S. H. KNEELAND'S VICTORY.

He and his Friends Elect their Board of Directors of the Metropolitan Railroad.

At noon yesterday the stockholders of the Manhattan Railway and of the Metropolitan Elevated Railroad met at 71 Broadway to elect directors. The meeting of the former lasted only an hour, and resulted in the reelection of the old Board by a unanimous vote of 219,000 shares. The ticket was as follows: Jay Gould, Cyrus W. Field, Russell Sage, R. M. Gallaway, Edward M. Field, George J. Gould, Sidney Dillon, Samuel Sloan, José F. Navarro, W. E. Connor, Geo. S. Scott, J. H. Hall, and H. F. Dimock.

The Metropolitan meeting was widely different in result. The Gould-Sage-Field party were on hand with their counsel, David Dudley Field. Mr. S. H. Kneeland and the members of the opposition pool were equally prompt in appearing, and with them their counsel, Robert Sewall. Some of the members of the pool were willing to vote a compromise ticket, on which both interests should be represented, but were compelled by their agreement to vote solidly with the pool. When the voting began the statutory requirements were most rigorously insisted upon by both sides. Every voter was challenged, and the counsel of the opposing interests kept up a continual skirmishing. Every voter was compelled to swear that he had not, either directly or impliedly, received any promise or any sum of money, or anything of value whatever to influence his vote, and that he had not sold or otherwise disposed of his interest in or title to any shares in respect to which he offered to vote, but that all such shares were actually in his possession or subject to his control. As the Kneeland party have been unable to transfer some of the stock which they own except into Manhattan second preferred, which they would not do, they appeared as owners of stock which did not stand in their names on the books of the company. On the other hand, the Gould-Sage-Field party appeared with proxies which they could not use, as the Kneeland party produced the stock upon which the proxies had been given as proof that the shares had passed from the control of the persons giving the proxies. On the many points raised about 29,000 shares of stock were thrown out, most of them held by the Kneeland party. The fight was closely contested by both parties, and the opposing counsel indulged in a great deal of professional sparring. Instead of remaining open for one hour, and closing at 1 o'clock, as advertised, the polls were kept open until nearly 4 o'clock. An hour later Mr. Chas. C. Niebuhr and Col. Jas. J. Slocum, the inspectors, announced the vote. The total vote was upon 32,420 shares, or eighty shares less than half the capital stock. The Kneeland ticket received 27,174 votes, and was declared elected. It was as follows: Joseph S. Stout, Sidney Shepard, Jacob Berry, Joseph V. Burnham, Elijah Smith, Morillo H. Gillett, Thomas T. Buckley, Charles Duggan, Milo H. Gilbert, Sylvester H. Kneeland, and Benjamin W. Gillett. Of the new directors, Messrs. Stout, Berry, and Burnham are members of the New York Stock Exchange; Mr. Smith is a Boston railroad man, who is also interested in the New York City and Northern Railroad; Mr. Buckley is Vice-President of the National Bank of the Republic of this city; Dr. Gilbert is the original projector of the Sixth avenue elevated road; Mr. Shepard is a resident of Oswego; the Messrs. Gillett are of Jersey City, and have been identified with Mr. Kneeland in his legal fight, and Mr. Duggin is a retired contractor of this city, formerly of the firm of Duggin & Crossman.

The Gould-Sage-Field ticket, which received 5,246 votes, was as follows: Russell Sage, Jay Gould, Cyrus W. Field, Chester W. Chapin, Jr., Samuel Sloan, Sidney Dillon, J. F. Navarro, George J. Forrest, Washington E. Connor, G. M. Dodge, and Chester W. Chapin. As soon as they had been notified of their election, the new directors were served with the injunction that Judge Donohue granted on Monday, which restrains the Metropolitan Company and its officers from issuing any of its stock having the ten per cent. guarantee of the Manhattan Company in transfer of outstanding stock. The new Board met at once for organization, and elected S. H. Kneeland President, M. H. Gillett Vice-President, and John E. Body, the incumbent, Secretary and Treasurer.

FOOT BALL RULES.

Some Points of the Difference Between those of England and America.

The English game of foot ball has, up to within a few years past, been played under a multiplicity of rules, the rival schools of Rugby, Eton, and Harrow having had special playing rules of their own, and these have differed not only from the country clubs but from the Oxford and Cambridge University rules to a considerable extent. Of late, however, there has been in England a general adoption of the English Foot Ball Association rules, these and the Rugby Union code now being the popular playing rules of the English clubs. In America, Canada excepted, the code of rules adopted by all our college clubs is that of the American Intercollegiate Association, which is revised each spring at the association's conventions.

