O'DONNELL DIES BRAVELY.

PERFECTLY CALM AND SELF-POSSESSED ON THE SCAFFOLD.

Expressing Sorrow for his Outburst of Passion on the Day of his Sentence—Binns Does his Work Quickly and Well.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Patrick O'Donnell was hanged in Newgate prison at 8 o'clock this morning for the killing of James Carey, the informer. Despite boisterous and squally weather, a considerable crowd had assembled at the prison by 7 o'clock, hundreds of workmen passing by the jail waiting to gaze at the black flag. The crowd increased rapidly, and before 8 o'clock it numbered 2,000 persons at least. The streets were closely packed, but the throng observed a quiet and orderly demeanor. The Irish element was not conspicuous in the gathering. As the moment for the hanging approached the crowd swayed up against the prison wall, and the roadway, which before had been kept clear, was blocked. The police, however, moved rapidly through the multitude and easily cleared the way. The clouds began to break as the hour of 8 approached, and when the black flag was run up it was distinctly displayed against the rising sun. There was no demonstration, although suppressed excitement marked many faces. The crowd immediately dispersed after the hoisting of the black flag.

O'Donnell's brother remained to the last, bitterly weeping, the centre of a sympathizing group. He occupied a doorway opposite the prison, in view of the flagstaff. The crowd pressed so closely upon him that the police had to interfere for his protection. When the black flag was hoisted he removed his hat and remained for some moments apparently praying, his features working painfully. He stayed on the same spot for some time after the hanging. To people who lingered around him he said in a hoarse voice: "My poor brother! He has died as bravely as man ever died." This was received with cries of "Yes." He then departed, and the crowd dispersed.

O'Donnell retired to rest at an early hour last evening. This morning he rose promptly and took a good breakfast soon after 5 o'clock. At 6 o'clock Father Fleming arrived. He received the prisoner's last communication and administered to him the holy sacrament. At 7½ O'Donnell was told to make ready for the scaffold. He was perfectly resigned. He expressed great sorrow for his outburst of temper in the dock at the conclusion of his trial. He said he had felt the greatest animosity for the witnesses who appeared against him, but that had now disappeared. A few minutes before 8 he was escorted by warders from his cell to the large room of the prison, where hangman Binns, the Sheriffs and under sheriffs, the governor of the jail, and the prison chaplain were stationed. The operation of pinioning the prisoner's limbs was quickly performed by Binns and was submitted to with a smile and without a murmur. The procession then moved to the courtyard, where the scaffold was erected. O'Donnell walked with great firmness and declined any assistance from the warders in ascending the steps of the scaffold. Father Fleming, by his side, repeated the service of the Church for the dying and held the crucifix before O'Donnell's gaze. The prisoner took his place on the drop under the rope, the slack of which was held up over his head by a piece of thread. He was perfectly calm and self-possessed and looked around with seeming unconcern. Binns quickly fitted the noose around O'Donnell's neck. Carefully placing the knot under the left ear, he at once stepped back and pulled the fatal lever, and O'Donnell fell eight feet. The rope hardly quivered. According to the surgeon death was instantaneous, there being hardly any muscular movement. As the black flag was hoisted those within the prison could hear a hushed murmur from the multitude outside the walls. The body hung for one hour. It was then cut down and the usual legal inquest held. The face bore a calm expression. The head was quite loose from the trunk of the body. The rope made a deep indentation.

Binns, the hangman, was good-humoredly mobbed by the crowd when he left Newgate prison after the hanging. He afterward drove away to escape observation.

The friends of O'Donnell continued their efforts to obtain a meeting of the jurymen who convicted him until late Saturday night, when eight of them had been found. It was impossible to trace the other four, and the friends of the condemned man were compelled to abandon the search. Five of the jurymen were anxious to have a meeting of the jury.

HOW THE SCALPERS LOOK AT IT.

A Declaration that the Pool Lines are Trying to Meet the Brokers' Rates.

"This is an attempt to force certain Western lines into the pool," said Ticket Broker Frank at the Astor House yesterday in speaking of the cut in rates. "The pool lines are trying to meet our rates. We make the rates and they try to meet them by sending spotters to the brokers' offices to see how prices run. Our cut to Kansas City, Omaha, and St. Paul was $4.50 below the regular tariff rates. The pool lines met that. This morning we went $2 better. If they meet that we will do still better. We are well backed, and can stand this sort of thing first and last. Saturday's sales were the sales of the week before. To-day's sales will double last Monday's."

