POORLY PROTECTED MONEY.

The Loose Methods of the Finance Department Censured.

The Aldermen's committee who examined the administration of the Finance Department reported to the Board yesterday. The committee say that the Comptroller is not sufficiently familiar with some of his bureaus. The efficiency of some of the clerks is impaired by chronic remissness. Inaccuracies and oversights have sometimes crept in, and subjected large sums to the danger of misapplication. Some important accounts, as those of the general ledger, have been oftentimes in arrears. Warrants of the Comptroller have been habitually delivered by the disbursing officers, without the concurrent cancellation of the coupons paid. The clerks have grown dissatisfied and their efforts perfunctory. Vigilance has diminished. Bureaus have deteriorated, and one of the most important, that of the records, has been disorganized, and its condition is a reproach.

The committee, criticising the method of paying interest coupons, state that William B. Carroll had entire control of the coupons, and that there was no proper check on his disposition of them, and that the audit on which the coupons were paid was made on schedules to which the coupons were not attached. They censure Comptroller Campbell for continuing the system after he took office. They believe that the Carroll defalcation was not accomplished by the second payment of coupons. To do that Carroll would have required the aid of Emmet and Forester, the disbursing clerks, who had to cancel the coupons when they were paid. Their character was unimpeached, and the committee believe them to be honest men.

The committee think that the defalcation was carried out by the use of counterfeit coupons. Carroll, they say, having control of the coupons, could have them counterfeited. "The evidence informs us," they continue, "that such coupons could be reproduced in all their details within twenty-four hours and at a pittance of cost.

"Besides, as Carroll was informed of the series, the denomination, and the dates of the coupons to fall due, and had at his command samples that had already been paid and submitted to his charge, it was quite possible that he could provide the requisite counterfeits in advance. Other sources of supply were not impracticable. The coupons of other bonds than city bonds may have been used, and perhaps the coupons of surplus copies of city bonds clandestinely retained at their issue."

The committee believe that $148,639, the amount of the defalcation as stated by Comptroller Campbell, is the true sum lost to the city. That estimate was based on the difference between the whole sum paid on account of coupon interest and what the books showed that interest to have been. They say that the interest appropriation for each year has been made by the Board of Apportionment in a lump sum and not, as the charter requires, in specific sums for the various kinds of interest. They say that since Comptroller Green has changed the method of paying coupons, not a voucher for the payment of coupon interest due and paid by the city has been examined and allowed by the Auditor. Statements of the accounts only have been audited. For six years not a warrant for the payment of that interest has been drawn according to the requirements of the city charter. The committee conclude by censuring the Commissioners of Accounts for not properly examining the accounts of the Finance Department.

The committee recommended the passage of the following:

Resolved, That the Comptroller of the city and county of New York be and he is hereby required to give a bond for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office in the sum of $200,000, with two or more sufficient sureties to justify in double the amount, under oath, before a Judge of the Supreme Court, on due notice to the Corporation Counsel.

Resolved, That the system of accounting pursued in the Finance Department is inefficient, insufficient, and in violation of the charter.

Resolved, That the directions of the charter that regulate the receipts and disbursements of the city funds form a safe system of finance; that through their violation has the city suffered the defalcations, and that their strict observance, in the opinion of the Common Council, will be ample guarantee against any loss in the future.

Resolved, That, entertaining no question of the legal liability of one or more of the municipal magistrates during any period of the three years' process of William B. Carroll's defalcations, for the whole or part thereof, it is hereby referred to the Corporation Counsel, under the evidence, to institute such action and take such legal proceedings against any one or more such magistrates as he shall be advised can be sustained at law.

Alderman Cochrane, Chairman of the committee, said that the Carroll frauds were largely the result of the illegal acts and culpable negligence of the Comptroller and the Mayor. He referred to Mayor Cooper and Comptrollers Kelly and Campbell. There had been not only culpable negligence, but continuous violations of law in the administration of the Finance Department.

The report and resolutions were adopted by 19 to 2. Aldermen Edward Duffy and Farley voting in the negative. Alderman Duffy said that he had voted against the report because he saw no reason for censuring either Mr. Cooper or Mr. Kelly.

Comptroller Campbell is having an examination made of the payment of the interest coupons since the beginning of 1876. The history of every coupon is being traced. His examiners have found that the first payment of interest to Hagen & Billing, with whom Carroll dealt, was made in November, 1876, and to E. Morrison & Co. in 1877. Several payments were made to both firms in 1877, and more in 1878. They have not yet ascertained whether these payments were on coupons sold to those firms by Carroll.

CATTLE FOR ENGLAND.

A New Law, the Bearing of which is Not Very Well Understood Here.

The British House of Commons decided on Tuesday to prohibit the importation of live cattle from countries whose preventive laws and the sanitary condition of whose cattle do not afford reasonable security against the extension of the foot and mouth disease. This action created much comment among shippers of live cattle and dressed meat in this city, and there was much difference of opinion as to the intention of the new law. It was argued that there was no hoof or mouth disease in this country, and that therefore the United States were not included in the prohibition. Others thought the law was especially aimed at the United States, after the fashion of the pleuro-pneumonia acts, which were passed when there had been hardly any pleuro-pneumonia in this country. These dealers argued that the English proposed to encourage home production, and that this was one way of doing it. America's beef, slaughtered in England, was better than English beef, and was sold at cheaper rates than the English stock raisers could afford to sell at.

