ANOTHER NEW JERSEY PROPHET.

A Farm Hand who has Gained More Honor than his Neighbor Devoe.

Oradell is one of the most picturesque little villages in New Jersey. It consists of about fifty dwellings, of varied styles of architecture, distributed at irregular intervals among the tall oaks on either side of the Hackensack River, nineteen miles from Jersey City. Within four miles of Oradell, Weather Prophet Devoe presages the weather we are not likely to have. But a greater prophet than Devoe has sprung up in Oradell—a modest, unassertive cloud reader, content with village fame. He is a mulatto, about 19 years of age, and responds to the name of "Toby."

"Who," asked a SUN reporter, as he entered the store of John W. Van Buskirk, a prominent villager, "is 'Toby,' and what has he done that entitles him to popularity in Oradell?"

"Toby," said Mr. Van Buskirk, "is our weather prophet. He is a man-of-all-work on the farm of Albert Oakley, and occupies all of his spare time star gazing. Every evening for the past three years he has given the village, by means of a code of signals with a bass-toned whistle, his prediction of the weather for the following day. At about a quarter to 8 o'clock he ascends a hill east of the village and blows his whistle. We call him the Ethiopian Signal Service Bureau. Last spring he came into my store and asked me if I wanted one of his books. I said I would take one. He brought me a small card the next day, on which was written: 'The coming summer will be very warm. Plenty snow will fall during the winter.' Following this was an explanation of his whistles, or signals: 'Ten notes, clear; six notes, rain; four notes, snow; three notes, uncertain.' At the bottom of the card were the words, 'Price 2 cents.' Every person in the village who is not asleep at a quarter to 8 o'clock in the evening can hear the notes of that whistle, for they are deep and clear. I and many others, who have noticed the signals and understand them, can testify to their very frequent correctness. That Hackensack man, De Voe, does not prophesy with one-fifth the accuracy of Toby."

Jacob J. Demarest, another prominent villager, said he would match Toby against the Weather Bureau, with great confidence.

William Veldram said he listened to the notes of Toby's whistle every night. His prognostications were more often right than wrong. The ticket agent at the Oradell railroad station also expressed profound belief in Toby's predictions, and told the reporter where the modest soothsayer could be found.

At the extreme eastern end of the village stands a wide, low house, with a slight touch of ante-Revolutionary aspect. The tinging of a very modern bell brought Mr. Albert Oakley to the door. He conducted the reporter to a room in the back part of the house. Standing before a bucket of water, which he had just set upon a table, was "Toby." When the reporter was introduced to him he let his chin fall bashfully upon his breast, and gazed into the bucket. Under an old slouch hat without a band was a very large mouth, a pair of purplish-blue eyes, a nose decidedly Ethiopian in shape, and a light-brown complexion.

"I understand," said the reporter, "that you foretell the weather, Toby?"

"Yes, sir," said Toby, hesitatingly. "I does sometimes."

"How do you do it?"

"Mostly," responded the colored prophet, as he looked out of the window and dabbled in the water with his thumb, "by watchin' the clouds?"

"Any other way?"

"Yes, sir; by the way the air feels around me."

"How long have you been foretelling the weather?"

"Ever since I can't remember, sir. I whistle 'cause I want the people to know what the weather will be. Mine is a big whistle that I made myself out of walnut. I ain't got it with me; I keep it hid."

Toby then told what his signals indicated, and that his books or cards issued last spring were written by some one else. He said he could neither read nor write.

"What is your other name, Toby?"

"I ain't got any. The people just call me Toby; and I don't know how old I am, indeed, sir, nor what I was born. It's been so long ago that I don't exactly remember where, but I guess it was somewhere about here."

"What kind of weather will we have to-morrow (Friday) and Saturday?"

"I think," answered the dark prognostictor, as he gazed in a professional way out of the window, "that it will clear up Friday and be colder. There will be snow Saturday."

TROUBLE IN THE VIRGINIA SENATE.

A Resolution that Caused the President Pro Tem. to Resign.

