CRUSHED UNDER A RAFTER.

TWO CHILDREN KILLED BY THE FALL OF A DESERTED BUILDING.

A Terrible Accident in Jersey City—A Third Child Thought to have been Fatally Injured—A Missing Italian Rag-picker.

A deserted and partially burned building at Brunswick and Third streets, Jersey City, was blown down at noon yesterday, killing two children and injuring another so that it will probably die. The building originally consisted of a three-story frame factory and a small adjoining house, which had been occupied by Charles S. Frost as a kindling wood factory. About three weeks ago the buildings caught fire, and the roof and top story of the factory were destroyed. Since then it has been abandoned by its owner, and the remaining timbers have been utilized by persons living in the neighborhood for fuel. At 12 o'clock yesterday several children were on the first floor of the building gathering broken fragments of wood. A sudden gust of wind struck the dilapidated structure, and after swaying to and fro for a moment it fell with a crash to the ground. Its fall made a startling noise, and raised a cloud of dust. When the neighbors, who had been attracted by the noise, reached the place they saw a pile of ruins, and heard the screaming of the many children who had escaped from the building before the catastrophe.

A report spread that 20 persons had been buried beneath the ruins. The news was rapidly circulated, and people flocked to the place from all quarters of the city. Thomas Mason, a laborer, who lived in the vicinity, gave a fire alarm, and four engines and two hose companies responded. Word was also sent to Police Headquarters, and Inspector Savage and Capt. Farrier of the First Precinct, with a squad of policemen, hastened to the factory and assisted the firemen in excavating the debris.

Thomas Keegan, a citizen, saw a girl lying beneath a beam. The heavy timbers had fallen on her legs and crushed her against the flooring. In order to extricate her it was necessary to pry up a portion of the floor. When her limbs had been released it was found that her clothing was still caught beneath the beam. Keegan took her in his arms and cut her dress so as to free her. She was unconscious and was taken out into the street, where restoratives were applied and she slowly recovered her senses. She proved to be Josephine Pinn, aged 10, of 471 First street. She was carried to the Charity Hospital, where it was found that she had been injured internally. Slight hopes are entertained that she will survive.

The firemen in the mean time pursued their search, but found no more victims until they reached the house which had adjoined the factory. There they found the lifeless bodies of a boy and a girl lying under one of the fallen rafters. The bodies were identified as those of Thomas Shannon, aged 7, of 74 Colgate street, and Catherine Griffin, aged 11, of 85 Colgate street. The bodies were given to the children's parents, who had come in search of them. No other bodies were found. The police discovered a bag and a book which, it was learned on investigation, belonged to an Italian rag-picker who was seen to enter the factory shortly before the accident. The Italian, however, had mysteriously disappeared, and no other trace of him could be found.

There is no department of the municipal Government of Jersey City that has any jurisdiction over unsafe buildings. When the firemen and policemen had recovered the bodies that had been buried beneath the ruins they were about to go away. The crowd, however, insisted that a dangerous brick chimney that had been left standing should be pulled down. The clamor of the bystanders was so great that to appease them Assistant Engineer Denmead ordered that the chimney and other parts of the building that remained be razed. His instructions were promptly obeyed.

A reporter for THE SUN visited the place yesterday, and heard several persons complain that the police and firemen had not done their duty, and that the recovery of the bodies had been accomplished by the citizens. The officials of both the departments contradicted them, and averred that they did everything that could have been expected of them under the circumstances. They asserted that they had made a thorough inspection of the premises, and that there were no bodies remaining under the ruins, as some of the spectators alleged. For several hours a number of women stood around the place looking for missing children, and anxiously poking among the rubbish.

ST. DAVID'S FESTIVAL.

Welshmen Enjoying Athletic Games, Music, and Dancing in Jones's Wood.

The national festival of St. David's Benevolent Society was held in Jones's Wood, Washington Park, yesterday. The invitations were in the Welsh language, and when interpreted read: "Come all ye Welsh this day and enjoy yourselves at Washington Park for the good of your nation." The society represents about 50,000 Welsh residents of New York and neighboring cities. Postmaster-General James, Mr. George Jones of the New York Times, and the Rev. Dr. Llewellyn D. Bevan sent letters regretting inability to take part in the festivities.

The feature of the afternoon was the athletic sports. The prizes for the winners in these were rich and handsome. The first event was a 100-yards race for boys under 14 years of age. It was won by C. Edwards of Jersey City, Chas. Lutz second and E. Edwards third.

