THE TRAIN ROBBERS.

Some Interesting Facts and Incidents Connected with the Recent Outrage—A Proposition from Frank James to the Writer Indicating his Plans for the Robbery.

From the St. Louis Republican.

KANSAS CITY, July 21.—Frank James and Jim Cummings were the parties who planned, and, with the aid of their confrères, executed the robbery at Winston.

A few weeks ago I received a letter from Frank James acknowledging the receipt of a copy of my late publication, "Border Outlaws," which I sent to him by a relative. This letter has already been published. Shortly after its receipt this same relative, who is known to be in communication with Frank James, visited St. Louis and confidentially conferred with my publisher upon the advantages which we might mutually reap by a sudden stimulation in the sale of "Border Outlaws," for which he was the acting as agent. His proposition embraced a statement that Frank James and Jim Cummings were at that time in Missouri planning a campaign; that a large robbery would soon be consummated, attended with some startling results. All these facts he agreed to furnish us with the very moment the robbery should be completed, comprising the names of those engaged, how they had organized, where assembled, cause for their acts, &c., provided my publisher would give him a certain sum of money. The incentive on our part to comply with his proposition was in securing this reliable information, which might be added as an appendix to a new addition of "Border Outlaws," and issued contemporaneously with the first newspaper reports, thereby creating a largely increased demand for the book. Of course there appeared so much doubt involved in this singular proffer that it was rejected with little consideration of the probability of a robbery such as was declared about to take place. At this time, however, the assertions then made assume an interest which throws much light upon the problem. "Who committed the robbery?"

Mrs. Samuels, mother of the James boys, was in Kansas City yesterday and also on Tuesday, presumably to discover what effort was being made by Jackson County authorities to apprehend the gang. She was very positive in her declarations that both Frank and Jesse were dead, going so far in her assertions as to say that Frank died three years ago of consumption, in Texas. What she hoped to gain by a claim so easily disproved it is difficult to conjecture.

The rendezvous of Frank James many know is in the Indian nation, on the head waters of the Sandy River, near Atoka. A well-known gentleman of St. Louis, whose business for the last several months has kept him in the nation, informed me some days ago that he had seen Frank James and several of his confederates more than fifty times during the present year, and always within a hundred miles or less of Atoka. This section of the nation is distinguished for the lawless characters that intest it, murder and robbery being the chief occupation of nearly every one in that particular section of country. It is, in fact, almost impossible for a gentleman to pass through the district without a large and well-armed escort. In such haunts the James boys feel secure from official interference.

From the best evidence attainable, the gang who robbed the Rock Island and Pacific train, among whom were Frank James, Ed. Miller, Jim Cummings, and Dick Little, after leaving the train mounted their horses and rode northward until they reached the outskirts of Cameron, when they turned and took to the brush again, making directly for the Missouri River. Just where they made a crossing it is impossible to state, but on the following evening, the 16th, they certainly passed through Sni-a-bar township of Jackson County, and, taking a southwestwardly course, continued on to the Indian Territory. The party, however, did not remain intact, but divided up into couples, so as to destroy the trail which so large a number as seven riders would have made conspicuous. They were at no time so far apart, though, but that a prearranged signal would have concentrated the outlaws. Such a force, disciplined in desperation and schooled so well in the use of arms, would be capable of repelling any attack liable to be made by a Sheriff's posse.

It is a singular fact that with all the atrocious crimes credited to the James boys and their confederates there is not so much as one dollar of a reward offered for their capture, although at one time the rewards offered by State, railroad and express companies aggregated $75,000.

A proposition is now being discussed by some of Kansas City's leading citizens looking to the formation of a fund by private subscription—say $5,000, the amount now offered—when raised to be offered as a reward for the production of the bodies of Frank James, Jesse James, Jim Cummings, and Dick Little, dead or alive. This sum, it is thought, can be easily secured by appealing to the State, railroad, and express companies, to which subscriptions will be added contributions from all the law-loving citizens of Missouri. The idea is not only excellent, but undoubtedly practicable, and by putting into effect such a pecuniary force the "border outlaws" would surely soon be exterminated root and branch. J. W. BUEL.

