THE BRUSH LIGHT DISASTER.

A Coroner's Jury Blames the Company for the Death of Two Workmen.

Coroner Ellinger, with a jury of machinists, yesterday made an inquiry into the circumstances attending the deaths of Robert Stuart and Ernest Duchener, workmen employed by the Brush Electric Illuminating Company. They were the men killed by the falling of a lamp carriage in Union Square.

Robert J. Sheehy, Superintendent of the Brush company, explained that the accident was caused by the breaking of a worm gear in the apparatus made to hoist the electric lights in place at the top of the 150 feet pole. He said that Stuart, one of the men killed, had been specially sent to see that the apparatus was in good order. "I heard some men say," said Mr. Sheehy, "that some of the teeth in the gear wheel were broken. I immediately stopped the work and sent for a ladder to make an investigation. I asked Mr. Stuart about it, and he said, 'Never you mind the others; I examined it, and it is all right.' I trusted Mr. Stuart so fully that I did not make an examination, but continued to hoist. It went a little bit hard at times, and I spoke to Stuart about it again. He again said that it was all right. We thought we had the lamps up, but Stuart said, 'No, go ahead.' We tried to turn the crank again, when I heard a snapping noise, and a moment later the crash of glass. I shouted to the men and jumped off the platform, which was 20 feet high. When I recovered I got the men out as quickly as possible." After the accident Mr. Sheehy saw that the gear wheel was broken.

Alexander Henderson, a laborer employed by the company, said that in the early part of the evening he noticed that some of the teeth of the upper cogwheel were imperfect.

Ludwig Herrman, mechanical engineer in the employ of the company, explained the construction and workings of the electric apparatus to the jury. In his opinion, the fracture in the worm was caused by some undue strain brought to bear upon it; but it might have been caused by some obstruction getting in its way and clogging it.

The Coroner then charged the jury and they retired. After about an hour's deliberation they returned the following:

We find that the deceased came to their death through the breaking of machinery attached to a pole erected in Union square for the purpose of hoisting electric lamps to the top of the pole, and that the breakage was not due to any defect in the construction or the material of the machinery, but to negligence on the part of the Brush Electric Illuminating Company in failing to have competent men to superintend the working of the machinery.

A NINE-YEAR-OLD GIRL'S TRIP.

From Ireland to West Rutland, Vt., with No One to Care for Her.

A bright little girl wearing a thick, shaggy ulster, alighted from the 10:24 Boston train the other day, and went into the waiting room of the Grand Central depot. She sat on one of the long benches, her head resting on the arm and her dusty shoes on the perforated wood seat. When Policeman 953 walked toward her, she cried:

"Hello, peeler; air ye come for me? Indade I'm tired. I'm looking fur me fadder. Do ye know him, now? His name is Micky McLaughlin, and he is a tailor. He must be mighty old now. It's a matter of eight years since I saw him last."

"Who sent you here?" Policeman 953 asked.

"Oh, I'm cum from Queenstown to Boston in the steamer Venetian. It's I that's been bundled about since leaving me aunt Nora's house in Fermoy," the child said. "Mebbe you could direct me if you saw me lines. I've a letter here."

She presented a piece of paper to the policeman. On it was written, "The bearer is Bridget McLaughlin, 9 years old. She wants to go to her father's house in West Rutland, Vermont, United States, North America." It was signed "Aunt Nora."

Policeman 953 seated the child in a Fourth avenue car, and told the conductor to let her out at Eleventh street for the Central office of the Department of Charities and Correction.

A despatch was received from the child's father that afternoon by Superintendent Blake, asking that she be sent on at once, and she started on the next morning for West Rutland.