RICHMOND, Jan. 26.—In the Senate to-day a resolution was adopted appointing a committee of three to relieve the President pro tem. of the responsibility of appointing the special committee provided for in the resolution adopted yesterday to investigate the truth of alleged reports that certain officers of the Senate, whose names are not given, had by corrupt means attempted to influence votes of members of that body. This action brought on a sharp discussion, in which Senator Riddleberger, the mover of the resolution of investigation, attempted to have the resolution reconsidered, believing as he did that its adoption was aimed at debarring him from the Chairmanship of the proposed select committee, an act of discourtesy which was without precedent, and could not be allowed to be consummated. After full explanations, all the motions to reconsider were withdrawn.

In the beginning of the debate Gen. Elliott, the President pro tem., had vacated the chair, and at its close he rose to a question of personal privilege. He then in most feeling terms spoke of the pleasure and pride he had felt when the Senate had chosen him its presiding officer; but said that now, when it was evident from the tenor of the resolution just adopted that the Senate had lost confidence in him, he felt bound in honor to resign to return the trust placed in his hands, and he would therefore tender his resignation as President pro tem. This unexpected turn of affairs created quite a sensation, and brought many Senators excitedly to their feet, some endorsing Mr. Elliott's action, but all joining in opposing the acceptance of his resignation. Gen. Elliott, after acknowledging the many kind expressions from all sides, said that his sense of self-respect would not permit him to change the course he had taken.

A resolution was then adopted to the effect that no discourtesy whatever was intended to the President pro tem. by the adoption of the resolution. The vote being almost unanimous, the Senate then decided to go into the election of a President pro tem., and Gen. Elliott was placed in nomination for reelection. The roll call showed that he had received the votes of all the Senators present, only one being absent. Gen. Elliott said that, despite this complimentary and kind action, he could not reach the conclusion that he should change his position, and he therefore declined to accept the office which he had to-day resigned. At 3.10 the Senate adjourned.

A School that has Whipped Out Two Teachers.

NORWICH, Jan. 25.—In a wild part of the town of Montville, known as Raymond Hill, is a little old brown school house, in which instruction is given to about a dozen tough urchins. The district is now in distress because no teacher can be found able to cope with the pugnacious pupils. The first teacher this term was Miss Alexander, a resident of this city, who assumed charge in last October. She opened the school house on Monday, and was put out by her pupils the following Wednesday. She quit the district in an angry and disgusted mood. Her successor was Miss Alice Whaley, who had slightly better success. For several weeks it was a close struggle between her and the boys, neither side gaining any important success. About two weeks ago the question of supremacy was finally decided. Miss Whaley undertook to punish one of the boys, and the others set upon her. A hot conflict ensued, and Miss Whaley was put out of the school house. The girls took no active part in the fight, but they did gather at different places between her desk and the doorsteps. She did not attempt to return, and for the past two weeks the school has been without a teacher. Miss Whaley was a graduate of a young ladies' normal college, and had her first experience in school teaching in the Montville district. The ringleaders of the unruly boys are said to be two sons of a Mr. Fowler, 8 and 11 years old.

Another Connecticut Gold Mine.

NORWICH, Jan. 24.—A recent number of THE SUN described a gold mine in Windham County of this State. Since then a gold mine has been discovered in North Stonington, in the southeastern part of this county. Mr. Jerome of Uncasville, who has had large experience in Western mines, has found earth that showed strong traces of gold. Specimens were sent to the State assayers of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, who reported that their assays showed a minimum of $9 and a maximum of $362 a ton, according to the different veins. The average assay of 146 samples is $50 a ton, and the estimated cost of working the ore is only $5 a ton. In order to obtain a conclusive test of the value of the ores, four barrels were shipped to New York last week. If the result is favorable, a North Stonington Gold Mining Company will be formed at once.

$3,760 for the Loss of a Husband.

ATHENS, Ohio, Jan. 24.—John Fiscus came to this neighborhood from New York ten years ago. For several years he worked in the mines of the Walstonburg Coal Mining Company, near this city. Last fall a boiler, old and worthless, exploded in the Walstonburg mine, and as a result three men were killed. John Fiscus was one of the victims. He left a wife and several small children. In December last Ella Fiscus, administratrix of John Fiscus, brought an action in the Summit County Common Pleas Court against the Walstonburg Coal Company for $10,000 for the loss of her husband's life. The case has been on trial here during the past week, and was given to the jury yesterday. In thirty minutes the jury returned in a verdict for the plaintiff, awarding her the full amount of $10,000. Ella Fiscus is a hard working and respectable woman, and has been living in poverty since her husband's death.