At Webb's office it was said: "After the meeting in Mr. Fink's office last week a representative of a Western road was here with whom we were personally acquainted. He said: 'We've been trying to see how light we can bind ourselves, and have succeeded very well. Now we will all go home and sit up nights to devise ways of evading the bonds.' This cut followed."

In Lansing's office was a big placard offering $100 for the conviction of any one lying a ticket at a cut rate for the purpose of getting it redeemed at the company's office at full rate. It was said that just now the passenger traffic was light, because people were waiting until the holidays before leaving town.

"No one loses anything in this cutting against his will," said an experienced scalper. "Our cut-rate ticket pays the pool line over which it runs just as much as the full-rate ticket, but sometimes in the monthly settlement a voluntary concession is made to the Western connections that cut the rate. Brokers cannot be crushed out by Mr. Fink's lines simply because they supply a want which is always felt by both the public and some of the railroads."

Seized Finery Under the Hammer.

Trimmings, laces, gloves, handkerchiefs, stockings, and hundreds of other bits of costume were heaped in glass cases and strewn on long pine tables on the top floor of John H. Draper's Front street auction house yesterday. They formed the contents of two big trunks which had been seized on the steamship Republic and offered for sale by order of United States Marshal Joel S Ehrhardt. There were thirty-six women among the bidders, and they generally got what they bid for. Lot 3 was an embroidered silk cushion. The bidding for it was surprisingly spirited. It was finally knocked down to a woman for $36. It was hinted that there was something inside the cushion to send it up to that price. It was ripped open in the auctioneer's office, and two reports were current afterward as to what was found inside.

There were 16 pairs of gloves and a piece of lace snugly stowed away beneath the silk, said one employee.

"It contained only a quantity of white feathers," said Auctioneer Draper.

The two trunks and all their contents brought $2,700. That was just what the customs officers had appraised them at.

He Followed Part of his Instructions.

Policeman Francis McMullen of the Twenty-second street squad, when about to go out on patrol at 6 o'clock on Sunday night, was told to visit the liquor stores on his beat and arrest the keepers of those which were not closed. Although he made no arrests while on duty, he seemingly complied with the first part of his instructions, for when Roundsman Reed met him later in the evening, he was so intoxicated that the roundsman insisted on his returning to the station. There he was examined by Capt. Chinchy and the police surgeon, and declared drunk. At 2 o'clock yesterday morning, when he had partially recovered, he visited the Central Office and demanded an impartial examination as to his condition, declaring that he had drunk nothing since Evacuation Day.

Prevented from Going to Europe.

A well-dressed, black-bearded man, carrying a valise and an umbrella, called for a letter for W. R. Douglas at the Post Office yesterday afternoon. Detective Watts of Boston and Detective Thomas Adams of this city arrested him just as he received the letter. At Jefferson Market he gave his name as John O. Lisle. Detective Watts told Justice Smith that Lisle was wanted in Boston for embezzling $2,000 from B. F. Sturtevant, a manufacturer of steam blowers, for whom he was assistant bookkeeper and paymaster, by falsifying pay rolls. Lisle said he was willing to return to Boston without a requisition. He was making preparations to go to Europe when arrested. He is about 30 years of age, has a wife and three children, and was a lay preacher in England, where he was born.

Frightening Julia Pidding.

Julia Pidding the 16-year-old daughter of John Pidding of Hudson avenue, near York street, Brooklyn, applied on saturday at the Charities Department for the arrest of John Wilton, who, she said, had assaulted her at her home while making a visit there, in the absence of other members of the family. Wilton, she said, told her he used to live in Connecticut, and that if she made any trouble he would serve her as he did Jennie Cramer. He made her believe, she says, that he got $1,000 from the Malley boys for helping them in disposing of the body of their alleged victim, and said that he assisted in choking her. No warrant has been issued for Wilton's arrest.

His Boast Heard by his Employer.

The boast of James Sheridan, who had worked in H. M. Johnson's tea store, at 95 Pine street, for nine teen years, at $10 a week, that he was worth $15,000, came to his employer's ears on Oct. 29. He told Inspector Byrnes, and detectives Williamson and Field bought tea and coffee at Mr Johnson's store on several occasions, receiving marked bills from shaving retailed for all their purchases. When Mr Johnson compared the bills with the books he found that the detectives' purchases were placed at a smaller figure in the books than they were on the bills. Sheridan was arrested yesterday. He lives at 1,142 Douglass street, Brooklyn.

