CONROY'S LAST WITNESS.

HAVE ANY OTHER POLICEMEN EVER BEEN SUNSTRUCK?

Dr. Garrish Thinks Men Thus Made Delirious Never Get Over It—Only One Expert Called to Testify that Conroy was Sane.

Men waited in line for hours yesterday to get into the General Sessions Court room, where Ex-Policeman Wm. Conroy was on trial for murdering Peter Keenan. Conroy was well shaven and well dressed, and appeared to have slept well when he came from the prisoner's box. He seemed to be pleased when he saw that an artist from an illustrated weekly was sketching him as he sat at the bar.

The defence was resumed by calling Dr. John P. Garrish. Counsel read from a newspaper an account of the death, in the insane ward, Bellevue Hospital, of the Rev. Father O'Mahony, who was sunstruck while on a visit to an uncle in New Zealand a year ago. The lawyer then asked whether such extreme effects of sunstroke were often seen.

A.—Certainly, sir. Injuries to the head, subsequent to the reception of the sunstroke, are likely to increase the evil effects. The effects of the sunstroke are sometimes apparent as long as twenty years after the stroke. The men affected are prone to sudden anger and violence, or absent-mindedness. In most cases, the end is death in an asylum for the insane.

Counsel described Conroy's various accidents and asked:

Q.—Could not a man who was suffering with insanity, resulting from all of these causes, perform his full duty as a policeman, without betraying his insanity to any one? A.—Certainly, sir, unless he was subjected to any sudden excitement.

Q.—Was it entirely consistent with insanity for Conroy to make application for an appointment on the police force, undergo an examination, and answer every question properly? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Does one who has suffered from sunstroke, to the extent of becoming delirious, ever entirely recover, mentally, from the effects of the sunstroke? A.—No, sir; the mind is never entirely sound again. The membrane, if not the substance of the brain, is affected.

Cross-examined.—Don't you know, Doctor, that the percentage of those who become insane through sunstroke is almost infinitesimal? A.—No, sir.

Mr. Fellows proceeded to test the Doctor's head for figures, and asked:

Q.—What is the population of this State? A.—49,230 odd. [Laughter.]

Q.—Now, about what is the population of this city? A.—Well, sir, about 2,000,000. [Laughter.]

Mr. Fellows advanced and stood close to the witness, and said:

Now, Doctor, your testimony, and that of the other physicians called for the defence, has raised a doubt in my mind. I have gone through a good deal that you say, in Conroy's case, is indicative of insanity, and I want to satisfy my mind. I want to find out whether I am insane. Do you discover a scar on my forehead? A.—I do, sir, over the right eye.

Q.—Suppose that I told you, Doctor, that I received that injury when I was eight years old, that inflammation of the brain followed, that I suffered subsequently with scarlet fever and smallpox, and that I have always indulged in moderate quantities of alcoholic stimulant; would you change your opinion, sir? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Suppose I violated my oath of office and appropriated public moneys or force fat babies; would you think that, before a jury, the fact of my having received a scalp injury would excuse my crime? A.—If you had brain lesions resulting from inflammation, sir, they would be some excuse for your crime.

Judge Cowing then took the witness.

Q.—Doctor, for the information of the jury and myself, will you kindly explain what the difference is between acute alcoholic mania and chronic insanity? A.—There is none, sir.

Before retiring from the witness stand Dr. Garrish said he wished to correct himself as to the population of the city and State.

Dr. Alexander E. Macdonald, Superintendent of the Ward's Island Asylum for the Insane, testified. Then the prosecution rested. Counsel will sum up to-day.

MR. MOROSINI STILL AT LARGE.

His Last Despairing Effort to Find those Books of Jay Gould's.

Signor G. P. Morosini of W. E. Connor & Co. appeared in the witness chair bright and smiling yesterday morning in the suit of the Metropolitan Elevated Railroad Company to break the October agreement. Counsellor Evarts said: "Mr. Morosini will now state the result of his efforts to find those books."

"That, I suppose, will be proper," remarked Counsellor Carter, rather sarcastically.

Signor Morosini described in a graphic manner his renewed search for the books of W. E. Connor & Co., and his account absorbed the attention of the Court, counsel, and spectators.

