THE GREAT AMERICAN BIRD.

Crowds at the Markets Filling Baskets with Thanksgiving Cheer.

Crowds surged through Washington and Fulton Markets all day yesterday, laying in supplies for Thanksgiving Day. The poultry stands were the great centres of attraction, however, and there was such a jam around them that locomotion was at times impossible. The turkey and chicken venders made a deafening chatter with their cries of, "Here you are, lady! Shillin' a pound for chickens or geese!" "Here you are, fine Jersey turkeys, sixteen cents a pound!"

One young matron in Washington Market, after securing her turkey at twenty cents a pound, while others equally good were being sold at the same stall for eighteen cents, was besought to fill up the chinks of her basket with celery, cranberries, and onions, as indispensable to a Thanksgiving repast.

"I don't think Charles likes onions," said she in an undecided tone.

"They are werry fashionable, mum; all the folks on Fifth avenue buys 'em, mum," said the salesman solemnly. The onions went into the basket.

A poultryman was asked for statistics of the turkey trade.

"You must ask me something easier," said he. "Mebbe 100,000 turkeys are for sale in the different markets. They come from all over the country. Jersey and Philadelphia birds sell as well as any. The price now is from 15 to 20 cents a pound. Some large turkeys for raffling and for saloons bring 25 cents. The weather is against poultry, or prices would be better. The poultry won't keep in such weather, so everybody is trying to sell out to-night."

Some poor, skinny turkeys were sold at 12 cents a pound at the stalls, along with chickens and geese at the same figures. During the day the Board of Health inspectors condemned a good deal of poultry and carted it away, but this did not seem to raise the price materially. One immense turkey, which tipped the scales at 40½ pounds, was offered at dark for $7.50. Rabbits were plenty at 50 cents a pair. Quail ran from $2 to $2.50 a dozen, and ducks were to be had at all prices.

Just outside the poultry quarters were many stands which filled the air with the fragrance of thyme and sage. Near by were also fine bunches of celery, dark red cranberries, great white cauliflowers, and no end of pumpkins, squashes, carrots, onions, and beets.

Huge quarters of beef, mutton, pork, mounds of sausages, mince meat, and spare ribs adorned the butchers' stalls. In another quarter were mountains of peanuts, almonds, chestnuts, hickory nuts, and all kinds of nuts to fill in the chinks at dessert. Golden Florida oranges perfumed the air. Grapes were a drug, and very cheap at from 5 to 15 cents a pound. Red and yellow hued apples were in abundance at $3 to $5 a barrel for fancy kinds.

All the markets were illuminated, and kept open until long past the usual hour.

FAVORED BY THE LADIES.

The Rev. Mr. Richmond Not yet Called to Succeed the Late Dr. Williams.

The Rev. Dr. E. B. Boggs of Newark preached last Sunday in St. Mark's Episcopal Church in West Orange. He read a notice of a vestry meeting to be held immediately after service. The vestrymen have not yet been able to agree upon a successor to the late rector, the Rev. Dr. Williams, although many parishioners still desire a call to be given the Rev. William Richmond, a young unmarried man, who was recently the assistant minister. It was supposed by the congregation that the matter was again to be brought before the vestry.

The Rev. Mr. Richmond occupied one of the pews during the service. When Dr. Williams died and the vestry failed to advance Mr. Richmond to the rectorship, he handed in his resignation. He yet remains in the parish and attends the services every Sunday. Recently he declined a call to a large church in Philadelphia. His friends are hopeful of inducing the vestry to commit the church to his charge, and several ladies of the parish are especially zealous in the cause. The four vestrymen whose votes offset those of the four who want to give him a call have frequently been entreated by ladies to abandon their opposition.

Eight vestrymen responded to the call read by Mr. Boggs. In the Sunday school room they found fifteen of Mr. Richmond's lady friends, and also learned that the call for the meeting was written by Mrs. J. G. Hecksher. This lady, in an appeal to the gentlemen, said the church needed a rector, and that it was also high time to heal its divisions. She urged the vestry to call Mr. Richmond. Mrs. John B. Van Wagenen and Mrs. Leutzmann spoke in the same strain. Mr. Charles Williams, who, like other relatives of the late rector, is opposed to Mr. Richmond, left the room, and two ladies followed him and besought him to vote for the rector of their choice. He stood proof against their appeals, and went home to dinner. The other vestrymen who do not want Mr. Richmond for rector were also individually besought to do as the ladies desired, but they would make no promises.

It is expected that the deadlock in the vestry will continue until after the annual election of vestrymen next Easter. Meanwhile both sides are trying to make votes by renting unoccupied pews to their friends.

MACY'S HOLIDAY WINDOW.

Jumbo—The White Elephant and a Wondrous Spectacular Panorama of the London Zoo.

The display in Macy's holiday window this season exceeds everything in the way of a street advertisement that has ever been seen in this city. The entire sixty feet of space behind the plate glass sections on the corner of Fourteenth street and Sixth avenue has been converted into a doll amphitheatre and panorama, and scenories combining the principal features of the London Zoological garden and the Jardin d'Acclimation de Paris. The scenories embrace a large mirror framed in plants, in front of and back of which passes the panoramic procession moved by machinery and driven by steam. This procession consists of Jumbo as he appeared in the London Zoo, with a caparisoned howdah on his back, in which are seated a large party of French dolls. In front of Jumbo is a Bengal tiger, similarly caparisoned, saddled and laden with French dolls, a white elephant, the first ever brought to America, bearing another party of dolls in its caparisoned howdah, and before this wonder prancing as they go two by two, is a cavalcade headed by a troop of Shetland ponies, fac similes of the famous steed in the Jardin d'Acclimation de Paris, and followed by a troop of Arabian horses, an ostrich drawing a car or phaeton full of dolls, and an Irish jaunting car, also full of dolls. The ponies and horses are ridden by dolls, dressed in gorgeous costumes, and representing Punch and Judy, Humpty Dumpty and Harlequin, elegantly costumed ladies and gentlemen, and, to wind up the whole, a monkey on one pony and a white lap dog on another.