The English Association rules greatly favor the kicking of the ball in fact, those rules are intended for literal foot ball, as no player is allowed to handle the ball while in the field of play, either by passing, throwing, or knocking, and no goal can be scored except by a kick from the field. In the Rugby code, on the other hand, carrying and throwing or running in with the ball are admissible, but no goal can be scored except by means of a kick, touch downs not counting in the score. Moreover, the formation of a scrimmage under the Rugby rules differs materially from that of the American college rules. In the former, the moment a fielder puts down the ball, both sides rush to obtain a chance to kick the ball out of the "scrimmage," the sides, backing up the holder of the ball, striving their best to push back the attacking party, while the latter use their roughest efforts to break in on the players defending the unfortunate fielder who holds the ball, the latter too frequently being a very bad "under dog in the fight." In the American college rules the formation of a scrimmage is essentially different, inasmuch as at the moment a ball is held down and a scrimmage follows, the two elevens "line up" on each side of the ball, each man having an antagonist in front of him. The ball is then placed, and the process of "snapping" the ball out from the scrimmage is begun, and it is followed up by the strategic passing of the ball with a view to a successful "run in," or a dashing rush through the opposing ranks.

It will be readily seen that, in this one respect of scrimmages, the American game is decidedly superior to the English Rugby game. Besides, in the American game not only do touch downs count, but also touch downs for safety, the latter showing that a side has been forced to assume the defensive. However, the patrons of foot ball in the metropolis will have an opportunity of witnessing the difference between the rules when the Britannia Club of Montreal visits us this month and plays with our local British Foot Ball Club, both playing under English rules.

FIRING INTO THE CARS.

Incidents of Elevated Railroad Travel—Pistol Shots from Dark Rooms.

An instant after Conductor Fuegirra's train started from the Houston street station of the Ninth avenue elevated railroad on its way down, at about 7:20 o'clock last evening, somebody fired a pistol shot from a building on the east side of Greenwich street. The bullet perforated the quarter-inch pane in a car window, leaving a neat hole without splintering the glass much, and went out through the opposite window, leaving similar evidence of its passage. A SUN reporter's head was less than six inches out of range. The relative positions of the two holes also showed that the shooter had stood in a second-story room of one of the tenement houses that make a row at that point; but the windows of those buildings were all dark, and there was no way of finding out anything more definite. Some of the passengers were disturbed by the incident, but the conductor was not.

"Such things happen so frequently," he said, "that we are getting used to them. This train has been fired into three or four times, and always between Houston and Desbrosses streets. But nobody has been hurt yet. We always report the matter, but what can be done about it? The scoundrels fire out of dark rooms, and so can't be caught. Nobody knows what the motive is, and I guess it must be pure cussedness."

Similar mysterious shots have long been a puzzle to the railroad officials. They are fired on all the elevated lines, and necessarily by a number of different persons; but all the detective efforts have failed to expose a shooter, or a reasonable motive for the shooting.

Murder in Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 8.—The body of a man, which was identified as that of A. T. Simpson of this city, was found at an early hour this morning lying in a pool of blood on Liberty street. His face and hands were cut and blood was oozing from his ears and nostrils. It is supposed that he was murdered in a house near by and his body thrown into the street. Three women—Mrs. Wright, Clara Warren, and Mrs. Davidson, inmates of the house—have been arrested on suspicion.

Explosion of Powder Mills.

WINDSOR MILLS, Quebec, Nov. 8.—The Press powder mills were blown up to-day. The mill where the powder was ground and polished exploded first, and the concussion caused by this exploded the mill containing the press and cylinders, which was eight feet distant. Both buildings were destroyed. About six tons of powder exploded, ten acres of ground being covered with the debris. John Randall, the only man in the mill, was blown to pieces.

MELVILLE'S NARRATIVE.

