hunnewell of Boston. It will have a front of 90 feet at 14, 16, 18, and 20 Broadway, a depth of 150 feet, and an L on Beaver street of 50 feet front and 100 feet depth. It is to be all of granite, ten stories tall, with a Mansard roof, and will be devoted to business purposes.

A MAN NO ONE ENVIES.

From the London Times.

BERLIN, June 5.—A Russian friend sends me the following striking picture of the state of imprisonment into which recent events have thrown the Czar:

"The Emperor still broods in sullen retirement in the castle of Gatchina. His Majesty has paid only two or three fugitive visits to the capital during the last month. On the last occasion he was to attend the funeral cortège of the late Prince Oldenburg to the railway station. His Majesty's place was duly marked out in the official programme, but no two people who saw the procession agree as to whether he was behind the bier or not, and the newspapers all contradicted each other as to the Czar's presence. The most probable version seems to be that he awaited the late Prince's remains at the railway station. There is no relaxation in the vigilance exercised at Gatchina. Gen. Count Vorontzoff-Dashkoff is reported to have been unable to get on with his imperial master, and to have been obliged to leave him for a time, while, on the other hand, it is stated that the Count has injured his leg and is obliged to keep himself quiet. It has not yet transpired which story is the true one. The contradiction of the first reports as to the way in which the village of Gatchina was protected, a contradiction drawn up by Count Vorontzoff-Dashkoff himself does not apply to the vicinity of the palace, which is strictly guarded and watched. A short time ago two of the young Grand Dukes, cousins of the Emperor, were stopped in the grounds by a Cossack, who threatened to spear them if they advanced. A friend, who has occasion to visit the castle to see an official, tells me that as soon as he left the railway station and took the direction toward the palace, he felt conscious that the eyes of the police were following him, but it was only when he was about to cross the bridge over the castle moat that he was actually stopped. Here the police officials were all officers. They ascertained his business and escorted him to the service gate of the palace, the only one which is allowed to be approached. He at once found himself in the police office, surrounded by officers. His passport was taken, and his description, the time of day, and business, were all duly noted in a book, which the chief of police is supposed to examine every day. An officer was then sent to inform the official inquired for, while my friend was kept by the police. On the officer returning with a message that the official could be seen, my friend was escorted by a police officer down the long corridors to the rooms of the person he wished to see. All the way Cossack sentinels, with drawn swords, were tramping up and down. It can readily be imagined that no official of the palace, however high he may be placed, is particularly overjoyed at present by the visits of his friends. My acquaintance was therefore exhorted, for the love of heaven, to confine his conversation to the merest commonplaces, and not to stay too long. When he got to the train on his return journey he felt heartily glad and fortunate, though he could not shake off the sensation that the police were still at his back. Looking out of the windows of the corridor into the court yards, of which there are four within the castle walls, he saw innumerable stacks of piled muskets, denoting the presence of a large force of infantry, and on the open place in front of the palace were picketed the horses of about a squadron of cavalry. Persons whose business calls them daily to the palace, and who are well known, are rigorously searched. For example, a priest, employed in the service of the imperial chapel, was lately subjected to such a close inspection that even his cigarettes were not overlooked. A Cossack officer is stationed at each of the doors of the sleeping apartments of the Emperor, the Empress, and the heir apparent during the night. The last named complains continually of the restraint put upon his movements since his father's accession to the throne. He is not allowed to go out riding in the park, which particularly annoys him. None of the officers or court officials are allowed to be away from the palace more than two or three hours at a time, and all are obliged to be in before 9 in the evening. The court will soon remove to Peterhoff, which has a small port at the mouth of the Neva. Here four lightships will be anchored, and no other vessels will be allowed to go near. The two yachts, Slavianka and Czarevna, will always be in readiness to convey the Emperor to and from St. Petersburg, accompanied on either side by a torpedo boat, manned with four marines."

The State police, or the old Third Section, under a new name, is being thoroughly reorganized by M. Plome, its new chief, and the secret communications of its agents are not even to be shared by the assistants in the department, but are to be strictly confidential between the chief and his spies.

DWIGHT KIDDER, JR.

An Alleged Plan to Shield him from the Consequences of Murdering his Brother.

From the New England Homestead.

