MRS. COLEMAN SENTENCED.

She Falls from her Chair and is Carried from the Room by Deputy Sheriffs.

Mrs. Elizabeth Coleman, who shot and killed George T. Coles on the night of the 19th of July last, and who last week was convicted of manslaughter in the third degree, received her sentence yesterday. She was brought to the court at 10 o'clock. Her mother and cousin accompanied her, and sat one on either side. Her children were also present. Judge Davis took his seat on the bench at 10½. Judge Brady accompanying him. The room was thronged. The prisoner was dressed as during her trial, handsomely in black, and looked well.

Clerk Sparks, when the Judge had taken his seat, bade her rise, and said: "What have you to say why judgment should not be pronounced against you according to law?"

The prisoner, in a low voice, responded: "Nothing, sir."

Judge Davis directed the prisoner to sit down, and, having learned from her counsel that he had no suggestion to make, pronounced sentence. He said that his duty was a painful one. He hoped that the punishment about to be meted out to the prisoner would be a warning to households in this city not to allow their young and attractive members to enter places of temptation. He referred to the happy family of the prisoner as it existed only a few months ago, and spoke of her loving husband and her innocent children, now destroyed and heartbroken, and left motherless by her folly. He spoke of the danger to young wives and young women in general in being unsecreted to theatres and other places of public amusement, out of the libertines who at all such places lie in wait for their prey. The jury, the Judge said, had shown extreme leniency as to the prisoner. She had had the great benefit of her sex. A man doing as she had done would have suffered the extreme penalty of the law. Very sensibly, at the same time, the jury had not admitted the flimsy pretext of insanity. "The sentence of the Court is," the Judge concluded, "that you be confined at hard labor in the penitentiary for four years."

At these last words the prisoner, who had cried as the Judge addressed her, uttered a shriek and exclaimed, "Oh, my God!" She staggered back in her chair, and would have fallen to the floor had she not been supported. She was lifted by Deputy Sheriffs Smith and Elsas and carried from the room, seemingly insensible, although the color did not forsake her face.

The sentence was the extreme penalty possible under the verdict.

The Widow of Benj. Hunter's Victim.

Mrs. Julia Armstrong, the widow and administratrix of John M. Armstrong, was plaintiff yesterday in the United States Circuit Court in Brooklyn, before Justice Wheeler of Vermont, in a suit against the Mutual Life Insurance Company of this city, to recover the amount of a policy of $10,000 which her husband had upon his life. Armstrong was murdered in Camden, N. J., in January, 1878, and Benjamin Hunter, who held assignments of that policy, a policy in the Provident Life and Trust Company of Philadelphia for $10,000, and one in the Manhattan Life Insurance Company for $5,000, all upon the life of Armstrong, was hanged for the crime.

The defendant contended that the fact that John M. Armstrong had no interest in the transaction, and that the policy was obtained by Benjamin Hunter with the intention to steal and defraud the company, caused the death of Armstrong after the first premium was paid. The policy, it is claimed, was delivered to Hunter upon an assignment written by Armstrong, and Hunter paid the first quarterly premium. The widow of John M. Armstrong, whose late husband an experience of great suffering, and his income was to account, both of such in books. William M. Keller, aged 66, an uncle of J. M. Armstrong, testified that he saw Armstrong dead in his house in Philadelphia. Documentary proof of the death of Armstrong, the letters and the letters of administration granted both in New York and Philadelphia, was introduced, and then the court adjourned.

For Shooting his Landlady.

The case of William Sinclair, 27 years of age, who shot and killed Mrs. Catherine Crove, his landlady, in Chatham street, on the 20th of January last, was called before Judge Brady in the Court of Over and Terminer yesterday. A jury was drawn by 2 o'clock, when, at the request of Assistant District Attorney Leon, the case was adjourned until Monday next. The accused sat in the prisoner's box by his side in the court room. His counsel are Messrs. Wm. F. Kornder and D. Northland, having been assigned by the Legal Aid Society. The prisoner has written a letter to District Attorney Phelps, stating that if he (Sinclair) can escape with his life he will plead guilty to the charge of manslaughter, and thus save himself from being hanged.
