THE DE BELLEVILLE DIVORCE CASE.

Looking for Facts About One of the Actor's Alleged Marriages in London.

The trial of the divorce suit of Edith de Belleville, the actress, against her husband, Frederick de Belleville, the actor, has, in consequence of a motion made by the defendant, gone over until January. The defendant applied to Judge Barrett for permission to amend his answer. In the answer he says he was married to Julia J. Josephs in London in May, 1876, and that this marriage was in force at the time of his alleged marriage with Mrs. Edith de Belleville on Jan. 1, 1880. He desired to amend by substituting March, 1876, for May as the date of his marriage with Miss Josephs.

Mrs. De Belleville, in her affidavit opposing the motion, says that she began her action for divorce on Dec. 20, 1882, and that on Feb. 26, 1883, alimony to the amount of $30 a week and $250 counsel fees were awarded her, all of which had been paid. An appeal had been taken from the order of Judge Donohue allowing this alimony, but the defendant had neglected to bring his appeal before the General Term. He had also from time to time secured the postponement of the trial of the action by pleading that he was not ready.

With regard to his allegation that he was married to Miss Josephs in May, 1876, she had caused a search to be made in the Bow Street Registry Office, London, beginning with April, 1876, and could find no record of such marriage. Trusting to this search and deceived by the date given she had abstained from asking for a commission to examine witnesses in London. It was untrue that she had destroyed a copy of Miss Josephs's certificate as alleged by the defendant. She had never heard of this marriage until after their separation. She had learned that De Belleville was an assumed name and that the defendant's proper name was F. A. Bonha. Under the name of Bonha he had married Miss Ellie Pferdner at Chicago on Oct. 30, 1882, and was now living with her. It was necessary for the plaintiff to have a commission to investigate the alleged marriage in London, and as she had no money to pay expenses she asked that the defendant be compelled to pay them.

Justice Barrett issued an order allowing the answer to be amended on payment of costs, and directing that the defendant pay the expenses of the commission.

A YOUNG FRENCH WOMAN'S PISTOL.

It Goes Off in the Street Just as she Meets her Former Husband.

Detective Reynolds was sitting in the barber shop at Waverley place and Mercer street at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when he heard the report of a pistol. He ran to the door and saw a woman struggling with two men on the pavement. The woman was crying, and the men appeared to be frightened. A seven-chambered, self-cocking revolver of French make lay near the curbstone. One of the men, Antoine Coty, of 168 East Sixtieth street, said the woman had attempted to shoot him, and asked the detective to arrest her. The trio were taken to Jefferson Market.

The woman said she was Louise Pey of Marseilles. She is 30 years of age, and has large blue eyes and a pretty face. She was daintily dressed in dark material. She said she was married to Coty in 1872 at Marseilles. He was then foreman of a large shoe factory. She was legally separated from him in 1875 because of his infidelity. She had one child, which was then a year old. He lived with a German woman in Marseilles until 1881, when the pair came to America. He brought the child with him. She said she grieved so much over the loss of the child that she determined to come to this country and try to get it.

She learned that Coty was in this city. She came here eight days ago and put up at the Hotel de Paris. She went to a lawyer for the purpose of instituting a suit for the recovery of the child. The terms proposed did not suit her. She determined to appeal to Coty, but was unable to find out where he lived. She met him in Waverley place yesterday. He refused to listen to her, and, in order to frighten him, she aimed a revolver at him. He struck down her hand, and the revolver went off.

Coty said that he was separated from the woman because of her immorality. He came to this city two years ago and opened a liquor store at 16 Clinton place. When he met the woman in Waverley place yesterday she pointed her revolver at him and, without saying a word, fired. Simultaneously he knocked down the revolver.

Justice Gardner held the woman for trial. She asked to be allowed to return to France, and showed a cabin ticket which she said she intended to use to-day.

BUSY BEES AT A FLOWER SHOW.

A Fine Display of Chrysanthemums Attended by Expert Honey Makers.

Honey bees were among the visitors to the first chrysanthemum flower show in this country yesterday in Horticultural Hall in West Twenty-eighth street, near Broadway. They entered by the open door, and enjoyed the flowers all the afternoon. As fast as some went away others came. The air was laden with the odor of the flowers.

No flowers but chrysanthemums were exhibited. Cut blooms were shown in glasses crowded together on two long tables. On two sides of the hall dwarf chrysanthemums in pots were arranged in two long banks of blooms, and the latest improvement in the plant brought about by cultivation was shown at the head of the hall, where stood pots with tall, straight stems over six feet high and surmounted by a mass of soft fluffy blooms. There are 400 kinds of chrysanthemums known, and about that number were shown yesterday. They differ much in form, size, and color. The sharp contrast of colors gave a brilliant effect while the fuzzy character of each individual bloom softened and harmonized the mass of color.

Though chrysanthemums are of many different species, yet they have this in common—each bloom has a whorl of little leaves which cluster around a common centre and overlap each other like shingles on a house. The common ox-eye daisy is of the family.

Prizes amounting to $200 were distributed. They went to Hallock & Thorpe of Queens, Long Island; W. C. Wilson of this city; Wm. Barr of Orange, N. J.; J. G. Bechamps & Son, and Patrick Moore of this city.

The exhibition will be continued to-day, and an auction sale of the plants will be held this morning.

Masquerading in Woman's Attire.

