A ROMANCE IN POLITICS.

Death Following an Election—A Widow Married and Abandoned—Her Suit.

HONESDALE, Pa., Aug. 17.—In May, 1879, William Hartwell, a wealthy farmer of this county, and a Commissioner of the county, married the widow of County Commissioner Thomas Brown, living near this village. Hartwell and Brown had been bitter political opponents. In 1876, with the opposition of nearly the entire county against them, the then Board of County Commissioners, acting under the order of the Court, began the building of a new Court House in this place, which was made the county seat in 1843, the Court House to be replaced having been built in that year. Brown, being an experienced contractor and builder, received supervisory charge of the new work, and his only ambition was to have his name coupled with the completion of the building, which was to be a costly and elaborate one. The opposition to the Court House became organized. It established a newspaper and took lawyers into its employ. William Hartwell was a leader in the anti-Court House movement. He was determined that, if the building was to be erected, it should not be completed under the Brown régime. By legal processes the work was hampered and delayed until the fall of 1877. Important local offices were to be filled that fall, and the anti-Court House party put a ticket of its own in the field. The success of that ticket meant the ruin of all of Commissioner Brown's hopes, and he worked day and night and used liberally of his means to defeat it. Hartwell worked just as hard to elect it. It was elected by a majority of more than two to one over the combined vote of both the regular party tickets. The shock and disappointment were more than Commissioner Brown could withstand, and he died shortly after the election. At the next election William Hartwell was elected as his successor in the Board of Commissioners. Hartwell's wife died a few days after his election.

Brown died leaving his estate heavily encumbered. In 1879 certain claims against it were placed in the hands of the Sheriff, and the homestead where the widow and her family were living was advertised for sale. A son of the deceased Commissioner had been clerk to the old Board, but with the coming in of Hartwell and under his influence was dismissed. In 1879 much of the bitterness of the past few years had disappeared, and young Brown appealed to Commissioner Hartwell to save his mother's home from the Sheriff. Hartwell was willing to pay the claim against it, and take a long-term mortgage on it as security. This being satisfactory, he called on the widow Brown to arrange the details. This was the first time they had ever met, and the result of the meeting was that the Commissioner proposed to Mrs. Brown and was accepted. They were married shortly afterward. Hartwell presenting his bride with a deed of the homestead, clear of debt. The son was subsequently reinstated in his old place as Commissioner's clerk.

In May, 1881, to the surprise of the community, Mr. Hartwell left his wife and made his home with his only child, Mrs. J. L. Burcher. In September following Mrs. Hartwell began suit for divorce and alimony, on the ground of desertion. Pending proceedings in the suit, Hartwell died. He ignored his wife in his will, the executor of which was his son-in-law, J. L. Burcher. When the latter returned an inventory of the estate a large amount of personal property, among it valuable securities, which the deceased man was known to possess, was not returned. The executor claimed that the property in question had been assigned and given to him and his wife by the deceased man after he left his wife, and that it was consequently no part of the estate. The widow claimed that the property had been disposed of to defraud her of her rights in it under the law. She brought suit to compel the executor to place it on the inventory of the estate, and to give bonds for the faithful performance of his duty. Judge McCollum has just rendered his decision. He holds that the widow's claim is valid, and orders that Burcher, as executor, shall qualify in $40,000 bonds before proceeding in the affairs of the estate.

MAHONE'S HOG FISH.

How a Black Virginian Made a White Virginian Lose his Situation.

PETERSBURG, Va., Aug. 16.—Senator William Mahone is a great epicure. He likes hog fish. More than a year ago the Norfolk and Western Railroad was bought by a syndicate composed principally of New York and Philadelphia gentlemen, and it was supposed that they really controlled the road. The fact is, however, that a certain clique of Mahone's officials have charge of the road and run the line in the interest of Mahone, and most of the postal agents, baggage men, and even the brakemen are in a state of pitiable servitude and kept in terror of Mahone. A few days ago W. T. Bohannan, a worthy young man of Lynchburg, and the whole support of an aged mother, was discharging his duties as express messenger and baggage agent. When the train reached Petersburg a negro, a negro servant of Senator Mahone, entered the car and asked for the General's fish. Mr. Bohannan, knowing exactly the contents of the car, said there were no fish in it.

The negro then became very insolent, and insisted that the fish were in the car, "for the General got a despatch about them." The fellow swaggered around and actually attempted to take possession of the car. The young man, knowing that by the rules of all railroads no outsiders are allowed in the baggage car, and determining to do his duty to the company, put Mahone's servant out. The negro then came to the side door, and, shaking his finger at Bohannan, he shouted: "Young man, I'm going to have you removed for this." Parties who heard the negro's remark knew that the baggage master was doomed for two offences: first, because Mahone would not get his hog fish for dinner that day; and second, because Mahone's dining-room servant had been put out of the car. Their prediction was verified, for young Bohannan received his dismissal from Capt. Osborne with the further statement that "the discharge was irrevocable." Further investigation showed that the fish had been given in care of the mail route agent, but the fact did not help the young man.

