SHOULD LOW HAVE GERMAN SUPPORT?

Ex-Comptroller Semler's Array of Facts in Support of Mr. Hendrix.

The following is the substance of an address delivered on Friday by ex-Comptroller Semler in Military Hall, Brooklyn, to the German voters of Brooklyn:

Convinced that I am thereby performing a duty which I owe to the German citizens of Brooklyn, I do not hesitate to comply with the request addressed to me, and publicly state the reasons that impel me to support Mr. Hendrix.

My determination not to support Mr. Low under any circumstances is based not upon political considerations, but upon my knowledge of the man with whom I have so long been in close official relations. I have been acquainted with Mr. Low, personally, only in his official position, but to that extent I have learned to know him thoroughly.

He has both education and capacity. The excellent opportunities afforded by his father's great wealth were improved to good advantage by him. The worldly polish and calculated courtesy of the educated rich make passing acquaintance with him attractive, and it requires a longer and closer knowledge to pierce the mask of politeness that he always wears and arrive at his real character, for he is cold as an icicle, and without a particle of that quality which we Germans call heart and soul.

Notwithstanding the fulsome praises of which he has constantly been made the object, I am unable to recall a single thing of any consequence that he has done for the benefit of the city. It is said that he has been a non-partisan Mayor, but I have been unable to see in what particular. The few Democrats whom he appointed to office belong to the extremely independent class, and had supported Low in the election. Our Police and our Fire Departments deserve all praise, but they were equally good before we knew anything about Mayor Low. Our streets are neither better nor cleaner than they were before, notwithstanding the enormous appropriations made for their improvement. The management of the Excise Department has been a public scandal, and I assert that Mayor Low is well acquainted with the deplorable condition of things in that department, and has refrained from bettering things in it only for political reasons, and out of fear of the temperance men on one side and the anti-temperance men on the other.

The treatment to which the German Property Owners' Association was subjected on the part of the Mayor is probably fresh in the mind of the committee who for a time called at my office every week on their way to the Mayor. They have probably not forgotten how often and in what varied and urgent matters they addressed themselves to the Mayor, and in how deferential and humble a manner, nor the polished politeness with which he received them, the positive promises to which he treated them, and the unfeeling coolness with which afterward, in every instance, he forgot his promises and paid no further heed to them.

The German citizens of the Thirteenth, Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, and Twenty-first Wards, who are so unfortunate as to live in that part of the city known as the "flooded districts," will probably remember also how often they called with their urgent and just complaints to Mayor Low, Health Commissioner Raymond, and to his Commissioner of Public Buildings, Ropes, and finally how they turned to the Mayor himself with quite humble petitions for relief, and how again all these complaints and applications were, and how brusquely Low gave them the cold shoulder when they begged him to exert himself so that the budget might contain a small appropriation for the purpose of affording them assistance. The sum which the Mayor allowed to his Health Commissioner for very some day as an increase above the amount of his previous expenditures—and this as I maintain utterly without warrant for so doing—would have more than sufficed to comply with the petitions of the distressed and suffering residents of the wards I have referred to.

I succeeded in unearthing a public wrong of long standing from the city docks at the Walabout. Upon an investigation of the city's property rights on that district I found that the blocks of six streets, opening into Kent avenue basin, with the exception of a strip of land lying on the north side of the basin, had been enclosed utterly without right or authority, and had been used for years by a number of rich merchants, who, for some fifteen years, had paid neither taxes nor assessments. I gave the Mayor the most unquestionable evidences of these facts. It was his business, with the aid of the Corporation Counsel, to take proper action in the matter. Some eighteen months have elapsed since then, but nothing whatever has been done to remedy this crying evil.

Justice Semler, after referring to the remarkable fact that Mayor Low approved of the payment of large sums of money to other counsel for the conduct of litigation in behalf of the city, although the Corporation Counsel should have attended to these cases himself, and also to his opposition to the introduction of the practice of providing free school books for the children of the poor in the public schools, goes on to relate his personal experiences in connection with Seth Low, Mr. Roebling, and the Brooklyn Bridge. He says:

The bridge was near completion when Mr. Low entered the Board of Bridge Directors by virtue of his position as Mayor. The action concerning the work was delayed by the tardy delivery of some cast steel by the factory that had undertaken the contract for its manufacture. It was impossible to get the work done in any other foundry in the United States or even in Europe, and there was nothing to do but to wait patiently for the fulfilment of the contract by the factory that had undertaken it. Mayor Low knew this very well, and the public agitation about the delay that he was largely instrumental in furthering could therefore have had no purpose except to gain credit for himself with the public as the only man in the Board of Bridge Trustees who was energetically endeavoring to advance the work. Thus came Low's attempt to fasten on Mr. Roebling the blame, although he knew well that Mr. Roebling was in no way responsible for the delay in the completion of the bridge, and had nothing whatever to do with it. Indeed, he was aware that Mr. Roebling's removal would only have delayed the work, and his conduct toward this admirable and deserving man was therefore in the highest degree heartless and unpatriotic.

Low started for Newport to see Mr. Roebling without consulting the other trustees. I did not know anything about it until after he had started. What occurred there everybody now knows. Mr. DeWitt has told the story in detail. I myself called upon Mr. Roebling after Low's interview with him, and I found him, although physically a very sick man, mentally wonderfully bright and intelligent, and constantly in communication from his sick chamber with the engineers at work upon the bridge, and directing the construction even to the smallest details. Mayor Low was well aware of this himself. He knew also that none of the resident engineers would have undertaken to complete the bridge without Mr. Roebling's aid, and that if Mr. Roebling had been removed from the position as Chief Engineer he would have declined all further connection with the work. Nevertheless Low attempted to force the resignation of the bridge trustees, or procure Mr. Roebling's removal and all this merely that, in the public opinion, the credit and glory of completing the great work to completion might belong to Seth Low.

Is it not a striking fact, which needs no comment, that Low desired Mr. Roebling's removal on the ground that he was mentally disabled, and yet proposed that he should be appointed Consulting Engineer at a salary of $10,000 a year, to be paid out of the city treasury?

Justice Semler concludes with a high compliment to the character and ability of Mr. Hendrix, whom he calls in the true sense a man of the people, politically free and uncompromised.