"Yesterday I went to a store room where old lumber, boxes, books, and papers are kept. I never before know such a room exist. I took with me four messenger boys, a hired man, and the janitor. I looked everywhere, opened every box and trunk, but could not find those books. There were books belonging to Russell Sage and many others, but not those books. The room is on the first floor. It is not connected with W. E. Connor & Co., but on the same floor. I never was in it before.

"I also went to Mr. Connor's house. I look in his bedroom, closets, everywhere, but not a trace of those books. I have not found any one who knows about them," concluded Signor Morosini, with a despairing shrug.

In answer to Counsellor Carter, Signor Morosini said he had made no effort to communicate with Mr. Connor in Europe. It would take some time to do so. Signor Morosini was then allowed to leave the witness stand and made for the door.

"Oh, I did not mean that Mr. Morosini was discharged," said Counsellor Carter.

"Don't go away, Mr. Morosini," testily exclaimed Counsellor Evarts.

Counsellor Carter then rose and said: "Nothing has removed from my mind the impression that there has been a plain endeavor, successful so far, to keep these books out of our reach. If the witness has made his efforts to find them in good faith he must be discharged. If not, he must stand committed until he does. As to his story, let those believe who will; I don't."

Counsellor Evarts enlarged on the patient efforts of Signor Morosini to produce those books, and Judge Van Brunt said:

"I will not make on the spot a final decision. The evidence this morning has changed the aspect of the record. I will think over the matter, and dispose of it to-morrow or Monday."

HARLEM MILK RATES COME DOWN.

President Rutter's Remarks Upon Yielding to the Railroad Commissioners.

The New York Central and the Harlem Railroads have assented to the reduction of 33⅓ per cent. on the freight rates on milk on the Harlem road. President Rutter writes to the Railroad Commissioners saying:

In a community dead to enterprise or business, a few public spirited people sell their property and build a railroad. The property of their conservative neighbors is thereby quadrupled in value. For twenty-six years the railroad builders receive no return upon their money, and when at last it begins to earn a comparatively small portion of the profit pocketed by the idle property owning people, the State is asked to stop the enterprise which produces such exorbitant returns.

At a recent meeting of the Chamber of Commerce less than forty of its fifteen hundred members were present, and passed resolutions denouncing the capitalization of earnings by corporations, and yet among those who attended were several whose real estate in this city pays them more rent annually than the total sum they originally paid for the land, the value of the same. This increased value has been mainly produced by the railways. But if some one had moved in the interest of the tenants to reduce by law the rentals which are exacted upon the land each originally paid for the fine theory of communism from these gentlemen would have roused the country. It is proper to state, however, that the stock of the Harlem Company has never been increased by capitalization of earnings.

Neither this company nor the other railways of the State desire any controversy or disagreement with the Board of Railroad Commissioners. They would submit to great damage and injustice before being driven into litigation. But as property is more easily attacked than other, and more than all others is constantly assailed by sectional agitators

The New York Central and the Harlem companies will, first of January, fix their milk rates at thirty cents for all distances as recommended by the Board.

All cause a loss to the Harlem of about one fifth net income, and while submitting to the decree we protest against it as unjust to the Harlem.

Ending with Short Sail to Reach a Port.

Capt. t. Burnap of the steamship Gleadowe, arrived from Lisbon yesterday, reported that on the 9th inst he sighted a Norwegian bark flying immercial code signal letter S. Her mainmast, foremast, and mizzen topmast were gone, and she was under mizzen and fore staysails. The captain of the bark could not understand the signals of Capt. Burnap, and the latter sent out a boat. The bark proved to be the Lovsley, Capt. Harboe, from New York for Cette, with a cargo of petroleum. She had been dismasted in the 1st inst in a hurricane off Bermuda. Capt Burnap offered to tow the bark to this port or Delaware Breakwater, but Capt Harboe wanted no assistance, and said that he would try to reach Gibraltar. He only wanted to be reported. The boat of the steamship was smashed in boarding the bark.

Showing her Badge and Causing an Arrest.

Mrs. Louisa Moore of 163d street and Kingsbridge road was driving along the Kingsbridge road yesterday morning when she saw Conrad Fox, the driver of a truck for Weber, the piano manufacturer, beating his horses, which were balking. She called upon Policeman Brownlof the Kingsbridge squad to arrest the man. The officer was dismissed on the ground that he had not seen the abuse. Mrs. Moore insisted, and finally showed a gold badge of Mr. Bergh's society. Fox was taken to Justice Patterson's Court. He said he had only one pair on the truck, and was only whipping the animals sufficiently to overcome their balkiness. Justice O'Reilly held him in $100 bail.