HANGED IN HIS GYMNASIUM.

The Singular Accident that Faded a Bright Young Lad's Life.

Adjoining the house of Mr. George W. Harris at 170th street and Boston avenue is a large barn, in which are two trapezes on a line with each other. Between them is an ordinary rope swing. The trapezes were used by Mr. Harris's only son Charles, an active and bright lad of 15, who was quite a proficient performer upon them. When not in use they were drawn together and tied by the swing rope, which dangled in an eighteen-inch hook about three feet from the barn floor.

Charles went into the barn Monday evening about 6 o'clock to saw kindling wood. About fifteen minutes afterward his little sister Annie ran to the barn and called his name. Hearing no response, she looked in at the door and saw her brother hanging in the loop made by the swing rope, his knees nearly reaching the floor. She screamed and ran to her father, who hurried to the barn and cut the lad down. Feeling at the lad's heart, he found that it had ceased beating. Dr. Bathgate was summoned, and pronounced the boy dead. Charles had finished sawing his kindling wood, it seems, and had replaced the little saw in his tool chest, leaving the key in the lock. It is thought that he tried to hang by his chin in the loop of the rope, as he had frequently done on the trapeze bar, and that the rope had suddenly slipped under his neck, stunning him so that he was powerless to relieve himself.

The lad was well liked by his companions, stood at the head of his class, and had received several prizes for proficiency in scholarship.

A Weather Prophet Not Without Honor.

The members of the Farmers' Club were amused yesterday by a communication which had been translated from the French by Dr. Lambert, and which purported to come from a cow. The cow gave some valuable information about the food she liked best and thrived most upon. A communication from A. J. De Voe, the Hackensack weather prophet, was as follows:

"On July 20, 1881, the barometer will fall, temperature will fall. Wind will be southeast, partly cloudy, with showery weather. This week there will be very heavy rains in the State of Pennsylvania, New York city will be a corner of them; above New York city, to the north, rains will be heavy. The northeast storm last week moved to the south of you, but it was cool.

"A. J. De Voe."

Mr. De Voe's predictions are valued by the members of the Farmers' Club. Dr. Trimble said: "I consider Mr. De Voe a genius. I hope he will persevere in his investigations. I think he will discover some signs that will be of great advantage to the farmer who desires to know what the weather will be for some days ahead."

The club, on July 12, adopted a resolution recommending that Mr. De Voe persevere in his investigations.

Bricklayers Striking.

The bricklayers employed on the new ten-story building in course of construction at Beekman and Nassau streets for Eugene Kelly, the banker, quit work yesterday morning because the contractor, Richard Deevey, refused to advance their wages to $4.50 a day. They are union men. Contractor Deevey says that in March last the Bricklayers' Union established $3.50 a day as the rate of wages for the summer. He hired between thirty and forty masons at that rate. Two thousand bricks a day, he says, is what a good bricklayer ought to lay, but he found it difficult to get his men to lay 900 a day. The bricklayers at work on the building of William H. Vanderbilt on the opposite corner received $3 a day, but demanded and got $3.50 a day. They made a second demand for $4 a day, to which the contractor, A. Andrus, also acceded. This led the bricklayers on the Kelly building to ask for $4 a day, which Contractor Deevey allowed. On Saturday last the masons for Contractor Andrus asked for a second advance to $4.50 a day, and he granted it. Then the masons for Contractor Deevey demanded $4.50 a day, and not getting it stopped work. Four of the men afterward resumed work at the old rate. Eight bricklayers at work for Contractor Deevey at Batavia and Chambers street also struck for $4.50 a day.

William Ray Disappointed.

Soon after Justice Smith opened the Essex Market Police Court, yesterday afternoon, a man with a limp collar tried to make a dignified entrance. Avoiding the seats set aside for men, he selected a bench where set some pretty women. Court Sergeant Long at once called Policeman Stillman's attention to the violation of the court rules. Stillman beckoned to the man, who indignantly responded, "I am a politician, my friend. I have a right to sit where I please."

"Come, come," the policeman said gently; but it was necessary to expel him.