"We were ordered to look out for this person," said Policeman Masterson and Bradshaw to Justice Patterson yesterday. A man in woman's clothing was brought before the Justice.

"Your Honor," said Bradshaw, "the neighbors residing in Eldridge street have complained frequently that a tall woman dressed in black has walked the streets at night. People have been frightened by her, and Capt. Allaire ordered the police in his district to arrest the woman, if found. I saw and chased her several times, but every time she escaped. The last time I saw her she came toward me. I tried to stop her, but she knocked me down. Then Masterson ran up and arrested her. In the station house it was found that the supposed woman was a man.

At the examination yesterday, before Justice Patterson, several people came forward to speak for the accused, who is Jacob Wolfe, a ship carpenter, of 99 Eldridge street. The doctor held Wolfe for examination by the prison physician. Wolfe asserts that he put on woman's apparel because of trouble. It is not believed that he is insane.

Hallet Kilbourn to Have $60,000.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—There was a large attendance in the Criminal Court room this morning to hear the verdict in the case of Hallet Kilbourn against John R. Thompson, ex-Sergeant at Arms of the House of Representatives, for $75,000 damages by reason of arrest and imprisonment, which had been on trial over a week. One of the jurors being ill, he was some minutes before the sealed verdict was opened. It was read by Judge Cox, who announced that the jury had found for plaintiff, assessing the damages at $60,000. The jury was then polled, and each juror signified his verdict real was his verdict it was so recorded. Mr. Wilson, for the defendant, gave notice of a motion for a new trial. He moved to set aside the verdict for the ground of excessive damages. It is said that the first proposition made in the jury room was to award the plaintiff $125,000. Eight jurors voted in favor of this and the other four opposed it strongly. A compromise was finally effected by allowing $60,000.

Chinese Arriving at American Ports.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The Treasury Department has received from Senator Miller of California a copy of a letter written by him to the Secretary of State, complaining that by the fraudulent practices of officers of the Chinese Government, hundreds of Chinese laborers are being landed on American shores. The treaty between the United States and China admits Chinese teachers, students, merchants, or those who desire to travel in the United States, and provides that an officer of the Chinese Government shall issue certificates to such persons, and that the certificates so issued shall be considered prima facie evidence that the holders thereof come within the provisions of the treaty. Senator Miller assumes that the recent arrivals consist mainly of laborers, and that the officer issuing their certificates evidently did so knowing that they were not entitled to admission into the United States.

THE FEUARDENT-CESNOLA SUIT.

A Cabinetmaker who Supplied Gods and Heroes with Legs, Arms, and Noses.

The trial of the suit of Gaston L. Feuardent agt. L. P. Cesnola was continued yesterday. Henry W. Troy, a draughtsman, identified sketches of statues in the Metropolitan Museum which he was employed to make in 1880. The counsel said he wished to prove by the witness that the supposed mirror on the statue of Venus which he saw in 1880 appeared differently in 1881.

Mr. Choate—You want to show the progressive growth of the mirror?

The depositions of professors of archæology in the British Museum, relative to restorations and repairs of antiquities, were read.

Theodore Gehlen said he was a cabinetmaker, and was employed in the Metropolitan Museum several years ago. He was directed by Gen. Cesnola to restore the Cyprus statues and mount them. He made parts of legs, arms, and hands, and put noses and heads on the broken statues. He built up the statue of Hercules. In making the noses Cesnola told him to make them nice. He made a wing and tail of wood for the dove on the statue of the Bearded Venus. The wing and tail were covered with plaster and "washed" to look like the rest of the statue in color.

THE GANG FROM SHANTY HOLLOW.

Their Lawless Fun Ends in Pistol Firing—An Outsider Seriously Wounded.

The Shanty Hollow gang went on a raid on Tuesday night. They started an immense bonfire at Seventy-fourth street and First avenue. Fuel becoming scarce, they took a large coal box outside a grocery store, and heaped it and its contents upon the fire. Then they started to get some oysters to roast. They threw stones through the windows of an oyster saloon until the proprietor, George Blaumel, ran out. A shower of stones drove him back, but he reappeared with a revolver and fired six shots. The roughs dispersed.

Police Captain Gunner heard of the firing, and sent detectives to the place. They found a large man upon the ground, bleeding from a wound in his back. He was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital. He was Magnus Gunberg of 486 East Seventy-fourth street, a cigar maker. The ball entered his back below the kidneys, passed through the body, and was found in his boot.

Geo. Blaumel, who did the shooting, and his waiter, Charles Doipf, were arrested and taken before Gunberg, who, it is expected, will not live. The wounded man denied that they shot him. He said that he was approaching the place when the shots were fired in front, and that some one in the crowd returned the fire, and that one of the latter shots struck him.

The ball found in Gunberg's boot fits Blaumel's pistol. He says he fired into the air. At the Yorkville Court, yesterday, he was held in $3,000 bail to await the result of Gunberg's injuries.

Phillips shows that $751,409 was raised for mission work for the year ending Oct. 31. Of this $362,997 went to the foreign missions and $363,503 to the home. The treasury is in debt $88,198. It was decided to raise $750,000 for missionary work for the coming year. The committee agreed to send $15,000 of this to Africa, $28,781 to South America, $81,950 to China, $24,000 to Germany and Switzerland, $40,552 to Denmark, Norway and Sweden, and $64,820 to India.
