FARMS WITHIN THE CITY LIMITS.

Dairies, Stock Farms, Orchards, Fields, and Woods, All in the Metropolis.

"Farms within the city limits? Well, now, when you come to think of it, there are a good many of them left," the Hon. John B. Haskin of Fordham, Tammany Hall, the Adirondacks, and various other places, said to a Sun reporter. "Farms in the city? Well, I should say I do know something about them. Why, I remember very well the old Varian farm which was in the neighborhood of Twenty-sixth street and Sixth avenue——"

"But I was asking about the farms that remain," the reporter remarked.

"Ah yes," abstractedly continued the venerable chief of the Tuscaroras, "I could tell you all about the old Lenox farm which was bought for $12,000 and is now worth $12,000,000. That is up in the neighborhood of the Lenox Library, the Presbyterian Hospital, and the homes of John Kelly and J. H. V. Arnold."

"But I was speaking of the farms within the city limits to-day."

"To be sure. I remember very well when I was a boy driving a load of pickles from my father's place in Fordham down to Fulton Market, and the road lay through what is now Central Park, and I remember that up about Fourteenth street, near Fourth avenue, there were high banks, and snowball trees, and lilac trees, and I did not like it because the fences were so high that it bothered me to get over."

"And do you not know of some farms within the city limits to-day?" the reporter asked.

"Why, I remember going down to the market and getting my coffee and cakes with Lewis G. Morris. Of course he would not like to talk about that now, for he is worth millions."

"You do some farming yourself now within the city limits, do you not?"

"Oh, I was going to tell you about that. I have about thirty acres or so, and do a little farming, but there are lots of farms within the city limits. There is the big Van Courtlandt farm and Col. Hoe's and lots of others. Come in some day when I am not so busy. I will tell you all about it."

Mr. Haskin spoke the truth when he said there are lots of farms within the city limits. It is a solid fact that of such farms there is at least one that is not only of local but of almost world-wide celebrity. That is the farm of Col. Richard M. Hoe, who was one of the pioneers of fine cattle breeding in this country, and has on his farm of fifty-two acres on the Southern Boulevard some of the finest cattle in the country to-day, and makes butter worth a dollar a pound, and has a big silo, and feeds his stock on ensilage, and has the best mechanical appliances anybody ever saw on a farm, and all this is within the region of lamps, gas, police, and city taxes.

The Van Courtlandt estate, to which reference has been made, contains about 880 acres at Fordham. Some of it is almost virgin soil today. It has hill and dale, lake and river. About 100 acres of it is the home of Augustus Van Courtlandt, and is called Olliffe Park. It is a fine farm and it produces large crops. In the neighborhood of Jerome Park, Wm. S. Dunn and H. B. Claflin own 138 acres together. It is destined to speedy conversion into building lots. At Highbridge is the Ogden farm of 107 acres, a considerable part of which is covered by a greenhouse. The place is worth, at a rough estimate, $2,500 an acre. Lewis G. Morris owns about sixty-one acres at Morris Dock, worth about the same price. He, too, is a famous cattle breeder and farmer, and he owned one bull worth $40,000. When it is remembered that an acre is about seventeen city building lots, it will be observed that Mr. Morris's sixty-one acres is a considerable slice. Mrs. Susan Rees has twenty-eight acres; Mr. R. W. Montgomery, eighteen; Dr. Dickerson, eleven; M. O. Davidson, seventeen, and F. W. Devoe, nine in that neighborhood. The estate of H. W. T. Mali has thirty-six acres, and there is a big farm in among the ninety-four acres belonging to St. John's College, Fordham.

The Twenty-fourth Ward Building Association owns 110 acres, and in that vicinity Mr. S. L. M. Barlow has thirty-two acres. At Williamsbridge, on what is known as Gunhill, Michael Varian has fifty-two acres, and John Bussing forty acres. The Villa Site Association at Jerome Park owns 110 acres. Further north Mr. John Dickerson has 148 acres, and Richard Dickerson thirty-eight acres. James Delafield has 200 acres bordering on the Hudson. Percy L. Pyne twenty-six acres at Riverdale Park. Land about there is worth about $2,500 an acre. Samuel D. Babcock has sixty-four acres. William H. Appleton seventeen acres, Oliver Harrison ten, George H. Bend ten, Robert Colgate ten, H. F. Spaulding ten. Not far off Martin Bates rusticates on seventeen and a half acres, D. Willis James on ten acres, Robert Johnson on nine acres, Joseph Rosenthal on forty acres, Lispenard Stewart on twelve acres. Land about there is worth all the way from $1,500 to $3,000 an acre. The Sisters of Charity have fifty-four acres at Mount St. Vincent, a good deal of which may be called farm lands. It is the old home of Edwin Forrest, and includes his famous castle.