Samuel Griffiths won the second 100-yard race for boys under 18 years, and J. F. Edwards the third 100-yard race, which was open to all.

The quarter-mile race was won by J. F. Edwards (25 yard), with W. H. Williams second.

The race for men 50 years of age was won by Wm. T. Edwards, with J. Rose second.

The hurdle race was won by E. J. Edwards, with J. Parry second. This race ended the victories for the Messrs. Edwards, who all belong to Jersey City.

A Cable won the running high jump, and E. J. Allen the relief race. The one-mile walk was won by W. Parry, with Thomas Brady second.

The evening entertainment began at 8 o'clock. The most interesting feature was the performance of the Cambrian Glee Club, which sang in the Welsh language "Hen wlad fy whadans yn ngwlad i mi," which, being interpreted, reads, "The home of my fatherland is dear to me." This song was encored. Many others in the beloved dialect succeeded. Dancing followed.

Death After Taking Chloroform.

Mrs. Mary J. Truscott, 39 years of age, of 33 East 30th street, died suddenly on Sunday afternoon in the office of Dr. T. Cleland, 195 Fourth avenue after taking chloroform. Dr. Cleland says that she suffered from pains in the lower portion of the body, and had come for treatment. She was a professional nurse, at one time employed at Bellevue Hospital, and was familiar with the administration of chloroform. He tried to persuade her to undergo the examination without taking the anæsthetic, but she insisted upon having it. He had previously sounded her lungs and heart, and had found them in sound condition, and had no apprehension of danger. Dr. Morris H. Block assisted him. He used a mixture of two parts of ether and one of chloroform. Ether was used, and inhalation was accomplished without any unfavorable symptoms. Immediately afterward syncope was indicated. Artificial respiration was tried, aqua ammonia was administered, and both a galvanic and a Faradic current electricity were employed, but without effect, in restoring natural respiration. She died about ten or twenty minutes after the inhalation of the chloroform.

Mrs. Truscott had no family. The body was removed to undertaker's on 34th avenue, where yesterday Dr. Wakeman of the coroner's office made an autopsy of the body. Bright's disease was discovered. A certificate of death from natural causes was issued.

A Scene at the Grand Central Depot Explained.

In front of the Grand Central Depot on Sunday evening Assemblyman W. S. Andrews saw a middle-aged man snatch a watch and chain from a well-dressed young woman. He told Detective Irving what he had seen, and Irving arrested the man, who said he was Robert E. Kelly of Meriden, Conn. The young woman, Mary Smith, also of Meriden, made a charge of larceny, on which Kelly was locked up. When the case was called in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday the complainant wished to withdraw her charge. She told Justice Wandell that she was the daughter of a widow living in Meriden, where the prisoner also had made the acquaintance of Kelly, who is the proprietor of a machine shop. She came with him to this city Saturday evening and visited a theatre with him. He had promised that they should go home by the 11:30 train, but he delayed her so that they missed the train. Next day she managed to elude him, and was going into the depot when he overtook her and took from her the watch and chain, which were presents he had made to her. Justice Wandell allowed her to withdraw her complaint.

The Death of Lieut. Hunter.

Ex-Mayor John W. Hunter of Brooklyn yesterday received information of the death of his son, Lieut. Henry C. Hunter, U. S. N., which occurred on June 10, on the United States steamer Alert, off Yokohama. Lieut. Hunter, who was 33 years old and a graduate of Annapolis, contracted malaria fever in the China Seas. Although he was offered a relief from duty, he believed that he would receive benefit by remaining at sea, and decided to seek health ashore. Ex-Mayor Hunter has lost three children recently. One of his sons committed suicide last fall.

Letting the Street Preacher Go.

David O. Jones, the street preacher, who was arrested on Sunday for collecting a crowd at the foot of West Tenth street, was discharged yesterday.

AWAITING PROOF FROM ITALY.

Gendarmes on the Way to Try to Identify Rebello as Esposito the Bandit.

The Italian who says that he is Vincenzo Rebello, fruit vender of New Orleans, and who is under arrest as Giuseppe Randazzo, a noted bandit of Sicily, was again before United States Commissioner Osborn yesterday, on the proceedings for his extradition. The prisoner was taken from Ludlow street jail by Deputy Marshal Bernhard and another officer, who sat by his side in the court room during the examination. A photograph of him taken in New Orleans, and similar to the one sent to Italy and recognized there as a likeness of Esposito, was shown to a number of spectators in the court room. It represents the prisoner standing with a companion, whose right hand is resting on his left shoulder. His face is not unlike that of Mr. Jay Gould, except that the nose is not so prominent. The longitudinal scar over the bridge of the nose, which is said to be one of the marks of Bandit Esposito's identity, cannot be detected in the prisoner's face by casual scrutiny. When his forehead is contracted, as was frequently the case yesterday while he was being inspected, the faint mark is lost in wrinkles.