The wild excitement that prevails among the spectators who block the sidewalks and streets at this corner is laughably reflected in the mirror that forms part of the scenories, and also in the faces of the doll spectators on the wings of the amphitheatre.

The only regret that can be felt in witnessing this too beautiful street advertisement is that it is not enclosed in a children's playhouse, where all the little people in the city could see it without being jostled and crowded as they are around that now famous corner of Macy.

Blankets by the Thousand.

When one is laying in a supply of bed blankets for the coming cold weather it is well to examine the stock of such dealers as H. P. Williams & Co., 250 Grand street. At present this house has on hand 1,000 pairs of bed blankets of every description, color, size, and quality. As these blankets are augmented by additions from the great auction sales of Allen, Lane & Co., and of Bivins, Rogers & Langford, H. P. Williams & Co. can afford to sell them at greatly reduced prices. These prices range from $1.50 to $20 a pair. The immense variety can be judged by these quotations. An examination of the goods will insure a purchase and satisfaction.

International Arbitration Convention.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—The Convention on International Arbitration resumed its session to-day. Bishop Simpson presiding. A general discussion was had on the subject of arbitration as a substitute for war and the establishment of an International Congress for arbitration. Resolutions were adopted requesting the ministers of the Gospel throughout the country to urge the substitution of amicable negotiations for war in the settlement of international difficulties, as a step toward the universal triumph of the Prince of Peace, and that the editors of the land be also requested to keep the principle of the arbitration of national difficulties frequently and prominently before the people.

Accidents on the Rail.

At Elsdon, on the Grand Trunk road, near the Indiana State line, on Friday, as an express train was crossing a switch, the engine jumped the track. Three cars were wrecked, a brakeman named Locke was killed, and the conductor and one passenger injured.

A freight train was wrecked at Bowerston, Ohio, yesterday morning. Fifteen cars were thrown down an embankment. It is supposed that wreckers put an obstruction in the frog of the switch. Nobody was hurt.

The second division of train 49 ran into the first division of the same train near Windsor, Ohio, yesterday morning, killing Conductor Pierce and severely injuring several brakemen. Eight cars were burned.

A Lawyer's Heavy Fee.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—The long pending suit of Henry C. Terry, a member of the bar, to obtain from the city a fee of $50,000 for services in connection with the transfer of the Oxford turnpike to the municipality, was decided to-day by the master to whom the case had been referred. It is reported that after a thorough review of the testimony, the money should be paid to Mr. Terry, as he saw nothing to satisfy him that there had been any fraud as alleged. The money was paid to Mr. Terry as a contingent fee, but was afterward impounded at the instance of the city.

Drawing the Pensions of Dead Persons.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 28.—The publication of the pension list by the Times of this city reveals the fact that several of the pensioners are dead, and have been for a year or more. One woman drew a pension in the name of her mother, who has been dead more than a year. A partial list of illegal cases is published to-day. The Attorney-General for Northern New York has been officially informed of the facts.

PLENTY OF PRINTERS.

The Evening Post Fills its Composing Room with Workmen from the Country.

The printers in the office of the Evening Post struck on Nov. 16 for an increase of salary from 35 to 40 cents per thousand ems. The demand was refused, and the compositors left the office. Mr. St. John, the publisher, secured enough men in their places to publish on that day one of his three editions. Until yesterday the Evening Post has continued to publish its 3:30 edition, dropping its two preceding editions. On one day it printed only a half sheet. Yesterday the 2:30 edition was resumed.

"We have a full force of printers," Mr. St. John said yesterday, "and within a day or two we shall resume the other edition. At the time of the strike the Commercial Advertiser and the Graphic gave in on condition that the other evening papers did the same. The Commercial informed me they would not pay the rate demanded under any circumstances. I conclude, however, that they are paying the increased prices. The Mail and Express is the only paper besides the Evening Post which has been full in the time of the strike. I told our men I could not allow them to fix their own price, as there would then be no limit to their ultimate demands. They said they would let the matter settle itself according to the laws of supply and demand, and left the office. Among them were men who had been in this office twenty and twenty-five years. They did not keep their promise. They persuaded and threatened men who wished to work for us, and one day sent a lot of men into our office under the guise of seeking employment, and took them out at the hour when it would cripple us most. They have visited the residences of nearly all the compositors in our employ, and have tried arguments with some and threats with others. A man who left our employ this morning confessed that he had been a spy and had secured for the union the names and addresses of as many compositors as he could. A printer and two or three members of the union are now in our employ, though we cannot tell who they are.

"We have demonstrated that the price demanded was an abnormal one. We have secured good printers, with the exception of two three, whom we will replace with good men as they quit us. Many of our men had been getting only twenty-five cents per thousand ems in the country. We have had more applications than places, and have filed a good many names in case of further need.

"The men who went out were, most of them, excellent printers. They joined the union, but we understand that they had broken ranks in a week. Three or four of them found places in job offices. If they were to return now we would not make vacancies for them by discharging other men, but would have no objection to taking back some of them who we know can show clear records, as we have places for them."

George A. McKay, Secretary of Typographical Union No. 6, said yesterday: "If anybody has been threatened or solicited to leave the employment of the Post we know nothing about it. I don't believe that anybody from the union has done anything of the sort."