Bordering on Riverdale avenue, Frederick Goodrich has twenty-nine acres and Mary Somler eighteen acres. On the old Albany post road Mr. Webster Woodman has eleven acres. At Hudson Park William E. Dodge, Jr., has fourteen acres, William Allen Butler eighteen acres, and ex-Collector Hiram Barney forty-one acres. Waldo Hutchins thirteen acres, Bowie Dash thirty-one acres, W. C. Wetmore thirty-seven acres, and the estate of the late James R. Whiting seventy-three acres. Coming south, the estate of Daniel Ewing occupies twenty-one acres and John Ewing forty acres. Isaac G. Johnson owns sixty acres and David B. Cox twenty acres.

Near Woodlawn Cemetery, and near the Van Courtlandt estate, W. O. Giles owns twenty acres, M. Shready fourteen acres, the George Opdyke estate thirty-four acres, John P. Disbrow eighteen acres, James M. McLean ten acres, the estate of George Peck twenty acres, Aaron T. Downs twenty-five acres, the Koehler brewery twenty-seven and one-half acres, and George F. Coddington thirty-five and one-half acres on the Yonkers line. Along there E. S. Miller owns thirty-eight acres and R. G. Hyatt twenty-nine acres. Land there is worth from $750 to $1,000 an acre. Jeremiah Fler has thirty acres and D. S. L. Valentine thirty acres. Woodlawn Cemetery contains 412 acres. Near by, the estate of Henry Bruner has eleven acres and Augustus Broadhie fourteen acres.

In the Twenty-third ward the Port Morris Improving Company owns 350 acres, which is estimated as worth $3,000 an acre. St. Mary's Park, which contains about twenty acres, is valued at about the same figure. John J. Crane holds twenty-five acres at about that price.

At West Farms, over by the East River and Sound, there are some large landholdings within the city limits. Charles Myers has twenty-six acres, the Philip Dater estate thirty-three acres, Samuel B. White forty-one acres, Jason Rogers twenty-three acres, Wm. Simpson eighty acres. Mr. Simpson's place, which is on the Southern Boulevard and Westchester avenue, has no little celebrity as a stock farm. He is near Col. Hoe's place, and not far from the celebrated farm of E. G. Faile, which covers eighty-eight and a half acres. Property along there is worth $1,500 or more an acre. W. H. Cheesborough has thirty-four acres, I. Casenova 119 acres, Oliver Bryan nine acres, the Barretta estate 110 acres, worth $2,000 an acre. Mrs. W. M. Gilbert has twenty-one acres.

Charles R. Dickey has fifty acres on the Sound, the Paul V. Spofford estate sixty-four acres, Wm. J. Simpson, the pawnbroker, seventy-two acres; P. V. Spofford, Jr., forty-three acres; W. H. Caswell, twelve acres; and the Bathgate brothers, thirty-seven acres. Wm. Minford, the sugar man, has thirteen acres; Benjamin F. Trask, thirty-six acres; Thomas Wilkins, eighteen acres. D. M. Lydig's 169-acre farm has a splendid dairy on it. The Lorillards own at Fordham Park about 380 acres of almost virgin soil along the banks of the Bronx. It is varied with woods, lakes, and streams, and has long been talked of as a good site for a park. The owners are ten of the Lorillard family.

Among other owners of farms in the upper part of the city are Timothy G. Eastman, who has established a horse farm at Morris Dock, and Mr. J. B. Brown, President of the New York Plough Company, who has been the leading spirit in the introduction of the ensilage system in this country. Mr. Brown is cultivating ten acres of Hugh N. Camp's place.

The Van Cortlandt estate lies on the east side of Broadway, from Kingsbridge to Yonkers. The herd on the farm numbers 105 cows and heifers. They comprise Holstein, Alderney, and Guernsey breeds crossed. The milk tests at 120°, cream gauge. Corn, oats, and rye are raised, and 150 bushels of potatoes. There is a forty-acre orchard of choice fruit, an area of 30 acres with ice houses like the immense affairs of the upper Hudson. The lake, of 30 acres, is near the Van Cortlandt station on the Northern road. The water power from its overflow runs the farm saw mill and grist mill. Among the farm implements are mowers, reapers, tedders, threshers. The taxes on the farm are $6,000 a year. There are two horse chestnut trees on the place which were brought from England 100 years ago. There are some immense locust trees that look as though they might have waved a welcome to Gen. Washington as he rode down the valley to take possession of the evacuated city. The farm is entailed across the present generation. There has been some talk of converting it into a park for the annexed district.