Joseph Eastman, the son of T. C. Eastman, who is the largest exporter of live and dead meat in this country, said he did not think the law would affect the United States. His father was at present in London, and if anything serious had been meant by the law he would have called to stop the cargo of live cattle which starts to-morrow. Mr. Eastman said that he had heard of no foot and mouth disease in this country, and he did not believe there was any. A total stoppage of the importation of live cattle into England would involve a great extra expense to the dealers, as they would be obliged to build additional slaughter houses and put in more refrigerators on ships.

The comparative amount of live cattle and dressed meat exported to England varies according to the season of the year. In winter more dressed meat is exported. It keeps better while being transferred, and live cattle are injured by the rough weather at sea in winter time. In summer rather more live stock than dressed meat is exported. The following amounts of each sort were exported from New York city for the weeks named: Week ending June 16, 1,027 live cattle, and 3,658 dressed quarters; week ending June 23, 2,712 live cattle and 5,000 quarters.

The exportation is much larger this year than in any year since the business was begun, seven years ago, and is nearly double that of last year, when the abnormally high prices checked it. The price is from 15 to 20 per cent. lower than last year.

Both Sides of the Mordaunt Divorce Case.

Argument was heard by Judge Cullen in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, in the suit of Fannie Mordaunt for a limited divorce from Frank Mordaunt, the actor, upon a motion in behalf of the plaintiff for alimony and counsel fee. Mrs. Mordaunt charges that her husband abandoned her and failed to provide for the support of herself and child. She charges him with having cruelly treated her, and also with having been guilty of infidelity. In her petition to the Court she asks that alimony at the rate of $60 a week and a counsel fee of $200 be granted her. Mrs. Mordaunt further declares that her husband has been in the habit of becoming intoxicated. Mr. Mordaunt denies that he ever married the plaintiff. He accuses her of lewdness, and asserts that she has an ungovernable temper, and that he could not live with her. He claims to have been driven from his profession by her, and to be now without an engagement. He says she followed him to Chicago, where she tore down the play bills, forced her way into the theatres, and deceived the public by counterfeiting a hemorrhage. Mr. Mordaunt asserts that when he was forced to leave the plaintiff he took nothing, all the furniture was given to her, and she also retained his stage clothes and wearing apparel. He asserts that she has been extravagant, and he denies the charge of drunkenness she makes against him. Mrs. Mordaunt produced a copy of her marriage certificate. Decision was reserved.

In a Madhouse, but Said to be Sane.

Judge Cullen, in Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday, granted a writ of habeas corpus in favor of James Stewart Harford, who has been confined in the Ward's Island Lunatic Asylum since 1881. Harford asserts that he is sane, as also do two other persons who have been his companions in asylums. The authorities of the asylum, however, refuse to allow any outside physician to examine him.

WHITEWASHED AND NICE.

The Grand Jury Find the Inn in Ludlow Street in Spick and Span Order.

The Grand Jury of the county visited Ludlow street jail yesterday morning. They were accompanied by their clerk and an officer of the District Attorney's office. The visit was known of beforehand, and Warden James Bowe, a brother of the ex-Sheriff, was ready to receive them. They were taken first up stairs, where the line of tiers of cells begins. The lower cells were occupied by United States prisoners, under arrest for defrauding the Government. They are kept apart from the other prisoners. There was evidence on all sides that great preparations had been made for the visit of the Grand Jury. The walls of the tiers and the interior of the cells had been thoroughly whitewashed. The prisoners said that a gang of ten men had been at work until 2 o'clock yesterday morning cleaning up. Clean sheets and pillow cases had been served out to all.

The result was that the jury found things in very good shape. The cells, excepting the lower ones, were well ventilated and clean. The foreman of the jury, Samuel G. Comstock, and others of the jury asked the prisoners many questions, and the clerk took the names of those whom they desired to call as witnesses. There were in all twenty-eight prisoners in the jail, of whom only one is a woman. Warden Bowe said he had only two boarders, who pay $15 a week each. The number of boarders was never higher than four or five a week.

The jury visited the dining room and kitchen, and found them neat and clean. They tasted the bread and soup, which were excellent in quality. The prisoners were not inclined to talk very freely in the presence of the keepers. The "tippling shop in the jail," where liquors are said to be kept for sale, is an ordinary cell on the ground floor. It contained a refrigerator and several cases of beer bottles. A keeper said that the beer was sold for 15 cents a bottle. Some of the cells had board floors, but most of them had stone floors.

The Grand Jury returned to their rooms in the General Sessions building at noon. The foreman directed the court officers in attendance to admit the witnesses. Among the witnesses were Under Sheriff Stevens, Warden Bowe of the jail, and Robert B. Nooney, the butcher, and John Ellis, the baker, who supply the jail with meat and bread. The testimony of these witnesses, it is understood, tended to show that Sheriff Davidson's management of the jail has been proper, and that the inmates have been provided with good food. But the testimony of other witnesses, including Prisoners Joyce, McDonald, and Young, who were brought from the jail to testify, it is said, did not present either the management or the food in so favorable a light. After the witnesses had testified, the Grand Jury went into secret session, and voted to embody their conclusions from the testimony given and from their visit to the jail in a presentment, which will be submitted to Judge Gildersleeve in the General Sessions on Friday.

Assisted Emigrants Arrive in Boston.

BOSTON, July 11.—About 200 assisted emigrants arrived this morning on the steamer Austrian. They consist mainly of families, and are better clad and more healthy than their predecessors. Most of them have money, and are bound West. Inquiries among them showed that none were of the pauper class.