Escaping from the Auburn Prison.

AUBURN, Jan. 26.—Three convicts escaped from prison this morning at 3 o'clock by sawing the bars of a hospital window near the walls, and reaching the ground by means of a rope. One was recaptured. John D. Miller of Syracuse, sentenced for thirteen years and four months, for grand larceny, and Frank Malone, sentenced for two years, are still at large. A reward of $50 each is offered for their capture.

Col. O'Brien Arrested for Forgery.

TROY, Jan. 26.—Col. Thomas H. O'Brien, a prominent Republican and an officer in the 34th Regiment of New York during the war, was indicted for forging his brother's name to a check for $40 and has been arrested in St. Louis. He will be brought here on a requisition.

Fight Between Mexicans and Apaches.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 26. A despatch from Guaymas says that authentic reports have been received of an engagement of the state troops with Apaches in the mountains bordering the Yaqui and Mayo Indian Reservations. At last accounts the troops were in hot pursuit

KELLEY ON PROTECTION.

Duties to be Maintained Against the Oppression of British Capitalists.

Congressman W. D. Kelley lectured before the Revenue Reform Club in the Brooklyn Art Association Rooms on Wednesday upon "The Protective System, a Vital Element in National Policy." Mr. Kelley is tall and spare, with sunken eyes, dark hair, full whiskers streaked with gray, and has a rich, deep voice, of which he has perfect control. His manner in speaking is magnetic. He reaps applause with a sentence and a sweep of his hand. He said he believed the prevalence of his views involved the welfare of mankind. The doctrine of free trade, of which he was once an adherent, was based upon assumptions, while protectionists challenged statistics and invited history and authorities. There was no common ground between the adherents of the two schools. He held that it was the duty of the nation to maintain a system of protective duties against all commerce, and especially against the coarse and brutal oppression of British capitalists, and as to that oppression he appealed to the history of the British Parliament toward all its colonies.

"Ireland, at the beginning of the century," he said, "was a manufacturing nation, but British free trade has closed its manufactures. The policy of England is to crush out all industry in a foreign country, by selling goods under cost for years, to break down enterprise, and then to reap the benefit of a newly acquired market. The large capital of England is one of its greatest implements of warfare against foreign enterprise. I stand ready to impose such duties upon imports as to defeat all such unholy conspiracies of English capital."

Mr. Kelley, in referring to the silk industry, which under protection had grown strong in this country, said that American women could buy a better article in silk in Paterson than is imported. He told the story of a silk weaver, who in Coventry worked with his three daughters at the looms. In a silk factory, and who is now at work in Paterson, supporting his family by his labor alone, while his daughters go to school.

COATED THICK WITH ICE.

The Experience of a Ship's Crew that Fought for Life Against Continued Gales.

When the steamship Roxburgh Castle, Capt. Turpin, from Swansea, Wales, with merchandise consigned to Simpson & Spence, 78 and 80 Broad street, entered this harbor on Wednesday, five days overdue, she looked like the ghost of a steamship. From stem to stern and decks to topmasts, everything was thickly coated with ice. As she lay at her berth at Pier 37, North River, she was photographed. All day the crew worked with axes and crowbars to remove the ice, but at nightfall it was difficult to see what progress had been made.

First Mate Berry said: "We sailed from Swansea on the 5th inst., and on the second day out we seemed to be in the middle of a cyclone. On the 7th inst. the steamer shipped a sea which broke in a part of the cattle deck forward of the bridge. The door was smashed, six hansat pipes torn away, and other damage done. Next day a sea smashed the bridge on the starboard side, knocking in more of the cattle deck, breaking off the angle-iron beams, so that the starboard side of the deck went dancing all over the spar deck. The men had to throw themselves on these loose pieces of deck at the risk of their lives and pitch them overboard. The men were constantly drenched with freezing salt water. On Jan. 12, 13, and 14 much damage was done by heavy seas, and during the next two days we were busy clearing away the wreckage on deck, when, on the 17th inst., strong gales arose and a heavy wave smashed in the wheelhouse window and destroyed the binnacle, lamps, and compasses.

