MR. GERRY AND BARNUM'S SHOW.

Appearance of the Tiny Players whose Performance is a Subject of Dispute.

In accordance with the public notification that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children would have an opportunity afforded them for making a test case at the Madison Square Garden yesterday afternoon, the bicycle performance was given by the six Elliott children. When the time arrived for the bicycle performance Mr. P. T. Barnum appeared between the rings. He said:

I am the last man in the world who would break the law, but I knew before I engaged the Elliott children in Portugal that their beautiful performances are quite within the law. Mr. Gerry, President of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, is an old friend of mine. He is a gentleman of culture, honorable, wealthy, and desires to do nothing unjust. But most large institutions, like his or mine, have their yellow-plushed "Jenkins" who delight to do their dirty work, and run their little one idea into the ground. They are fanatical—think they rule the world, and, instead of looking at all sides of questions, they view them only through small gimlet holes. These children make no effort; riding their bicycles is much easier than walking; and now, unless these children and myself are arrested within three minutes, you will see the most delightful bicycle exhibition imaginable. On Monday next we give a private exhibition of these children on their bicycles before several hundred of New York's chief physicians and surgeons, and also members of the judiciary and bar. Mr. Gerry and his medical advisers will also be invited to witness this exhibition. It is unique, and quite as easy and free from danger as walking or roller skating, and I intend that millions of my patrons in this city and throughout the country shall be gratified by witnessing it this season.

When Mr. Barnum concluded his remarks the elder four Elliott children darted out on their bicycles and went through their pretty evolutions. Singly, in pairs, in line, and all abreast they darted about the stage, formed various figures, and went through numerous evolutions apparently with the ease and grace of swallows darting through the summer evening air. Then the little ones appeared—little tots, that on their dainty bicycles seemed hardly bigger than dolls. Their bright, happy faces, full of health and childish joy, were radiant with pleasure; their fat little legs fairly twinkled as they spun the wheels over which they perched. They laughed, shouted to each other, and waved the flags they carried. The performances of the elder children were pretty, but those of the little ones were beautiful. The unicycle performance, in which only the elder ones participate, was omitted, in deference to the wishes of Mr. Gerry's society. Whether it will continue to be omitted from the programme or not will depend upon next Monday's private exhibition. No agent of the society appeared to interfere with the performance.

MARY ANN DOOLEY SAFE.

The Writ of Habeas Corpus Mr. Purdy Obtained from Judge Barrett.

Ambrose H. Purdy, a lawyer at 115 Nassau street, made application to Judge Barrett, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer yesterday, for a writ of habeas corpus for Mary Ann Dooley. The petition recited that Miss Dooley was accused of having poisoned her mother in Chicago, and was restrained of her liberty by Inspector Byrnes and his detectives. Judge Barrett issued the writ, which was made returnable forthwith, but no prisoner appeared.

Inspector Byrnes said he had never heard of the girl. One of the Pinkertons said they had never heard of the case. Mr. Purdy was absent from his office at noon, but Robert H. Pollock said he had prepared the papers in the habeas corpus case at Mr. Purdy's request.

Judge Barrett said he had noticed something peculiar in Purdy's actions when he appeared before the Court in the morning. On the facts as recited in the petition, there was nothing to do but grant the writ. "It's a man in his senses," Judge Barrett continued, "procured a writ of habeas corpus on a false petition, he would be guilty of several offences. It would be gross contempt of Court, involving perjury, and would also be a misdemeanor as an abuse of process."

Mr. Purdy was at his office at 3 o'clock. "I got the girl out on this process," he said, exhibiting the writ of habeas corpus. "Between you and me, she poisoned her mother; but I've got her out, and she's safe. She's a beauty. Any man would fall in love with her. It's a big estate the girl's mother left—$500,000."

Prefers Examining Heads to Breaking Them.

The following letter has been addressed by a German phrenologist, who styles himself a professor of "mental science," resident in England, to Prince von Bismarck, in reply to a notice to present himself at a certain locality in Prussia for military service under the conscription:

MY DEAR BISMARCK: I feel highly flattered by your kind invitation, addressed to me at my native town, to join the German army, but am afraid I shall not be able to accept it, for I am now in England, engaged in the more useful work of expounding mental science, and teaching people how to make the best use of their faculties. For the same reason I scarcely feel myself at liberty to accept even the hospitality of six months' board and lodging at the expense of the State, which you considerately offer as an alternative. I much prefer basking in the sunshine of English liberty to being forced despotically into military servitude in my own country. I have altogether given up fighting since I left school. I do not know that I have anything particular to fight about now, and I hardly care to engage in fighting at the bidding of any one else. If you have a quarrel with anybody I would advise you to settle it amicably if possible, or else fight it out yourself. If, after you have "fixed up" the army, you can make it convenient to run over here at any time to one of my phrenological lectures, I shall be happy to point out to you the superiority of life in England, and to explain the nature and utility of the, as I say, more useful work which I am engaged in. I will examine your head, either publicly or privately, free of charge. With kind regards to the Emperor, I remain yours faithfully.

GUSTAVUS COHEN.

Mrs. Mayer's Bad and Good Luck.

