SEVENTEEN BOYS NABBED,

For Cutting Monkey Shines about the Handsome Philosopher of Madison Square.

Justice Harry Ford, clean shaven and trim as barber could make him, took his seat on the Jefferson Market Court bench yesterday to relieve Justice Bixby. The court doors opened, and in marched fourteen policemen. They were dressed in the gray uniform of the Madison square squad. Polished badges glittered on their padded chests. Each policeman had a blubbering small boy fast by the coat sleeve, and Capt. Beatty looked after a baton of three youngsters. All the juvenile prisoners were neatly dressed and were of respectable parentage. The cause of the wholesale arrest was a complaint made to Capt. Beatty by George Francis-Train that the boys tormented him.

Mr. Train is accustomed to sit in the park on pleasant evenings, and at such times he is surrounded by many well-behaved children, who listen to his talk. He is very fond of addressing such auditors. The prisoners were unruly children who thought it greater fun to tease the philosopher than to listen to his stories. They danced and shouted about him, raced over the grass, and made themselves a general nuisance to others besides Mr. Train. This was repeated on several occasions, and on Sunday evening, when the noisy crowd again began their pranks, Capt. Beatty suddenly called on his squad, and the fourteen policemen closed on the romping children with a rush, and made them tearful and repentant captives. Complaint of disorderly conduct was made against them yesterday, and after being lectured by the magistrate, they were all discharged.