Death of the Hon. Hendrick B. Wright.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 2.—Congressman Hendrick B. Wright died at 11½ o'clock this morning. He was born in Plymouth, Luzerne County, Pa., on April 24, 1808. He pursued the usual classical and Mathematical studies at Dickinson's College, afterward studied law, and was admitted to the bar of Luzerne County on Nov. 8, 1831. During the following ten years he devoted himself to his profession. In 1841 he was elected to the Pennsylvania Legislature, and was reelected in 1842. In 1843 the nomination of State Senator was tendered him, but he declined it, and was again elected to the House. Upon the opening of the session he was chosen Speaker. He was a delegate at large to the Democratic National Convention which met in Baltimore in 1844. In 1852 he was elected to Congress, and was renominated in 1854, but was defeated by the Hon. H. M. Fuller. In 1861 he was nominated by both parties, and was, of course, elected. After that he wrote two works, one a "Practical Treatise on Labor," the other "Historical Sketches of Plymouth," his native town. He was once more the Democratic candidate for Congressman at large in 1872, and, being endorsed by the Workingmen's Convention, ran several thousand votes ahead of the ticket. In 1873 he was chairman of the State Central Committee, and conducted a vigorous campaign. Mr. Wright was nominated for Congress in 1876 in the Luzerne district, and was elected by 1,596 majority. Renominated in 1878, he obtained a majority of 2,494, and in 1880, without being a candidate, he received over 4,000 votes. His political life closed on March 4, 1881, after thirteen years' service in the State and national Legislatures. "Colonel" Wright, as he was known all over the United States, was 73 years of age, and was possessed of a large estate. On April 21, 1835, he was married to Mary Ann Bradley Robinson, daughter of John W. Robinson, and granddaughter of Col. Zebulon Butler, who commanded the American forces at the battle of Wyoming, on July 3, 1778. Mrs. Wright died on Sept. 8, 1871.

Freight Handlers on Strike.

The men employed in handling freight at the New Jersey Central piers, North River, have been on strike since Thursday for higher wages. A committee of their number said yesterday: "We were getting 15 cents an hour. We went to work at 7 in the morning and quit at 12 for dinner. At 12½ we commenced again and worked till 7 or 8 at night. The company would not pay us anything for the time we were at dinner, nor for fractions of hours—that is, if we quit work at 7½, we were only paid until 7, getting nothing for the half hour. We now demand 17½ cents an hour and an hour for dinner." Foreman Moore said yesterday that the men were getting $1.50 a day and struck for the advance without giving him any warning. By direction of the Superintendent of the road, Mr. Moore said, he had hired new men at $1.75 a day.

City Money for Charitable Purposes.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment yesterday voted from the excise moneys $1,548.28 to the Asylum of St. Vincent de Paul; $3,363.57 to the Missionary Sisters of St. Francis; $5,064 to the Mission of the Immaculate Virgin; $1,314.28 to the American Female Guardian Society and Home for the Friendless; $1,115.14 to St. James' Home for Children; $6,079.43 to the Asylum of the Sisters of St. Dominic; $16,958.57 to the Institution of Mercy; $2,978.60 to the Ladies Deborah Nursery and Child's Protectory; $1,957.14 to the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society, and $104 to the Asylum for Befriending Children and Young Girls.

Complaints of Immigrants not Sustained.

Twenty-five steerage passengers, who arrived on the steamship Nevada on Thursday, lodged a complaint with the Commissioners of Emigration against the steamship company on the ground of bad food. The matter was investigated yesterday afternoon, and the Commissioners found the bills of fare offered by the company to be satisfactory. As the complainants left the city for their new Western homes without awaiting the investigation, and as one of them is said to have agreed to paper denying the allegations of the complaint, the Commissioners determined to dismiss it.

Mindful of the New Code.

Superintendent Jenkens of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children asked a clerk in the Yorkville Police Court, yesterday, to show him an affidavit in a destitution case which was tried on Aug. 4. The clerk said he thought it would be a violation of the new code, and referred him to Justice Patterson. Mr. Jenkens said that the affidavit was taken before the new code went into effect, and consequently was not affected by it. Justice Patterson directed the clerk to give Mr. Jenkens the affidavit.

James Coyle's Sudden Death.

The funeral of James Coyle, the clerk in Parsons's drug store, Orange, who died suddenly on Monday in the store, took place from the house of his father in Bordentown yesterday. The post-mortem examination showed that death was caused by heart disease. The report that the marriage engagement between a young woman in Newark and Coyle had been broken previous to his death is denied by his friends. The young lady was one of the mourners at the funeral.

A Woman's Suit for Damages.

The counsel for Mrs. Ellen Crowley, in her suit for $10,000 damages against the Jersey City Brewing Company for personal injuries, obtained an order from the Kings County Supreme Court to serve the summons and complaint by publication. The plaintiff avers that on Aug. 20, while in New York city, she was knocked down and run over in Warren street, near College place, by a wagon driven by one of the defendants's agents, and that she will be a cripple for life.

Jay Gould's Son Set Up in Business.