Ex-Judge William G. Choate appeared for the prisoner, as associate counsel with Dr. Lorenzo Ulio. Frederic R. Coudert and Paul F. Fuller appeared for the Italian Government. Mr. Fuller handed to the Commissioner nine papers and receipts and $240 taken from the prisoner at the time of his arrest. He said that the receipts would show that the prisoner's name in New Orleans was not Rebello, but Constanzo, and Mr. Fuller added that he did not believe Rebello was the prisoner's name in Italy. He read the following cable despatch to the Italian Consul at New York:

ROME, July 17.

Italian Consul, to be forwarded to Prince Campomele:

Photograph and declaration ascertaining identity of Randazzo forwarded Consulate 9th inst. Gendarmes started yesterday from Palermo on English steamer Alexandria, Royal Anchor line, which, after touching Naples, will proceed direct to New York.

MANCINI, Minister Foreign Affairs.

Mr. Fuller renewed his application for an adjournment to allow the introduction of the evidence now on the way from Italy.

Dr. Ulio again asked for Rebello's discharge. Imprisonment for twenty-four days on suspicion, he said, was a wrong to the prisoner. The evidence for which it was proposed to wait might have been produced immediately after the arrest was made. It was claimed in the papers that one of the means of identifying Esposito was a longitudinal scar on the forehead. Where did any scar appear on the forehead of the prisoner? If it existed the prisoner could not have wiped it away. The prosecution could not plead urgency, or that the prisoner was fleeing from justice at the time the arrest was made. He was living quietly in New Orleans. Counsel described the prisoner's detention as a wrong which ought not to be permitted in a land of liberty.

Mr. Coudert replied that wrongs as great were done in this country every day. If the prisoner was really Esposito he was one of the worst scoundrels alive, and neither New York nor New Orleans would care to have him as a citizen. He had killed for money, cut off the ears of a gentleman for money, and tortured a girl for money. The statue of Liberty need not shiver, or, if painted, need not blush because the prisoner was detained two weeks until his identity could be established. He was, at any rate, a man who gave a false name.

"Who is he?" asked Mr. Coudert. "The prosecuting say he is Esposito. He says he is Randazzo."

Ex-Judge Choate—He says he is Rebello.

Mr. Coudert—We doubt if that is his name.

Ex-Judge Choate cited the case of an Italian extradited as a bandit in 1875, and tried on another charge when he got to Italy. He asked that the prisoner be discharged, and he demanded to give the prosecution opportunity to procure a new warrant from a United States magistrate at New Orleans. He said that there might be forty or one hundred witnesses in New Orleans who could testify to the prisoner's identity, yet who could not be examined by a commission. To return the prisoner to New Orleans would not delay the prosecution.

Mr. Coudert asked why the prisoner did not take the witness stand and tell all about himself. Already two or three men had been stabbed in New Orleans because they were suspected of having betrayed him.

Dr. Ulio—The prisoner's friends were the ones stabbed.

Commissioner Osborn decided to adjourn the hearing until Aug. 8. He said that in the mean time he would consider whether or not the prisoner should be remanded to New Orleans.

SINGING HYMNS IN THE PARK.

The Story a Wandering Hungarian Told to a Police Linguist.

Policeman Stone took before Sergeant O'Keefe at the arsenal in Central Park, Saturday night, August Boch, whom he suspected of insanity. Boch was about five feet tall, wore a stiff hat many sizes too large and pulled down over his eyes, a dress coat which had been made for a man of colossal proportions, and the tails of which fell to his ankles, a pair of brick-colored linen trousers, and heavy boots.

"What has he been doing?" asked Sergeant O'Keefe of Policeman Stone, as he looked at the little man.

"He was walking through the Park singing to himself. He couldn't speak English, and couldn't understand me, and so I brought him here."