Its Own Only Beneficiary.

The Charity Organization Society cautions the public against the "Manhattan Benevolent Association," so called purporting to hail from 729 Sixth avenue, where the promoters of the enterprise are unknown. It cannot be found that the association has any real existence. Two men have generally canvassed together for it, and carry a subscription book with several donors' names, real or pretended, entered thereon in amounts of $10 and under.

SEQUELS OF A DRESDEN MARRIAGE.

An English Clergyman and American Consul Defending Mrs. De Meli's Good Name.

The suit of Florence M. De Meli, a niece of the late Simeon Draper, who was Collector of the port of New York, for a limited divorce from her husband, Henry A. De Meli, a nephew of the late Luther Bradish, was brought to trial yesterday before Judge Rumsey in Supreme Court, Special Term. The parties were married in Dresden, Germany, in 1868, and they lived there most of the time until October, 1881, when Mrs. De Meli left her husband and came to this city. Both had resided in this city until about a year before their marriage.

Mrs. De Meli alleges that her husband had treated her cruelly in various ways, had forbidden her to visit her relatives or receive visits from them, was in the habit of drinking to excess, flogged and kicked his infant son until she felt he would kill the child, and, finally, accused her of being insane, and threatened to confine her in a lunatic asylum. She thereupon fled to this country. Mr. De Meli brought a proceeding against her in Dresden for desertion, and, while contesting her suit here upon the ground that the courts of this State had no jurisdiction, subsequently brought an action there for divorce upon the charge that his wife had had improper relations with an Austrian officer named Baron Heino von Geyso, at Eger, Bohemia, in July, 1881, while she was under medical treatment at a watering place called Franzensbad, a few miles away.

The case was first brought to trial in June last before Judge Donohue. It was then insisted upon the part of the defendant that the question of jurisdiction should first be tried. Judge Donohue decided in favor of Mrs. De Meli that the parties were residents of this city. Mr. De Meli had meantime obtained a decree in his favor in his divorce suit in Dresden upon the evidence of servants at the hotel at Eger that they recognized photographs of Mrs. De Meli and Baron von Geyso as those of a couple who had occupied adjoining rooms.

Mr. John E. Parsons, in opening the trial of the case on the merits yesterday, said it would be shown by evidence that no one could gainsay that the accusation was unfounded. He first read the deposition of the Rev. John P. Peters, taken at Dresden.

Mr. Peters was pastor of the English Episcopal Church at Dresden. He testified to the high reputation of Mrs. De Meli before the circulation of the reports of her intimacy with Baron von Geyso, and that after the circulation of these reports her reputation remained unchanged. All disbelieved the charge and believed that there was absolutely no ground for it. The Rev. Mr. Peters had heard that Mr. De Meli was cruel to his wife and son, and the boy was cringing in his manner toward his father. There was a general carelessness and impoliteness on the part of Mr. De Meli toward his wife, and his conduct was something like petty tyranny. He was a great smoker and his house seemed to be saturated with stale tobacco smoke at the time he represented Mrs. De Meli as being in very delicate health.

Joseph T. Mason, United States Consul at Dresden, whose deposition was read, testified that reports were spread throughout Dresden, instigated by Mr. De Meli, affecting the conduct of his wife with Baron von Geyso, but that no one stood higher than Mrs. De Meli in Dresden in every relation of life.

Mr. Parsons introduced in evidence two letters, one written by Mr. De Meli and the other signed by him, dated March 29, 1882. In one Mr. De Meli wrote to Baron von Geyso that he never had suspected him of wrongful conduct toward De Meli, and that he had always considered him his friend. In the other he said:

Upon special request I hereby certify to Baron von Geyso, explicitly, that I have never in any way been insulted by him, and particularly that he never gave me cause to suspect him of having improper relations with my wife.

The trial will be resumed this morning.

SHALL THE WIRES GO UNDER GROUND?

In Theory they Can't Hurt Anybody, though they Keep on Doing it in Practice.

The Board of Aldermen's Finance Committee heard arguments yesterday on the proposition to compel the electric light companies to lay their wires underground. Prof. Henry Morton of Stevens Institute, Hoboken, said that no danger could arise from the wires as they were now placed. The reports of the Fire Department showed that the damage by fire caused by the electric wires was only $85, and that $75 of that was caused by wires which were under ground. In his opinion more personal injuries were likely to be caused by wires under ground than by those which were on poles. He believed that no method of laying wires in a trough or box would remedy the evils complained of. The only feasible plan was to put the wires in subways large enough to admit a man in case a wire should break.