Five Hundred Bottlers Sailing About.

The bottlers of New York, Brooklyn, and Jersey City gave an excursion to bottlers from other places yesterday. When the Sylvan Dell started from West Tenth street there were fully 500 bottlers on board, and several times that number of bottles. The bottlers stated around the Battery, visited Blackwell's Island, went down the harbor to Bay Ridge, and up up the Hudson to Yonkers and back.

A Hotel for Babies.

A day nursery for children whose mothers work out has been established by a number of ladies at 216 East Twentieth street. Mrs Walcott is in charge. She serves dinner on a table about a foot high, and afterward tucks the children away in cribs for an afternoon nap. Ten cents a day is charged to the mother.

EMMA BOND ON THE STAND.

She Tells the Story of her Wrongs and Identifies One of her Assailants.

HILLSBORO, Ill., Dec. 13.—At the opening of the court this morning all the witnesses were told by Judge Phillips that they must remain in the room prepared for them or on the street, as they would not be permitted in the court room. The defence has many more witnesses than the prosecution. Miss Bond was the first witness called. She recited the circumstances of the outrage almost exactly as has been told in THE SUN. She said that on the afternoon of June 27, 1882, after dismissing school, and while she was sweeping the school house, she was seized from behind by a man who dropped through the scuttle hole from the attic. He choked her until she was blind, tied her shawl round her waist, and then pulled her up to the loft above. As she went up she saw the face of one of the men in the loft.

"There," she said, pointing to John C. Montgomery, "is the very man. I swear that that is the face I saw."

She also observed that the other man in the loft had on low cut shoes and red stockings. She was taken up and laid on a platform in the loft. She told the men she would rather lose her life than her virtue, and begged them to kill her. One man remarked that that was easy enough to do, and, taking out his knife, he made cuts on her throat and face, nine in all. Upon this she lost consciousness, and on recovering about an hour afterward she had been assaulted. She was chloroformed and assaulted repeatedly after that. When she recovered consciousness about 1 o'clock in the morning she found herself lying in a heap on the school house floor beneath the scuttle hole.

She dragged herself over to the house of Widow Pettis, where the two defendants, Lee Pettis and Dr. Clemonti, lived. She told Mrs. Pettis that she had been assaulted by two large men wearing light shirts and dark trousers, whom she did not know. Clementi and Pettis hesitated to take her home, fearing her father might suspect them; but upon Mrs. Pettis agreeing to go along they hitched up a team and took her home. She told her father that two men wearing white shirts and dark trousers had assaulted her, and stated that her back was very much bruised and that her knees, arms, and shoulders bore marks where her assailants had grasped her. She also said that her wrist had a cut, traces of which still remained, and, taking off her glove, she showed the scar to the jury.

On cross-examination by Judge Thornton, Miss Bond stated that she had seen John Montgomery but once before the night of the assault, and then she did not know him. She had never seen him since the assault until yesterday in the court room, and then immediately recognized him as the man whose face she saw above her while being drawn up into the loft. She said it was true she had told different people after the defendants were arrested that they were not the men who had assaulted her. Though she was sure that she had told Mrs. Pattis and her father that only two men had assaulted her, she was now satisfied that there were three men.

Several times during the examination Miss Bond became very nervous and was compelled to rest. She was affected to tears while recounting her wrongs, and she had to be assisted out of the court room. Her identification of John C. Montgomery is full and complete. The other defendants she could not swear to, but the prosecution assert that they will be able to connect them by circumstantial evidence with the crime.

SOMETHING NEW IN BILLIARDS.

A Game Devised for the Experts and to Be Tried at a Tournament in the Spring.

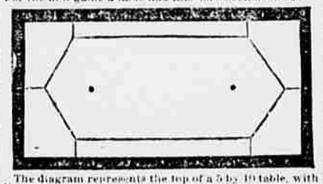
A new game of billiards for the experts has been devised, and the Collender Company proposes to hold a tournament at the new game in the spring. All the first class men will be invited to compete for money prizes. At the regular three ball game any of them is able to make almost interminable runs. The continuous balk line game and the champions' game have been found too easy, and cushion carroms too hard, besides being objectionable for the reason that it does away with many of the most beautiful shots in billiards, notably the direct carrom force, spread, and masse shots. For the new game a table like this has been devised.