Mrs. Mary Mayer of East Sixty-fifth street went to the General Sessions on Wednesday to prosecute a chambermaid in her house, whom she charged with stealing a skirt and a mosaic scarf pin belonging to her son. The girl protested her innocence, and declared that she had bought the skirt from another chambermaid in the house. The jury convicted the chambermaid, and Mrs. Mayer and her richly-dressed friends went away. As Watchman Thomas McCann sat reading in the District Attorney's office late in the evening he heard a loud rapping at the Chambers street door. He opened the door and saw Mrs. Mayer and a female companion. Mrs. Mayer was excited, and said that she had lost a diamond earring valued at $1,000. She took the other earring from her pocketbook. Watchman McCann went up to the court room with his lantern, and, after a long and careful search, found the earring. He gave it to Mrs. Mayer, and she, expressing her great relief at its recovery, hurried away.

SPORTING NOTES.

The latest reports about Foxhall are not encouraging for the City and Suburban.

Hundreds of thousands of whitefish are being placed in suitable waters on Long Island.

The first English snipe of the season was shot on Round Brook meadows last Friday.

There are 100 box stalls in Mr. W. L. Scott's new stable at Erie, Pa. Bayon d'Or is king of the horses.

Italian and Kennedy practise daily on the Potomac. Their race will take place at the Point of Pines, near Boston, May 30.

The opening of the trout season on Sunday will be a great temptation to lovers of angling to break one clause of the penal code.

The liberal proposition of Charter Oak Park to give a purse of $10,000 for 2:19 trotters is causing a sensation among horsemen.

The protracted drought the last summer and the severe cold of the past winter have decimated myriads of fish in New Hampshire.

Whatever is favorite for the City and Suburban, to be run April 18, at 8 to 1; Foxhall second choice, 11 to 1, and Sachem third, 20 to 1.

Trout which were placed in the waters of New Zealand years ago now afford the natives capital sport. Many of the fish weigh from five to six pounds.

The season's driving will be inaugurated on Wednesday next by the opening of the club house in Gentlemen's Driving Park, with Gabe Case as the host.

Buffalo announces $7,000 in special purses for the Grand Circuit meeting. Island Park, Albany, goes $10,000 better for its June meeting, to follow the New York trots.

W. G. George won the half-mile race at the Exeter games recently. It is announced that he intends to visit America again next summer, to meet Myers in another series of races.

The work of the stewards of the Grand Circuit, who will meet in Rochester April 17, has been greatly lessened by the special purses already announced by the most prominent track.

There is little probability that Major Thomas's Kentucky racers, Queen Ban, Dixietta, and Violator, entered for the Grand Prix de Paris, to be run June 3, will be sent across the ocean.

The Utica Driving Park Association offers four purses of $2,500 each for the Grand Trotting Circuit meeting. The first is for 2:30 horses; second, 2:30 horses; third, 2:24 horses; and fourth, 2:20 horses.

Commodore Kittson has purchased the Lukens farm. He will connect it with Krdenheim by a bridge over the Musahickon. Major Hubbard, late turf editor of the Spirit of the Times, superintends the double estate.

Rowell's proposed six days' race, twelve hours a day, in England, is off. Littlewood being the only other man able to raise the $500 stakes. The race for the Astley twelve-hour belt will begin May 4. Rowell will not start.

Maurice Vignaux, Jacob Schaefer, William sexton, and Maurice Daly have already entered for the tournament at the champion's game, with the corner lines extended, which is to begin in Tammany hall, May 14. The cash prizes are $1,200, $800, $500, $300, and $200. The game permits a display of all the beauties of billiards.

Daniel O'Leary was happy hold when he sailed from London for Australia. A voyage of more than three months caused a renewal of his hair and a general improvement of his health. Daniel says that he will hereafter confine himself to the heel and toe business. He is the master of the heel and toe business. The Melbourne Sportsman gave a two-column sketch of Daniel on his arrival.

Sheerin's is now the headquarters of Mr. Vanderbilt and his road companions. They are trying the new mile ground, and will keep it in good order throughout the season. Mr. Work, while driving Swiveller on Seventh avenue on Wednesday, was run into by a team being carelessly turned in front of him. Mr. Work had a narrow escape from a serious accident. When Mr. Vanderbilt heard of this he remarked: "It is safe to bet the newspapers will publish the wrong horse."—Spirit of the Times.

CONKLING INDICTED.

He Pleads Not Guilty of Manslaughter and Renews his Bail.

The General Sessions Grand Jury handed in yesterday an indictment charging George W. Conkling, Jr., with manslaughter in the first degree in killing William H. Haverstick in the Paris flats. The penalty, in the event of conviction, under an indictment for manslaughter in the first degree, is imprisonment in State prison for from five to twenty years.

Clerk Hall began to draw a bench warrant for the arrest of Conkling under the indictment. Detective Sergeant Reilly of the District Attorney's office stood before his desk waiting for the warrant. At that moment the court room door opened, and Conkling and his counsel appeared.

"George W. Conkling," said Clerk Hall, "you have been indicted for manslaughter in the first degree. Do you plead guilty or not guilty?"

"Not guilty," replied Conkling.

Recorder Smyth said that he would allow Conkling's bond in $5,000 to be continued. James B. Ogden of 144 Carroll street, Brooklyn, Conkling's bondsman, signified his willingness to continue as his surety, and Conkling was discharged. He spent the remainder of the day with his sister at Col. King's residence, 49 West 24th street.

One of Conkling's counsel said that Conkling would go into court again on Monday and demand an immediate trial, and that he would repeat the demand daily until either a trial is accorded or he was permitted to leave the city. Counsel predicted that the case would never be brought to trial.

The suit of Joseph B. Haverstick against Mrs. Uhler for the recovery of the $550 and box of love letters intrusted to Dr. Amidon is to come up for hearing before Judge Lawrence in the Supreme Court on Tuesday.