Arraigned before Justice Smith, the man shouted, "My name is Billy Ray. Now, Sol Smith, beware! I am a big friend of Tim Campbell, W. Mason and Owen Haley. I am a politician, and I defy this court to find me guilty."

Justice Smith smiled as he fined Ray $10.

The Staten Island Firebugs Again at Work.

An attempt was made early yesterday morning to burn Neitze's wheelwright shop on Broad street, Stapleton. The fire was kindled in a closet, the door of which was forced open. A bundle of rags and shavings saturated with kerosene was placed in the closet and set on fire. The flames were fortunately discovered before making much headway and were soon extinguished.

Another incendiary fire occurred in Stapleton. The house on the Richmond road belonging to John W. Egbert was set on fire, but as in the other case the flames were extinguished before much damage was done.

MR. ADAMSON HIS OWN ATTORNEY.

His Opinion of Lawyers and his Troubles in a Lawsuit.

In the Third District Civil Court yesterday the case of Alexander Adamson against John Hollings was brought to trial before Justice G. W. Parker. The plaintiff is the Mr. Adamson who recently, in a Newark railway station, struck with a cane his son, who was taking his little sister from Mr. Adamson's home to her mother's home in Washington against the father's will. Mr. Hollings is a prosperous wholesale milk dealer at 606 West Fifty-sixth street. He retained two lawyers to plead his cause, but Mr. Adamson had no lawyer. He didn't believe in lawyers, he said, and he complained bitterly because the two lawyers on the other side had succeeded, in spite of his objections, in obtaining five adjournments. Once it was said Mr. Hollings's foot had been stepped on by a horse and he couldn't come into court. Mr. Adamson doubted this story.

Another adjournment was obtained because one of the lawyers had a hemorrhage of the lungs. Mr. Adamson wished, he said, that all wicked lawyers might be similarly afflicted. Another adjournment, he declares, was based upon the fact that the Judge was compelled to leave the bench to get something to eat. In Washington, D. C., Mr. Adamson observed, justice courts were not conducted in such a way.

Yesterday Mr. Adamson first played the part of witness. He related that Mrs. John Hollings had called at his place of business, 710 Broadway, on June 14, and asked him to see her husband, at 606 West Forty-sixth street, and measure him for a brace and supporter, which Mr. Adamson, who manufactures such surgical apparatus, had invented. He did see Mr. Hollings on June 17, and took his measure, with the understanding that if the apparatus answered its purpose Mr. Hollings should pay $20 for it. Mr. Adamson was injured more in pride than in pocket, he said, when Mr. Hollings refused to pay for it, although at first putting it on he had said that he felt easier than at any time in two years. Mrs. Hollings testified that Mr. Hollings was not to pay for the articles unless they suited him.

Mr. Hollings testified that the apparatus hurt him so that he couldn't wear it. Decision was reserved.

Oscar Valkmann's Suicide.

Dr. Husted of 186 East Broadway was called to the Helvetia House, 182 Division street, at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, to attend Oscar Valkmann, a Russian lodger at the hotel. Valkmann was in a stupor and on a table in a corner of his room was an empty two-ounce vial which smelled of laudanum. Before the emetics which were prescribed could take effect the man was dead. He had been out of work and had been drinking. He went to bed at 11 P. M., Monday, and probably took the poison at that time. Valkmann came to this city from Russia in 1871, enlisted in the Sixty-eighth New York Volunteers, and served through the war. At the close of the war he returned to Russia. He came back to this city in 1872 or 1873. He was 40 years old, unmarried, and had been living with his brother in the hotel for two years earning a little money as agent for manufacturers of paper bags.

Tempted to Suicide by Broken Health.

Simon Sullivan, a laborer 50 years old, swallowed a teacupful of Paris green on Monday night, in his room on the second floor of 92 Baxter street, and died before a physician who was summoned by Mrs. Sullivan arrived. He had suffered from asthma for two years, and for three months had been unable to work. Two weeks ago he attended a wake in the neighborhood, and was heard to say that he envied the man whose body lay in the coffin, and wished that he himself were out of his pain. He was a hard-working man till his health failed. He had a daughter 14 years old.
