MRS. MARGARET GILL'S SUFFERING.

Accusing Policeman Wilson of having Kicked Her when She Could Not Walk.

Margaret Gill, a slight, pale woman of 23, lying on a cot in one of the alcoholic cells of Bellevue Hospital last evening, told a SUN reporter a sad story. Her voice was low and husky. She asked several times that the door or window of the cell might be opened to give her air, saying she feared that otherwise she could not survive the night. She said:

"I am a married woman. My name is Margaret Gill. My husband's name is John Gill. He is a blacksmith, and we were married last February. Before that I worked at housework. I live at 9 Forsyth street, and have lived there several months with my husband, except when I was sick and had to go to the hospital. My husband was kind to me and provided for me. Last Saturday night he went out, and I went to find him. I was on my way back to my home, about 11 o'clock, when I met a man in Forsyth street on the block next to where I live. I thought it was a man I knew, who was acquainted with my husband. I spoke to him, but found I had made a mistake. Then Policeman Wilson of the Eldridge street station came up and said, 'You come along with me.' 'What am I to do that for?' I asked; 'I don't know you.' 'I'll let you know me,' he said, and he began to pull me.

'Let me alone,' I cried; 'I am a married woman.' 'I don't care whether you are or not,' he said. I told him I was not doing anything wrong, but he pulled and hauled me to make me go with him. I begged him to let me stop and rest, as I was very weak and could not walk so far without resting. I sank to the sidewalk, and then he kicked me in the side. It is that kick that made me spit blood. I never spat blood before. I am in great pain, and I do not think I shall live through the night if they shut the door on me. I never saw the policeman before. When I was taken up before the Judge the policeman said he knew me and had arrested me before; but that was not true. I had nobody to speak for me, and they sent me to the Essex Market Court. After I was taken before the Judge they put me in Essex Market prison, and when they found I was sick they brought me here. They have not treated me badly here, but it is very hard to breathe in this place. I feel as if I was choking all the time. One woman who knows me has been to see me, but my husband has not been here. I think he would come if he could get a pass.'

Dr. Stone, who has charge of the patient, said: "She was brought in here under the influence of alcohol, and had coughed up eight ounces of blood. The bleeding was readily stopped by the remedies given. Her general condition was very good. I could detect no evidence of contusion or fracture of the rib. She rested well during the night. I found, on examination this morning, the first stage of phthisis at the apex of the right lung. Her condition to-day is much improved. I do not think her blood spitting could have been caused by any blow."

Policeman Wilson said: "I did not strike or kick the woman. I had no occasion to do so. She came along very quietly. My attention was attracted to her on Saturday night by hearing her quarreling with a man, who ran away down Chrystie street. She called him a foul name, and said he had insulted her. She called me by name, and asked me to let her go. I had arrested her once before, some time ago, but as she was weak and seemed to be sick, I let her go. I arrested her on Saturday for intoxication, and Justice Murray fined her $7."

The doorman of the station house said that when Mrs. Gill was brought in she did not complain of having been kicked, but said in the cell that she was sick.

The Foot Racers.

Pedestrianism is rather down at the heel at present. Late exhibition races have proved failures, and there is little encouragement for fresh ventures here. Harriman's challenge remains unanswered. Entries for the Ennis race are very slow in coming forward with the necessary $100. The race itself has been postponed until Nov. 14 on account of Madison Square Garden being used for the Fourth Avenue car horses.

Rowell has given up his contemplated trip to Australia for the present. He found that if he started now he would arrive there at the height of the hot summer term. He likes this country, and will remain several months, although he believes there is no profit in racing now. He has taken a great fancy to trotters. The fiver he purchased was not fast enough for him, and he sold it, without losing, he says. He intends to buy another, and is having a sulky built to take home. He says there are no sulkies in all England.

Commissioner Coleman's Plan Commended.

The sub-committee recently appointed by the Citizens' Street Cleaning Committee of Twenty-one to call upon Street Cleaning Commissioner Coleman and talk to him about affairs in his department performed that duty yesterday. Messrs. Jackson S. Schultz, Morris K. Jesup, and D. Willis James of the committee were in consultation with Mr. Coleman over two hours, during which time the Commissioner explained in detail the proposed plan of filling in Hart's island's sunken meadows, and thereby effecting a saving to the city of over $100,000 per year. The committee expressed their appreciation of the plan, and told Mr. Coleman they thought the streets were better cleaned now than before he took office. All agreed that the ordinance calling for the separation of ashes and garbage should be enforced.

Fifteen Minutes of Hard Fighting.

Officer Foley of the Yorkville Police Court squad went to 459 West Fifty-third street yesterday morning to arrest Michael Duffy on his wife's complaint of ill treatment. Duffy was busy chopping wood.

"Where's your authority?" he asked, when the policeman made known his errand.

Foley produced his warrant, and at Duffy's request read it aloud. Duffy ordered him off the premises. He refused to go and Duffy quick as a flash, knocked him down with the butt of wood. Foley had his short club with him. They fell to work and fought fifteen minutes. Then another policeman arrested and Duffy was made prisoner. Both Foley and Duffy had severe scalp wounds, Foley's being a cut half an inch long. Duffy will be examined as to his sanity. He has been arrested three times on charges of insanity and released.

Mrs. Hibbard's Plea of Guilty.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hibbard of Woodside visited Charles W. Fuller's crockery store in West Twenty-fifth street last Thursday, and took away a teapot for which she had not paid. Mr. Fuller followed her out of the store, and had her arrested. She pleaded guilty in the Special Sessions yesterday. Several witnesses were in court to vouch for her respectable social standing. Mr. Fuller did not appear, and the Court was informed that he wished to withdraw the charge. Justice Kilbreth objected to the withdrawal of the charge, and Mrs Hibbard was remanded for trial.