"On the morning of the 18th inst. we heard the cargo adrift in the hold. The hatches were all battened down, and it was difficult to get to the compartment where 150 tons of lead, iron, and tin was adrift and driving against the ship's sides. For the next twelve hours not a man ate a morsel of food. Every one was fighting for his life. We managed to get one of the hatches loose and secured the cargo. Third Mate Geary had his ankle crushed in the fight with the rolling metal. Fortunately the wind moderated on the 19th inst., but at night gales blew again, and all hands fell to and passed the whole cargo into the next compartment, where it could be secured. The thermometer was 2 degrees below zero."

DISHONEST STOCK OPERATIONS.

Three Boston Capitalists Arrested on a Charge of Perjury.

BOSTON, Jan. 26.—On March 6, 1879, an Improved Ship Berth Company was organized in this city, several officers of the company making affidavit that a capital of $100,000 was paid in, and that by a vote of the directors it was decided that a part of that capital was to be devoted to the purchase of certain patent rights. Among the officers of the company were Edward P. Cassell, Robert M. Vose, F. W. Pelton, and Henry McLellan, all well known in moneyed circles. On Jan. 5, 1880, the company reorganized under the title of the Hussein Ship Berth Company, and Cassell and McLellan being in the second company. During the boom in stocks the shares of their company reached high figures and were extensively sought for by investments, the value of the shares sold being stated at nearly $200,000. The price of this stock soon began to fall, however, until it was worth very little. This caused much discouragement to the stockholders, and at a recent meeting a majority of the new holders obtained control of the company. Suspicion having been excited by the previous transaction of the company, and a committee was appointed to investigate the books of the concern. This investigation resulted in the swearing out of warrants against Messrs. Vose, Pelton, Cassell, and McLellan, for perjury, it being alleged that they falsely made affidavit that the capital stock had been paid in. Pelton, McLellan, and Cassell were arrested yesterday afternoon, but all three failed to furnish the sum of $2,000 and were released. Vose is out of town. There are two counts each against Cassell and McLellan, they having been members of both companies.

Signing Away Her Right of Dower.

The suit of Mary Bruen against David S. Bruen and other heirs of Gamaliel Bruen, which was tried in the Kings County Circuit Court yesterday, was an action to set aside an ante-nuptial agreement made with the decedent on the ground of fraud. Mrs. Bruen said that she was a widow in 1872 when Bruen asked her to marry him, and as an inducement he offered her $2,000. When he called on her on Jan. 11, 1873, he took from his pocket two papers, which he asked her to sign, and she affixed her signature without knowing their contents. Then she received the money and they were married. After Bruen's death she learned that the papers which she had signed contained his release from all claims for dower in the event that his death occurred first. The jury returned a verdict for the defendant by direction of the Court.

The Drifting Steamship Edam.

Capt. Hass of the ship J. W. Wendt, which arrived yesterday, reported that on Sunday last he saw a four-masted steamship in company with a brig rigged steamship, which vessels he believed to be the Persian Monarch and the Edam.

The revenue cutter Samuel Dexter left Newport, R. I., at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, by order of Secretary Folger, to search for the Edam. The revenue cutter Grant left this port on Wednesday for New London, and orders were sent there for her to begin the search at once. Both of these vessels are too small to be of any service to the Edam in rough weather.

Messrs. Patsch, Edye & Co. said yesterday that the Edam would make her way under sail to this port or to the Bermudas.

War Against Theatre Ticket Brokers.

Col. Sinn of the Brooklyn Park Theatre is active in his crusade against the ticket speculators, and says that he intends if possible to abolish the business, or have it conducted under such restrictions as not to operate against the pleasure of the theatre goers or the advantage of the theatre proprietors. Petitions are being circulated, and numerously signed, asking the Mayor and Common Council to put an end to the speculation. As no business that does not violate the law and that pays a license fee should be abolished, the theatre proprietors hope to have the license fee fixed at $500. One veteran speculator, who has grown rich in the business, expresses the hope that this will be done, as he will pay the license if then has a monopoly in Brooklyn, because, he says, his rivals cannot afford to pay such a tax.

An Alderman's Explanation.

Upon the motion pending before Justice Gilbert to purge ex Alderman Roberts of contempt in voting to override the Mayor's elevated railroad veto, in spite of the injunction then in force to restrain him and his associates, Alderman Weir yesterday made affidavit that he was sitting by Alderman Roberts at the meeting of Dec. 31, 1881, when Alderman McCarty, Chairman of the Railroad Committee, approached and said: "The injunction is dissolved." Soon after that the vote upon the resolution overriding the veto was cast. Alderman Weir swears that he believed the information given by Alderman McCarty to be true.