An Account of his Hazardous Sledge Trip to Henrietta Island.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Chief Engineer Melville, in his testimony to-day before the Jeannette Board of Inquiry, gave the following account of his sledge trip to Henrietta Island:

On May 16 or 17, 1881, land was sighted toward the north. We were drifting rapidly to the northwest, and on May 24 or 25 other land was sighted. About May 30 the Captain asked me if I thought I was strong enough to reach the land, which was estimated to be about fifteen miles distant. At this time Mr. Chipp, the executive officer, was sick from lead poisoning. Mr. Danenhower had been sick with his eyes for some time, and several others on board were also sick from lead poisoning. On May 31 Capt. De Long gave me orders to take charge of a sled party, with sixteen dogs and seven days' provisions, and, accompanied by Mr. Dunbar, Seamen Erickson and Ninderman, Fireman Bartlett, and Coal Heaver Walter Sharvell, effect a landing, build a cairn on some prominent point, erect a flagstaff, leave a record, and name the island Henrietta Island, and claim it as a portion of the territory of the United States. The sled and boat were fully equipped with arms and ammunition, a tent, sleeping bags, cook stove, medicine chest, provisions, &c. The party landed on the island June 3. I carried out my instructions, and made a hurried survey of one end of the island. My orders were not for remain on the island more than twenty four hours. I remained about twelve hours, and made sketches of the promontories, &c.; took bearings and made a small chart, which will be found with the ship's record. On June 5 or 6 I returned to the ship. During this trip Icemaster Dunbar was badly affected by snow blindness, and Seamen Niederman and Erickson were badly affected by cramps, supposed to be due to the lead poisoning. The ice in the vicinity of the ship impinging on these islands was broken up in large masses and the whole pack seemed to be alive. Patches of water appeared in all directions, but closed again, so that it would have been impossible to have worked the ship through any of them. About May 6 a general order was issued naming the first island Jeannette Island, and the second—the one on which my party landed—Henrietta Island, the latitude and longitude of each being recorded at the time on the ship's logbook.

Engineer Melville then continued his narrative as follows:

About June 6, so great was the movement of the ice that all preparations were made for abandoning the ship in case she should be crushed. At this time the ship was imbedded in a small island of ice, which protected us from the direct crushing of the ice against her sides, but there was a continual thumping of underrunning ice. On June 11, soon after midnight, it was my watch to read the thermometer and instruments at the observatory on the ice. As I passed over the ship's side the ice parted and the ship floated and suddenly righted, starting all hands from their beds and soon all were on deck. The instruments and small articles on the ice were got on board; the ship was moored to the floe on one side. The lead opened to a distance of 500 to 700 yards, and then slowly came together again. About 9 A. M. on June 12 the ice came alongside, and the ship was hauled ahead into a hole where it was thought she would be protected from the impinging ice; the hole resembled a little dock. When the ship first entered the port in September, 1879, the commanding officer told me that he had overheard an adverse criticism, and for that reason he told me that the ship was put into the pack for the purpose of reaching Wrangel Land; that the season was still early, and there was a prospect that the fall gales would break up the pack so that we would have no difficulty in reaching land. At one time he was very hopeful that the ship would be caught in the counter current that sets along up the coast of Siberia, and by this means get free of the ice. I do not remember ever to have heard him express any regret at having put the ship in the pack, but I remember to have heard him express any opinion whether he would have put the ship in the same place again under the same circumstances.

Q.—Was there a fair prospect apparently when you entered the pack Sept. 6, 1879, of working through and reaching Wrangel Land? A.—Wrangel Land was too far distant to form an opinion. We could only expect to work from lane to lane and pond to pond, taking every advantage of the openings and leads.

The following extract from Capt. De Long's journal, now in the custody of the Navy Department, supplements Melville's modest account of his sledge trip to Henrietta Island:

The island (Henrietta) is a desolate rock surmounted by a snow cap, which feeds several discharging glaciers on its east face. Dovekies nesting on the face of the rock are the only signs of game. A little moss, some grass, and a handful of rock were brought back as trophies. The cliffs are inaccessible, because of their steepness. The ice between the ship and the island is something frightful. Road digging, ferrying, and its attendant loading and unloading, armlocking hauls and panic-stricken dogs, made their journey a terribly severe one. Near the island the ice was all alive, and Melville left his boat and supplies, and, carrying only one day's provisions and his instruments, at the peril of his life went through the terrible mass, actually dragging the dogs, which from fear refused to follow their human leaders. If his persistence in landing upon this island in spite of the superhuman difficulties he encountered is reckoned a brave and meritorious action, it will not be from any failure on my part to make it known.

BIG SUMS OF MONEY.

A valuation of $400,000,000 in round numbers is reported on property in Texas this year.

The sum of $3,650,000 is now invested in the manufacture of iron in the Birmingham, Ala., district.