Unrecognized Pastor Thompson.

The Rev. N. B. Thompson, pastor of the South Baptist church in Williamsburgh, the church which the other Baptist churches of Brooklyn refused to recognize last Thursday because it did not hold that baptism was a requisite to the partaking of the Lord's Supper, preached yesterday on "The Sheep in the Outer Fold."

"God's religion," he said, "does not circumscribe any man's purposes nor dwarf them. The Church of God does not contain all that is good this side of heaven. The spring flowing from the mountain top makes the lake at its base, and, though separated from it, is yet a part of it. They are one. We fail to recognize good. This is one of the failures of God's Church. We see goodness only within our own narrow confines. Bring the Church into sympathy with the world, and you will open wide the doors through which will pass to the fold men of character and strong purposes, such, alas! as the Church does not possess. The Church which held holy fingers of the daughter just is not the true Church of Christ."

NEW FERRY TO STATEN ISLAND.

One Wharf Already Leased on the South Shore—The Boats to Start on Jan. 1.

Within the next sixty days John H. Starin will begin running a ferry to the east or south shore of Staten Island, in opposition to the StatenIsland Ferry Company. Michael Conklin, United States Inspector of Hulls, whose office is in the Post Office building, has leased one wharf for a landing, and is now negotiating for two other landings. Mr. Conklin acts for J. H. Starin. He said to a reporter yesterday:

"The lease of Rubsam's wharf at Tompkinsville has been recorded in the County Clerk's office. I have leased the landing for one year, with the privilege of a two years' renewal. It is intended to run an independent and direct ferry to the south shore of the island, with three landings—one at Tompkinsville, one at Stapleton, and the third at Clifton. Three new, large, and fast boats will be built for the service. In the mean time ample facilities will be provided. I understand that there will be an abundance of money at the disposal of the men who will manage the business, but I am not at liberty to say whether or not Wm. H. Vanderbilt has a direct interest in the venture. One result of this move will be five-cent fares to and from Staten Island after Jan. 1, about which time the new line will begin running. The old company has been merged into the Staten Island Rapid Transit Company. The parties backing the new enterprise are experienced steamboat men and know precisely what the traffic amounts to. They have everything prepared to move promptly and effectively. Their boats can be ordered within ten days. If the wharves now there do not answer the purpose larger and longer ones will be built. The boats will carry both freight and passengers and be larger than those used on the North Shore Ferry. The ferry slip at the foot of Whitehall street, now used by Mr. Starin, will be the city landing. At the island the landings will be at the foot of Arrietta street, Gore street, and Vanderbilt avenue."

A gentleman well versed in the subject said: "Mr. Starin has been forced into this fight, and seems to have every chance of success. When the South Shore Ferry was wrested from Capt. Vanderbilt, by Erastus Wiman and his friends, it was spring, and a busy summer season was at hand. Mr. Starin had made his plans to go to Europe. His ferry to the north shore of Staten Island yields him $100,000 net profit yearly. He had always been friendly with the Vanderbilts, and consequently he never attempted to run an opposition. But the Rapid Transit Company intend to build a railroad along both shores of the island, and would ultimately cut Mr. Starin up anyhow, so the only resource left for him was to start a competing line. Since the Vanderbilts have left the old ferry, and Mr. Starin has done with his summer business, he will now start this new ferry. He has plenty of boats idle to meet the needs of such a route, and he has a good landing in New York—two important factors which previous opposition lines lacked."

Mr. Starin's son said to a reporter on Saturday night that the competing ferry would certainly be started.

An officer of the Staten Island Rapid Transit Company said yesterday that they expected to break ground for their new road within two weeks, and that their plan of bringing people by fast boats to that part of Staten Island nearest New York and then distributing them by railroads along both shores would be so much more economical than coasting the island with boats, that they could carry passengers for five cents and pay dividends, while it would be impossible for Mr. Starin to do so. The company had expected that Mr. Starin would compete with it, but after he had tried it a few months he would retire from the field, as all the chances were against his success.

Who Has Lost Two Bags of Coffee?

Policemen Jarvis and Quigley of the harbor squad, who were on the East River in a boat on Saturday, came across two thieves, who were carrying off in a rowboat two bags of coffee which they had stolen. The policemen called on them to stop, but the thieves only rowed away the faster toward the Brooklyn side of the river. They arrived at the foot of Baltic street ahead of the police, and escaped to the land, abandoning the boat and its contents. Jarvis and Quigley confiscated the abandoned property, which now awaits an owner at the Police Central Office. One of the bags of coffee is marked "A. Saissi, Maracaibo," while the other bears the initials, "B. & C. C. G."