Still Calling on Mayor Low.

A delegation from Greenpoint, comprising Thomas S. Smith, John Engle, Col. W. H. Paine, G. J. Roberts, John Fallon, Jefferson Patton, Jr., George W. Bell, and others called on Mayor Low in Brooklyn to complain that the cleaning of taffar Weiss at Milton and Wm. streets and Greenpoint avenue, which had been ordered to be suppressed by the Health Department as a nuisance, remains there still. Mr. Smith complained of the inefficiency of the Health Department, and hoped the Mayor would consider their complaints in making his appointments. The Mayor said that he would.

The Charity Ball.

The Charity Ball in the Academy of Music on Tuesday evening next for the benefit of the Nursery and Child's Hospital promises to be as brilliant as that of any previous year. The demand for tickets has been brisk, and a few unsold boxes can be obtained from Mrs. H. Apgeton of 28 East Thirty-sixth street. Other ladies, as usual, have taken charge of subscribed boxes. Years, and are leaving nothing undone for this occasion, are confident of a grand success. Among those who have charge of boxes are Mrs. Astor, Mrs. William Mayor Grace, Mrs. S. L. M. Barlow, Mrs. C. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Hawkins, Mr. Hoey, Mr. Moss and Mr. J. W. Harper, Jr.

$190,000 FIRE IN LANCASTER, PA.

The Inquirer Printing and Publishing Company's Building Burned.

LANCASTER, Pa., Jan. 26.—The Inquirer Printing and Publishing Company's building took fire at 1 A. M. to-day, and the building and the contents were a total loss. The company printed about twenty different periodicals—weeklies and monthlies published in Philadelphia, Washington, and other places—besides a local weekly and much miscellaneous job work. The total loss to the company is at least $90,000, for which there are $13,000 insurance on building and $39,000 on the stock. Only the front wall is left standing, and it will cost more than the salvage to remove the debris. The building will probably be rebuilt and the operations of the company continued. Godey's Lady's Book, the School Journal, Mishler's Herb Bitters, Brock's Mathematical Works, and many other productions of the establishment lose stereotypes and electrotypes of value. J. W. Hiemenze's shoe store, in the same building, loses $10,000 (insured for three-fourths), and Frey's wall-paper store adjoining loses about the same amount. The walls of the printing office crushed through a building next to it, carrying the roof down with a billiard saloon and the tables, and all went on through to the cellar. The total losses resulting from the fire will foot up $120,000; insurance about $75,000.

CATHERINE DUER'S LONG LIFE.

A Daughter of a Conspicuous Character of the Time of the Revolutionary War.

Catherine Duer died at Brighton, S. I., on Wednesday, aged 94 years. Her father was Col. William Duer of the Revolutionary army, and afterward a member of the Colonial Congress. He was born in England in 1747, and when a young man was aide to Lord Clive in India. He came to America in 1768, and purchased land in Washington County, New York. He was a Colonel of the militia, Judge of the County Court, and member of the New York Provincial Congress and Committee of Safety. He was one of the committee that drafted the first Constitution of the State of New York in 1777. He was also Secretary of the Treasury Board until the reorganization under the National Constitution. He was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury under Alexander Hamilton. His wife was Catherine, daughter of Gen. William Alexander, the claimant of the Scottish Earldom of Stirling. Their daughter Catherine, who has just died, was born near Albany. She has an elder sister now living at the age of 95 years in New Orleans, and an younger several years before her in years past. Miss Catherine Duer has never been far away from this city. Her brother was John Duer, the jurist, who died on Staten Island in 1858. He was a member of the Superior Court of New York in 1849. Another brother was President of Columbia College thirty-five years ago. After living in Goshen many years ago, and having events in Montgomery, N. Y., Miss Catherine Duer went about four years ago to live with her nephew, Geo. W. Duer of New Brighton, in whose house she died. Her grand-nephews and nieces have grown up to be men and women of middle life, among them is John Duer, the lawyer of Wall street. The Duer family vault was formerly under the old church of St. Thomas, at Broadway and Houston street, and when that building gave way before the tide of trade a vault was built at Jamaica, L. I. The interment will take place there this afternoon.