Not So Many Peaches.

Only twenty-nine car loads of peaches arrived in this city yesterday. The dealers say that owing to the heavy rain on Thursday in the peach growing districts very few peaches were picked. The prices ranged from 50 cents to $1 a crate higher yesterday than on Thursday. The wholesale price for good peaches was $2.75 a crate. To-day it is expected that there will be a big supply, and that the prices will be reduced by half.

The peach crop this year has been greatly overestimated. "In Washington Market dealer said yesterday, "I do believe that more than one third of the full peach crop will be sent to market. Three weeks ago I went down into the peach growing districts and heard on all sides that there was going to be a very full crop. Since my return I have received letters, some of which say that there will only be half a full crop, while some say that it will not reach more than one-quarter. The fruit brought for the last few weeks have proved very disastrous. The peaches are large, however, and of the finest flavor.

Fireproofed Wood.

A test of a fireproofed wood was made yesterday afternoon by Mr. Starkweather, the architect of the new Potter building, in the furnace chamber in the bottom of the huge excavation for that structure. A box, fourteen inches square and about five inches in depth, made of the fireproofed wood, was placed in the midst of an enormous blaze of hickory, oak, and yellow pine, fanned into furious activity by a strong draught. It was kept there twenty-five minutes, until the pile of fuel was burned down into embers. Then the box, charred outside but clear of fire marks inside, was opened, and from its interior were taken, unscorched and without even discoloration, copies of the Sun, a dollar bill, and some visiting cards, which had been put in for the test. The employment of this prepared wood in the new building is contemplated. The sample of it shown on this occasion went through a test that would have been severe on iron.

Dangerous Skewers in Meat.

Distinguishing tags are fastened to the quarters of beef by the shippers, most of whom use wooden skewers. On a great deal of Chicago beef, however, the tags are fastened by what look very much like double pointed mining tacks. These skewers are of iron, three-quarters of an inch wide, with legs five-eighths of an inch long. The legs are barbed like fish hooks. They are pushed through the tag into the beef. The barbed ends prevent them from dropping out. Very frequently the tag becomes moist, and when pulled from the beef tears, and leaves the little barbed skewers in the beef. Within a week two women in Philadelphia have been nearly killed by swallowing skewers of this kind, which were concealed in the meat they were eating. In both cases the barbed ends of the skewers became fastened in the women's throats.

Consecrating a New Up-town Synagogue.

The new synagogue of the congregation of the Blessed Gates, at 240 East Forty-fifth street, was consecrated yesterday afternoon. The congregation was established in Attorney street in 1858. The interior of the new synagogue was decorated yesterday with flowers and evergreens. The flags of France, Germany, and the United States hung from the choir gallery. Rabbi A. Wise and Rabbi G. Hirsch conducted the services. The key to the synagogue was presented to the President, Isaac N. Mayer. The dedication of the ark of the Holy Scrolls, copies of the five books of Moses, was the last ceremony of the consecration. The new synagogue is not entirely free from debt, but it hopes soon to be, and to have a rabbi of its own.

Two Wives' Divorce Suits.

Maria V. A. Pike, in a suit in the Supreme Court against her husband, George S. Pike, charges that he has treated her cruelly, having frequently struck and kicked her, and has been in the habit of coming home drunk and abusing her, and she asks for a limited divorce and separate maintenance. Mr. Pike denies the charges. Judge Haight granted Mrs. Pike yesterday $100 counsel fee and $10 a week alimony pending the result.

Judge Haight also gave Mrs. Dora B. Banta an allowance of $75 for her lawyer and $10 a week for herself until the decision of her suit for an absolute divorce from her husband, Samuel Banta, to whom she was married in 1879.

BROTHER AGAINST BROTHER.

The Arrest Nathan Schreiber Caused in Grand Street—The Mother's Tenderness.

Nathan Schreiber, whose father, Isaac, is a real estate broker at 140 East Sixty-second street, accosted Policeman Donnelly in Grand street at noon yesterday, and pointing to a young man, said: "He is a thief—arrest him. There is a warrant out for him."

Donnelly and Schreiber overtook the young man. He stopped, looked first at the policeman and then at the other, and asked: "Well, what's the trouble now?"

"This man says he has a warrant for you," replied Donnelly.

"Why, that's my brother. He has no warrant for me," said the young man.