Jay Gould, to establish his son, George Gould, in business, has just invested $500,000 in a new firm, to be called W. E. Connor & Co., and of which he is to be special partner. The active partners of the new concern are Washington E. Connor, George Gould, and George F. Morrison. They will transact a general banking and brokerage business. George Gould is about 22 years old, and for five years past has been in his father's office.

Rubber Works Burned.

SOUTH HANOVER, Mass., Sept. 2.—The extensive rubber works of Eugene H. Clapp, in this town, were burned this morning. The fire is believed to have caught in a pile of waste cloth, that had been separated from the rubber. A large addition had been made to the works the present summer, and new machinery had been put in. The only things saved are the new Corliss engine and the new brick engine house. The total loss approximates $75,000. The building and stock were insured for $25,125.

MRS. WYLIE'S STOLEN COUPONS.

Taken from the Northampton Bank and Sold in the Frankfort Public Exchange.

When the Northampton (Mass.) Bank was robbed, in January, 1876, Mrs. Fanny D. Wylie had in the bank for safe keeping a number of mortgage coupon bonds of the Pacific Railroad of Missouri, which were among the articles stolen. Thirty-six of these coupons, of the par value of $1,080, all past due, were on the 30th of December, 1878, purchased at the Public Exchange in Frankfort-on-the Main by the firm of Lazard, Speyer & Ellissen of a reputable merchant of Frankfort, named Leopold Gompertz, for their fall market price. The purchasers then sent the coupons to Speyer & Co. of this city for collection. The railroad company gave the latter firm a check for the amount, whereupon Mrs. Wylie brought a suit in the Supreme Court against Speyer & Co., in which payment of the check was stopped by injunction. Judge Van Vorst, before whom the case was tried at Special Term, has given a decision for the plaintiff, saying:

"It seems quite clear under the law of this State that plaintiff's title to the coupons was wholly unaffected by the purchase of them by Lazard, Speyer & Ellissen in Frankfort. There is nothing to impeach the good faith or honesty of the purchasers; but that transaction, the coupons being overdue, cannot avail to invest them with a title. After their maturity the coupons lost the attribute of negotiability, and they dropped to the category of ordinary property, to which title does not pass by mere delivery." Judge Van Vorst holds, in conclusion, that though, according to the law in Frankfort, a purchaser of coupons, acting in good faith, for a valuable consideration, obtains a title thereto against all others, whether the purchase be made after or before they fell due, yet that the rights of the parties in this action must be determined by the laws of New York, where the action is brought.

ROBBING THE DOCTORS.

An Alleged Sneak Thief who was Caught Through a Girl's Quick Wit.

For some weeks past physicians in Brooklyn have complained to the police of a man who robbed their offices after gaining admission in their absence on the pretence of waiting to see them. Police Captain McLaughlin sent a description of the man to the physicians in his precinct, and requested them to warn the police if any one called answering the description.

On Thursday afternoon a man about 5 feet 7 inches tall, with sallow complexion, black hair, and full beard, trimmed short, called at Dr. Jewett's residence, in Gates avenue, near Redford, and said that he wanted to see the Doctor on professional business. He was shown into the parlor, where he was told that he could wait until the Doctor's return. The maid servant, in going into the basement, heard the man softly step across the floor toward the office, which is in the rear, and remembering her instructions, she ran to the street to give the alarm. She called a letter carrier, the only man in sight, and as he approached the intruder ran down Bedford avenue, where he was caught by a policeman. He gave the name of William E. Johnson.

He was identified as having robbed Dr. Newman's house, at 110 Madison street, of $24 worth of jewelry and clothing, and as having stolen an overcoat from Dr. Henry, in Halsey street, and a watch from Dr. Spooner.

General Strike at Galveston.

GALVESTON, Sept. 2.—A general strike took place here yesterday among several classes of workingmen, including longshoremen, car drivers, laborers at the oil mills, cotton pickers, etc. The demands of the longshoremen only were acceded to. Large crowds assembled in Market street, and all attempts to run the street cars along the different lines had to be abandoned, on account of the opposition of the strikers. The car drivers' strike was ended this morning by the Street Car Company complying with the strikers' demands.

Spotted Tail's Murderer.

DEADWOOD, Dak., Sept. 2.—Crow Dog, the murderer of Spotted Tail, arrived here last night. The trial will be held next week. In an interview last night Crow Dog said he was satisfied that he could prove that the killing was justifiable. He seems relieved at being out of the reach of Spotted Tail's relatives and friends.