In the ten years from 1870 to 1880 the value of the silk production of the United States rose from $12,210,662 to $34,410,463.

It is estimated that the total wool clip of the United States this year will aggregate 300,000,000 pounds, worth $100,000,000.

During the last fiscal year the Federal Government received from inspection of steam vessels and officers' licenses $278,889.

For several weeks the banks at Galveston have been receiving and expressing to the interior an average of $500,000 per week.

The enormous sum of $202,000,000 is invested in the submarine cables of the world, supposed to aggregate 90,000 miles in length.

A union depot 250 feet long, with covered tracks extending 1,000 feet, and costing about $400,000, is to be erected at Minneapolis.

A $2,000,000 mortgage has been recorded in West Virginia by a Philadelphia trust company on lands in the rich cannel coal formation.

Charleston, S. C., points with pride to a wholesale trade of nearly $75,000,000 last year, an increase of about $4,000,000 over the preceding year.

According to the Mississippi Handbook, there are 175,251 white and 251,488 colored children attending the free schools in the State, at a cost of $630,701.

Hawaiian coins to the amount of $200,000, and corresponding in value and denomination with our silver coinage, are to be struck at the San Francisco Mint.

The trustees of the Slater fund have selected the Rev. Dr. Haygood of Georgia as agent to manage the gift of $1,000,000 for educating colored people in the South.

For the year ending June 30 the revenues of the Dominion of Canada amounted to $33,281,281, the expenditures to $27,135,962, leaving a surplus of $6,225,479.

The German empire has now about 34,000,000 acres of forest, valued at $400,000,000, and appropriates $500,000 every year to increase and maintain the growth of trees.

The late Catholic Bishop of Vincennes, Ind., who died in France, was a Count, and during his life gave $50,000 to the Catholic Church. His body is to be buried in Vincennes.

H. H. Bancroft, historian of the Pacific coast, has spent over $60,000 in collecting his private library. He is an Ohio man and made his money in mercantile business in San Francisco.

It will require an expenditure of at least $5,000,000 by the Italian Government to make good the damage done to roads, bridges, and public buildings by the inundation, to say nothing of aid to the sufferers.

The new Iowa State Capitol has thus far cost $2,000,000, and it will require $500,000 to finish it. It is 365 feet long from north to south, and measures 274 feet from the sidewalk to the top of the central dome.

About 1,500 miles of new railroad were put into operation in the Southern States last year. The gross earnings of Southern roads reached $63,000,000, and the net earnings increased from $16,000,000 in 1880 to more than $24,000,000.

In the production of coal, Illinois is now second only to Pennsylvania. The state Bureau of Labor reports that the output has increased from 3,000,000 tons in 1880 to 9,000,000 tons in 1882, and that the value at the mines has been nearly $14,000,000.

During the five years 1877-1881, the average loss by fires in the United States and Canada in the month of September alone was $5,950,000. This year, including the fires in which the loss was less than $10,000, the record shows 123 in number, and the aggregate loss $6,205,000.

Mining operations on the Menominee and Marquette iron ranges, in Michigan, employ about 14,000 men and $32,000,000 in capital. Adding this industry to the lumber interests, the result will show nearly, if not quite, as large a business record in the upper peninsula as the lower section, south of Mackinac Straits.

The Commissioners in charge of the building of the new Indiana State House report that work already done and contracted for will cost $1,631,958, and other items of expense will bring the anticipated outlay up to $1,762,297, leaving $237,792 to expend without exceeding the limit, $2,000,000. It is thought that the second story will not be completed before next winter.

A huge transaction in Mississippi lands is noticeable because there has been comparatively so little push reported in that State since the war. A syndicate of English capitalists have agreed to purchase and improve 1,500,000 acres. The sum of $500,000 is available for the preliminary operation, that of cutting and preparing for market the timber; how much more will be used by the company will go extensively into cotton raising.

Work is progressing rapidly on the library which Mr. Pratt is building for the city of Baltimore, and when completed it will have a shelf capacity of 200,000 volumes. The value of the ground and library building is estimated at $225,000. This Mr. Pratt has given to the citizens, together with the sum of $833,333, which will yield $50,000 annually, upon condition that the city will adopt an ordinance for creating and granting a perpetual annuity of $50,000 for the purchase and maintenance of the library, with four branches in different sections of the city. The central part of the building is already under roof, and the whole is expected to be roofed by the middle of December, but the building will not be ready for occupation in less than a year. At the coming election the question of accepting the gift will be decided by popular vote.