At the station house Nathan Schreiber repeated that there was a warrant out for his brother William. Nathan went away and came back with his mother, who accused her son William of breaking his parole from the Elmira Reformatory.

The prisoner was sent to court. Mrs. Schreiber told Justice Gardiner that William had been sent to the Elmira Reformatory eighteen months ago for robbery. He was paroled last June on the regulation six months, but she found him incorrigible, and asked that he be sent back.

"What has he done?" asked Justice Gardiner.

"He has been robbing us all along," put in Nathan Schreiber.

Justice Gardiner bade Nathan be silent and let his mother answer. The mother said she had left William in charge of the house while she and his father were at Long Branch, and that Nathan had sent her word that William was robbing the house. She came back and found that William had stolen his father's clothes and pawned them. She told Nathan to have him arrested.

Justice Gardiner turned on Nathan and asked, "When did you come out of prison?"

"I haven't been in prison in twelve years!" Nathan replied in astonishment.

"My brother has been in prison here and in San Francisco," spoke up William Schreiber. "When my father took him home he began to abuse me. He got my parents, and even my sister, opposed to me. He became the rich man's son, and I the pauper. They gave me no money or clothes, and I took some articles from the house and sold them. My brother told my parents, and they had me sent to the Reformatory. After I had been up eighteen months they had me paroled. When my mother trusted me with the keys I did my best to run the house right. I stole nothing."

He was remanded to await the decision of the Reformatory authorities upon his mother's request that he be sent back to that institution.

A YOUNG FARM HAND'S SUICIDE.

Firing a Bullet Through his Heart While Holding his Mother's Hand.

STAMFORD, Aug. 17.—Frederick Morrell, about 20 years old, who lived with his mother in Dumpling Pond, a hamlet three miles west of Stamford, committed suicide last evening. Morrell had been employed on the farm of Maltby Smith. He left there yesterday at noon and went to Stamford, returning home in time to do his evening chores. In Stamford he purchased a pint of whiskey, and Mr. Smith saw the half-emptied bottle. Morrell left the farm at about 5 P. M., and on the way to his mother's house he called on Miss Hannah June, with whom he had been keeping company. The young woman was in the house taking care of a younger brother. When she appeared he chided her for not keeping him waiting. She replied pleasantly. He said:

"Hannah, do you care anything for me?"

"Yes, Freddie," she replied. "I never cared for any one else."

"I don't believe it," said Morrell.

"It is the truth I'm telling you," said Hannah.

"I have got something that is going to end my days," said Morrell.

He afterward spoke to the father of the girl, asking him where his heart lay. He then placed the revolver over the spot and spoke about shooting himself. He offered liquor to Mr. June and a neighbor, Mr. Touiss, but it was refused. Leaving them he went down the road, discharging the weapon on the way. He stopped at his mother's gate, called her out, and said:

"Mother, will you shake hands with me? I am going away."

She took his hand playfully, and then he placed the pistol to his breast and fired, dying in a few moments.

Mr. Smith says that Morrell was frequently drunk. He saw a supply of cartridges in Morrell's possession two hours before the shooting.

Miss June says: "I never quarrelled with Freddy. He was frequently under the influence of liquor, and was so last night."

Persons in the neighborhood say that Morrell was well liked and had no enemies, and that his failing was drink.

Frogs' Legs at Half the Usual Price.

Frogs' legs graced many of the stands in Washington Market yesterday. They were very large and plump, and seemed to be the finest of the season.

"There is a big supply to-day," said a dealer; "we have not had so fine a time for some time. The better grades of hotels have bought a great many this morning."

"What are they selling for?"

"Fifty cents a pound, which is just half what they usually cost. One dollar a pound is not considered dear for them. Here is a rare opportunity for the lovers of frogs' legs to buy a very superior article for a very trifling cost."

"How many persons will a pound serve?"

"That depends on their appetites. I can eat a pound without being surfeited."

Litigation Over Liberty's Pedestal.

The Executive Committee having the awarding of the contract for concrete for the foundation of the pedestal for the Statue of Liberty to be built on Bedloe's Island advertised for bids for the work, and at its last meeting awarded the contract to F. Hopkinson Smith at $4.94 a cubic yard. Mr. Fay, a contractor, had offered to do the work at $3.70. He asserts that his was the lowest responsible bid, and, through his counsel, Lyddy Brothers, he obtained from Judge Potter yesterday an order to the committee to show cause on Tuesday next why the contract should not be awarded to him. A temporary injunction against the execution of the contract with Mr. Smith accompanies the order.

Stealing from the Doctors.