Alderman Fitzpatrick said that firemen often broke electric wires in placing a ladder against a building. "If those wires should fall on the ladder," he asked, "might firemen not be injured while passing by them?" Prof. Morton answered in the negative, and added that the men in charge of the machine which furnished the power would cut off the circuit as soon as the wires were broken.

Vice-President Rowley of the Brush Electric Light Company favored subways. He believed that the agitation for the underground system was started by companies who wished to boost their stock to the detriment of the Brush Company. The wires of the Edison system which were under ground had been dug up and repaired. W. R. Mctraith of the Brush Company and L. L. Curtis of the United States Company said that it was impossible to say how long it would take to put their wires under ground, no system had been invented by which that work could successfully be done. A few circuits might be put under ground in two years, but any company that was compelled to put its wires under ground in six months would be obliged to shut off its lights.

Shot by a Burglar.

DENVER, Dec. 17.—At Durango, Col., early this morning, several burglars, headed by a negro known as "Big Dick," picked the lock of the door of the Bank of Durango. The negro entered the building, while the others remained outside. Three citizens who were watching the bank, having been notified of the intended robbery, approached the building. As they did so the negro threw the door the negro drew a revolver and fired, killing Bruce Hunt, a furniture dealer, and son of ex-Gov. Hunt. The robbers then escaped, although shot at several times. The town is wild with excitement, and the citizens are ready to shoot any of the robbers should they be found.

Twenty Lives Lost.

DULUTH, Dec. 17.—A tug which arrived from the north shore brings positive intelligence of the loss of the schooner Mary Ann Hulbert. She went down in the severe gale on Wednesday night last with twenty men on board, all of whom were drowned. Most of them were railroad laborers. The schooner was being towed by the tug Kincardine, and during the storm sprung a leak and began to fill. Having a green crew who did not know how to manage her she began drifting with the wind and turned the tug from its course. The tug, to save itself, cut the tow line and sent the schooner adrift, when she almost immediately went down.

The Tax on Bonded Whiskey.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—The Representatives interested in securing an extension of the bonded whiskey period decided to-day not to ask Secretary Folger to stop the collection of taxes pending legislation, there being doubt as to whether he had the right to take such action. It is now intended to introduce a bill asking merely for the extension of the bonded period for two years. The friends of the proposed bill will urge its consideration as soon as possible.

Planning for Greely's Relief.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—The President has appointed a Board of officers of the army and navy to consider the question of sending an expedition to the relief of Lieut. Greely and his party, and to recommend to the Secretaries of War and the Navy jointly the steps the Board may deem advisable to be taken for the equipment and transportation of the relief expedition and for the organization of its personnel.

De Long's Remains on the Way Home.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—Lieut. Harber telegraphs from Irkutsk that he arrived there from Yakutsk in nineteen days. Military honors were paid to the bodies of De Long and his companions on departure from Yakutsk. The bodies were received at Irkutsk by the city authorities and the Geographical Society of East Siberia. They are now lying in a catafalque in the public square. Lieut. Harber will leave Irkutsk on Friday.

Spotted Tail's Murderer.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—The Sioux Indian Crow Dog, who killed Spotted Tail, was found guilty and sentenced to death by the United States Court in Dakota. The Supreme Court has decided that, under the statutes, the Indians had a right to try and punish the criminal according to their own laws, and that the District Court had no jurisdiction, and Crow Dog's imprisonment is, therefore, illegal.

Sentenced for Polygamy.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Dec. 17.—Thomas Gibbs was sentenced to-day to five years' in the State prison for polygamy. He married Alice Moree in Camden in 1875, and deserted her for Annie Johnson of Georgetown, Del., whom he married in 1876. He left the latter one year later, and married Jennie E. Bertsis of Washington, south River, on April 15, 1882. He is supposed to have been a resident of Philadelphia.

Hudson River Navigation Closed.

ALBANY, Dec. 17.—The Hudson River is frozen over, and the ice is from two inches to eight inches in thickness, the greatest depth being between Kinderhook and Coxsackie. The tug Elias M. Ross arrived from New York last night, she was the last boat through. Navigation in the upper Hudson is entirely suspended. The ice men have stacked out feeds for harvest.