The diagram represents the top of a 5 by 10 table, with lines along the side cushions 11 inches from the top surface of the cushion. The lines projecting from the side cushions are stamped on slight ridges 8 inches from the corners of the table. From the points where these lines meet the side lines the oblique lines are drawn to the extremities of eight lines projecting 11 inches from the top surface of the end cushions at the centre sight thereof. The player is not allowed to make more than three strokes while the balls are at rest in the corner spaces without driving at least one of the object balls outside of that space on the third stroke. In the spaces along the side cushion the player must drive an object ball out on the second cushion stroke. In the larger centre space carroms may be made at will. The game permits nursing, but a difficult kind of nursing, so that the player cannot make extraordinarily high runs. At the same time he can make runs long enough, and not too long, to be interesting. The game has been tried by some of the leading experts, and they are pleased with it.

MERCANTILE NOVELTIES.

J. & C. Johnston.

The holiday goods offered by the Johnstons this season are found all over their large and attractive house. From elegant silk dresses to dress goods of all kinds, cut in lengths, for holiday presents, the sale is rapid, and increases daily as Christmas draws near.

The fur department of this house affords a fine collection of furs in sets and single pieces, and garments from which to make selections for Christmas or New Year's gifts.

Nowhere in the city can a present for a gentleman, in the shape of gloves, handkerchiefs, umbrellas or neckwear, be selected better than here. Very lovely, too, are the fancy handkerchiefs for ladies and the lace goods, of which this house makes specialties. The millinery department and the department of ladies' fine underwear are also made especially attractive to holiday shoppers while in the shawl and cloak departments the large assortment and the elegance of the garments, in the third story, are found a fine selection of these handsome and inexpensive Oriental rugs and carpets for which this house is noted and which are now chosen by fastidious persons as the most suitable of all rich presents for the holiday season.

Parisian Flower Company.

The readers of THE SUN need not be reminded that this is the moment for securing a collection of those beautiful house decorations in the form of hydrangeas, baskets of cornelias, and other flower receptacles filled with such artificial plants and flowers as are seen in the windows and rooms of the Parisian Flower Company in West Fourteenth street. Far exceeding all other decorations for rooms at this season are the lovely and wondrous imitations of tropical leaf plants and other floral ornaments brought out by this enterprising company especially for the holiday season of the year.

In addition to these exquisite objects of art and luxury the attention of ladies is attracted to the bridal garlands and wreaths for use this winter. The bridal season was never so thoughtfully and beautifully prepared for, as any one can see by a visit of observation to the Parisian Flower Company's rooms.

The millinery goods, the opera, reception and theatre hats and bonnets, of which this house makes a specialty, are in the best styles of Paris and London. The variety is as great as the most exacting customer could demand. The lady must be hard to please who cannot find what she wants in the form of a hat or bonnet there.

Rogers, Peet & Co.

"One of the last places the Corean visitors went to before going to Europe," said Mr. Chambers of Rogers, Peet & Co., "was our great establishment at Broadway and Houston street. One of the Coreans purchased a complete outfit, even to hat and shoes. I mention this to show that any man or boy can buy any thing he wants to wear at our establishment, from a one cent collar button to a $60 satin lined overcoat. In this busy age it saves time to buy at one store all you want to wear. Another thing: our goods are cheap because we make our own garments and sell them at retail at the same profit as though the garment was sold at wholesale. In fact we look upon the public as our best wholesale customer. Our methods are well known, and that they are acceptable is shown by the fact that our business has increased since last year. For the holiday trade a full line of Chinese jackets, dressing gowns, and other garments suitable for presents have been prepared."

Max Stadler & Co.

Max Stadler & Co. have begun a clearing sale in their stores at Broadway and Prince street, Eighth avenue and Fortieth street, and in Newark avenue, Jersey City, preparatory to taking in a new stock of ready made clothing. The firm manufactures its own clothing and sells its own goods. An immense stock is on hand, and it is to be sold, the proprietors say, regardless of cost. Satin lined overcoats are sold for $19, and suits for $10, which have been selling at from $15 to $18. Every clothing article made by this firm is warranted to stand the test of playground frolics. Every garment sold is guaranteed to satisfy the purchaser or the money paid will be refunded.