A woman stole $500 worth of jewelry, clothing, &c., from the house of Police Surgeon Matthews at 206 West Sixteenth street on Aug. 8. On Aug. 14 the same woman stole French clocks from Dr. Hemmingway of 154 East Thirtieth street and Dr. J. Barron's of 252 East Thirtieth street. Detectives King and Lyons yesterday arrested Hattie Mulrey, a professional thief, who has just completed a five years' sentence in State prison. She was identified, and was locked up in the Police Central Office. She is a German woman, 29 years old. She has served several terms in prison.

The East End of East River.

To settle the much disputed question, United States Supervising Inspector General Dumont of Washington has sent to United States Supervising Inspector Starback of this city a decision of the Chief of the United States Coast Survey to the effect that the eastern terminus of the East River should be designated by a line drawn from Willett's Point to the southeastern extremity of Throg's Neck.

Water Famine in Galveston.

GALVESTON, Aug. 17.—This city is on the verge of a water famine. The cisterns are drained, the gardens are dried up, and the effect of the drought is plainly to be seen in the poverty of the vegetable market. For a week past many persons have been depending upon the liberality of their neighbors for water enough to drink, having exhausted their supplies, and most of the wells have ceased to flow. The heavy rains of the dry season are almost completely without a supply. An indication of the extreme want is found in a notice posted in front of one of the best known and most popular restaurants in the city, "Closed until it rains." A slight rain has fallen, but not enough to give relief.

Railroad Officials Honored.

BLOOMINGTON Ill., Aug. 17.—Last night the Wabash and Chicago and Alton Railroad officials placed armed men on their west-bound express trains, on account of a rumor to the effect that the trains would be robbed at Mexico, Mo., by armed outlaws. The whole thing proved to be a hoax, the rumor being started by a passenger who in joke informed the station agent that he belonged to a gang of train robbers who expected to raid these roads the same night.

Coal Oil in Colorado.

DENVER, Aug. 17.—For three years or more capitalists have been prospecting for coal oil in the neighborhood of Cañon City in this State, but with an indifferent result. On Thursday night a vein was struck in the Land Investment Company's well, which has since yielded at the rate of forty barrels per day of oil of excellent quality, demonstrating to a certainty that coal oil exists in paying quantities in that vicinity.

The Barnstable Savings Bank.

BOSTON, Aug. 17.—Counsel for the receivers of the Barnstable Savings Bank obtained from the Supreme Court to-day leave to declare a final dividend. When the bank suspended in May, 1878, its total liabilities were $1,289,962, and three dividends amounting to seventy per cent. have been paid. The receivers have now on hand $167,857, and will ask leave to make a final dividend of twelve per cent.

A Chinaman Fatally Stabbed.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, Aug. 17.—In a row in a Chinese laundry here last night Wep Lee stabbed Ah Sam with a large knife, and he cannot survive. Wep Lee kept a large crowd at bay with his knife for fully fifteen minutes, but was finally captured by a policeman.

Double Lynching in Georgia.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 17.—The story of the lynching of Joseph Fulford and Harry Bradley, for the murder of the former's wife, at Bainbridge last week, is true in all its horrible details, notwithstanding the denial thereof contained in the despatches from New Orleans.

Exodus of Lumbermen from Canada.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 17.—A large exodus of lumbermen is now going on from this district to the United States. Two hundred mill hands will leave in a day or two for Petoskey, N. Y. Over one hundred shanty men have already left for Michigan.

INDIANA BANK TROUBLES.

The First National of Indianapolis Reorganized with W. H. English at its Head.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 17.—The reorganization of the First National Bank of this city was completed last evening. The stock of the bank has been increased from $400,000 to $800,000, paid in capital. The following is a list of the officers and directors: W. H. English, President; E. F. Claypool, Vice-President; John C. McCutcheon, Cashier. Directors—W. H. English, E. F. Claypool, John C. Wright, A. B. Conduitt, W. W. Johnston, W. C. De Pauw of New Albany, John Reynolds of Terre Coupee, Simon Yandes of Indianapolis, J. P. Shipp, Robert Browning, and W. H. Ijams. W. H. English, in a letter to the public, says:

At the time of the recent trouble in the First National Bank of Indianapolis I had neither stock nor deposits in that bank, and no pecuniary interest in it whatever. I did what I could to arrest what might have been a fearful and widespread calamity, and did it entirely from disinterested motives. I am urged in every direction to accept the Presidency of the bank, and am told that my acceptance is an imperative necessity. I doubt this necessity, and accept with extreme reluctance, knowing the great care, worry, and strain that a proper discharge of the duties demands. I shall do my very best to protect the interest confided to my care, and promote correct principles of banking and the prosperity of the community. It will take a little time to get the bank fairly under way, and forbearance as well as aid on the part of the depositors and the public is needed, and will be appreciated.