The Homestead does not pretend to be in the secrets of those who are endeavoring to shield Dwight Kidder, Jr., from the consequences of his awful crime. There is reason to believe, however, that the plan is to wait until the public mind has recovered somewhat from the surprise and indignation which followed the commission of the murder and the quite too tender treatment of the murderer, and then furnish the $6,000 bail (which can be done very quietly), and as soon as he is free, ship him to Europe, where he has wealthy friends waiting to receive him. Of course he will not travel on the Continent "for his health" or for pleasure. He will go to avoid the trial in the higher court which his friends are now afraid of, and if he goes he will go to stay. It should be understood that, however leniently a homicide may be dealt with by an inferior court, the Grand Jury have the power to indict the accused for murder in the manslaughter, according to the gravity of the offense as they apprehend it. It is the fear that this body will consider the crime (as undoubtedly the public does) a very grave one, which makes the relatives of the lad anxious to put him out of harm's reach. This can be readily done by sending him to Russia as soon as he is released on bail. We will frankly state the reasons which lead us to surmise that this is the plan.

Four or five columns more in the New York papers published long and sensational accounts of the elopement of a Mrs. Sondheim, the wife of a wealthy Jew cotton broker, and the Homestead stated at that time that she had near relatives in this city, without, however, giving their names. It may now be stated that this lady is the daughter of Dwight Kidder, Jr.'s, mother by a former marriage. Mrs. Dwight Kidder, mother of the fratricide, was formerly Mrs. Whittaker, and the maiden name of her daughter, Mrs. Sondheim, was Lillie A. Whittaker. The daughter is a beautiful blonde, who, although now only 25, has had a career checkered and romantic in the extreme. In 1875 she married De Trafford Blackstone, a wealthy cotton manufacturer at Norwich, Conn., from whom she was divorced in 1877, the husband retaining their little boy, whom she abducted the following year, but who, we believe, is now with his father in Norwich. Her next conquest was Mr. Sondheim, to marry whom she renounced the Jewish faith. It is said that he was devotedly attached to her, and lavished upon her all that money could buy. Notwithstanding all this, after the brief period of fifteen months she deserted him (for it seems to have been a desertion rather than an elopement), and, after getting the cash for a $1,000 check which he had given her for a shopping excursion, suddenly disappeared, taking a steamer for Europe. The news now comes that she has made yet another conquest, a Russian duke. Only 25, and three husbands living!

Now this half-sister of Dwight Kidder, Jr., is extremely fond of him. It was at her country house—or rather at Mr. Sondheim's—at Yonkers that young Kidder's first shooting affair occurred, to which some of the papers have alluded as happening "several years ago," although the actual time was last fall. She is now in Russia, and a letter has been received from her this week asking that Dwight Kidder, Jr., be sent there. We believe it is claimed that when it was written she did not know of his crime—which those may believe who want to. Her newest husband is very rich, and those who give bail to young Kidder prior to his departure will have ample security. Perhaps he will return from his European tour next December and then—perhaps not!

A Lucky Parson.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

The Rev. Dr. N. W. Conkling, pastor of the Rutgers Presbyterian Church, New York city, has recently arrived in California to enjoy a season of rest and recreation. His lines seem to have fallen in unusually pleasant places. After a very successful pastorate in the Arch Street church, Philadelphia, he was called, twelve years ago, to the Rutgers Church, where he at once became immensely popular, not only with his own congregation, but with other denominations. A wealthy Episcopalian widow, who became interested in his preaching, has been very bountiful to him and his family. She sent him, his wife, and daughter to Europe, paying all the expenses of the trip. On his return he found that she had built and furnished a mansion for him at a cost of $70,000, and, not content with that, she presented Mrs. Conkling, who is said to be not one bit jealous, $100,000 in Government bonds.

Striking Oil in Colorado.

From the Gunnison News.

CRESTED BUTTE, June 20.—It has been well known for some time that this section of State was rich in anthracite coal. Oil was yesterday struck on Smith's ranch near Mount Carbon. Several wells have been discovered which when touched with a match ignited and blazed up to a great height. From a comparison of the ground upon which the wells were discovered with much of the surrounding land there is every reason to believe that oil will be discovered in very large quantities. And so another element of wealth is introduced into this marvellous State of Colorado.

Car Wheels of Paper.

From the Keystone Courier.

Great demand has recently sprung up for the paper car wheels. They are considered more durable, though more expensive, than the ordinary iron wheel. The works are notable to fill the orders. One company alone turned out at these works about $70,000 worth of car wheels in April.