London and Liverpool Clothing Company.

The London and Liverpool Clothing Company, at Broadway and Grand street, resumes to-day its assignee's sale of ready-made clothing. More than $200,000 worth of clothing remains on the tables, and only a short time is left in which to dispose of it. A glance at the advertisement of the London and Liverpool Clothing Company in to-day's SUN will show the reader that, although the bottom has dropped out of the retail ready-made clothing market, the prices at Broadway and Grand street send the bottom prices still lower. The goods are marked without regard to cost. Attention is called to winter overcoats and suits for men and boys.

The Bronner Clothing Company.

The large establishment of the Bronner Clothing Company, northeast corner of Broadway and Houston street, presented a busy appearance yesterday consequent upon the extraordinary inducements offered in the shape of 25 to 50 per cent. reductions from former prices and 10 per cent. discount on all purchases amounting to $5 and upward. The firm intends extensive alterations in their store after Jan. 1, and their determination to close out the rest of it without regard to cost.

CALLS FOR CITY MONEY.

The Grand Jury Asks for that $20,000, and the Street Cleaners Want $15,000.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment received yesterday a communication from District Attorney Olney enclosing a request from the Oyer and Terminer Grand Jury for $20,000, for the employment of expert accountants to assist them in the investigation of the city departments, and the following resolution passed by the Grand Jury:

Resolved, That the Grand Jury acknowledge the courteous suggestion of Mayor Edson to place at its disposal for the purpose of their investigation into the accounts of the several departments the force of the Commissioners of Accounts, but that while it may be found convenient in connection with some portions of their investigation to utilize some of the clerical force of these Commissioners, it is the conclusion of the jury that such thorough and comprehensive examination as the business demands and as would secure the confidence of the public can be obtained only through the use of experts who have never had any official connection with the administration of the city.

In his letter District Attorney Olney approved the Grand Jury's application. The papers were sent over and then a communication from the Street Cleaning Department was read asking for a transfer of $15,000 from an unexpended balance of the appropriation for 1881. Comptroller Grant presented a resolution directing the transfer to be made, and Mayor Edson moved that $8,000 instead of $15,000 be transferred. The amendment was carried and then a vote by ayes and noes was taken on the motion as amended. President Asten said, when his name was called, that the condition of the streets had been greatly improved, but he should vote against the transfer because of his opposition to transferring balances of appropriations for past years. Thereupon Mayor Edson said: "The President of the Department of Taxes and Assessments voted for precisely the same thing last year."

President Asten arose and said, deliberately: "The President of the Department of Taxes and Assessments sees things in a different light now," and then, looking direct at the Mayor, he continued: "He sees them differently close by him." The President of the Department of Taxes and Assessments will always vote as he thinks right and proper. And, in his opinion, the reminder of his past votes is not pertinent at this time."

The Mayor looked at President Asten for a moment, and then said: "The resolution, as amended, is adopted."

The Board then began the consideration of the estimates for 1884. Commissioner Wales urged that $75,000 be given to the Park Department to enable it to complete the work on the Riverside Park. Several property owners spoke in favor of such an appropriation.

Gen. Wilson Recognizes a Burglar.

Gen. James G. Wilson and his wife of 15 East Seventy fourth street, accompanied by Detective Rogers, visited Raymond street jail, in Brooklyn, yesterday, for the purpose of having a look at Lake and Clay, the supposed "second story" thieves who were arrested last week. A robbery was committed at the residence of Gen. Wilson last Tuesday night. A burglar entered the second story window when the family were at dinner. Gen. Wilson's daughter found him ransacking the drawers in a bedroom. He hastily put some jewelry which he had secreted into his pockets, and drawing a revolver, pointed it at her. She backed out of the room and ran down stairs and alarmed the household. She took the alarm from her little brother Gen. Wilson and his wife had a good view of the burglar, and were positive they could identify him if they should ever see him again. At the Brooklyn police station they were placed in a row with a dozen other prisoners, and Gen. Wilson and his wife instantly identified Lake as the man who had robbed them. Clay has been identified as Reddy Stewart, a Philadelphia thief.