One of the doormen at the arsenal is a linguist, and to him Boch said: "I am a Hungarian. I came to this country two years and nine months ago. In two weeks I was robbed of all my money. I had to sleep in police stations. One night all the lodgers were aroused and told to go down stairs. A policeman took me aside and told me to say 'I did it.' He said I would be paid and nothing would be done to me. This very policeman pointed me out, and I said 'I did it.' I was put in a cell and given some supper. The next day I was taken to a police court and asked if I had said 'I did it.' I said yes. I was kept in prison before another court and sentenced to two years' imprisonment. When I left prison I was walking on a street, when the policeman who first arrested me again took me in. I was sentenced to six months in the workhouse. Today I was discharged, and these are workhouse clothes. I came to the park for one day's freedom, and was singing Hungarian hymns, when the policeman arrested me. I thought I could wander in the park and sing hymns." Boch was locked up as a vagrant, and yesterday was returned to the workhouse.

Corporations Resisting Taxation.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Company obtained from Judge Cullen, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday a writ of certiorari to review the action of the Tax Commissioners in assessing its capital stock and personal property at $4,000,000. The company avers that, as all its vessels registered in New York are engaged in ocean commerce between ports in the United States and foreign ports, the company is exempt from such assessment and taxation, for State or local purposes, upon its capital stock, franchises, and earnings for a period of fifteen years from the 1st of June last. The company claims further that since the 1st of December, 1879, its principal place of business has been at Clarkstown, Rockland County, that it claims therefore to be assessed here for personal property, and that, under the laws of 1880, assessment on stock and personal property can only be made at Albany.

Writs of certiorari were granted by Judge Cullen, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday on behalf of the Western Union, American Union, Atlantic and Pacific, Gold and Stock, and Manhattan Quotation Tel-graph Companies. It is asserted in the petitions in each case that the assessment is excessive, and that assessment upon the capital stock can only be made at Albany.

Knocked into the Air by a Locomotive.

A locomotive on the New York, Woodhaven and Rockaway Railroad yesterday struck a peddler's wagon containing Philip Wolf, aged 28, of 132 Meserole street, Brooklyn, and his brother Wolfgang Wolf, aged 30, at a road crossing near Fresh Pond, and killed their horse instantly, demolished the wagon, and knocked the occupants into the air. They were both seriously injured, and were removed to St. Catherine's Hospital. It was there discovered that Wolfgang, who was picked up unconscious, was suffering from concussion of the brain, and other internal injuries. Philip Wolf was so badly injured about the spine. The men were on their way to the city from a trip which they had purchased a quantity of vegetables. These were scattered all around the scene of the accident.

A Pretty Little Waif.

There is a brown-eyed, three-year-old girl in charge of Matron Webb at the Police Central Office, who calls herself Sophy Koppel & Co. She was found by a policeman at Fifty-ninth street and Second avenue on Saturday night. She says that her mother left her there, but some the less confidently expects that mother to claim her. No inquiry, however, has been made for her the two days she has been at the Central Office. Her father, she says, "used to work in a stable, but got sick and lost his job." She says she knows her parents live she can tell nothing. She is not troubled by her apparent abandonment, and is cheerful and contented until somebody reminds her of her yet younger brother, whom she calls "My Baby."

The Banana-skin Ordinance.

Mayor Grace has approved the ordinance making it a misdemeanor to throw or deposit on any sidewalk or crosswalk any part or portion of any fruit or vegetable or other substance which, when stepped upon by any person, is liable to cause, or does cause, him or her to slip or fall. A fine of not less than $1 nor more than $5, or imprisonment of from one day to ten days, is the penalty. The ordinance also directs that the proprietor of every fruit store or fruit stall shall, under a penalty of $5 fine or ten days' imprisonment, keep a copy of the ordinance, printed in large type, posted in a conspicuous place about his shop.

Hurt at Fulton Market.

The work of tearing down Fulton Market, which was begun on Saturday, was continued yesterday. Nearly all that portion of the market fronting Beekman street was a pile of ruins at 8 o'clock. Three men were working on a portion of a rotten roof about 11 o'clock in the morning when it suddenly gave way. Two of them escaped without injury but one, John Roth of 327 East Houston street, was considerably injured. The work of tearing down will probably be completed by Saturday.

Beecher at Work on the Life of Christ.

Beecher is going to spend most of the summer in his house at Peekskill trying to finish "The Life of Christ." The Plymouth pastor took a new interest in this work when Sir Sam Wilkeson, who obtained possession of the original contract for the book, revived a complaint upon him for damages for the breach of the legal covenant. Beecher's failure to carry out his contract was one of the chief causes of the failure of J. B. Ford & Co.
