FATHER McCARTHY'S STORY.

Miss Cronin's Testimony as to the Alleged Assault Denied Point by Point.

The suit for $10,000 of Bridget E. Cronin against the Rev. Florence McCarthy, pastor of St. Cecilia's Church, Greenpoint, for assault, was continued in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday. The court was packed with an interested audience. Father McCarthy is a tall, broad-shouldered man, with glossy black hair, high forehead, a long face with reddish hue, and dark, restless eyes. He testified that he had dismissed Miss Cronin as organist of the church on April 22. She had visited him once or twice a week during January and up to the time of her discharge, and had never made any complaint about his conduct toward her. She also attended confession once a week during the time stated.

On cross-examination Father McCarthy said Miss Cronin was his penitent, and that she generally confessed to him on Saturday evenings; he did not remember that she was at his house on Jan. 12.

The following questions were excluded by the Court.

Do you ever testify under any reservation, moral or mental?

Are you now testifying under any reservation?

Have you studied theology?

Did you ever read any treatise on the casuistry of mental reservation?

He said Miss Cronin did not come on a certain Saturday evening and deliver up the keys of the organ and vestry to him.

Q—Did she not come and say, "Father McCarthy, here are the keys?" A.—The same in substance.

Q—Did you not say, "Why is this? You should have given me notice so that I might have had an opportunity to employ another organist?" A.—No; I deny this entirely.

Q—Who was with Miss Cronin at the time? A.—Nobody. I swear to that.

Q—Did you send for another organist? A.—I did, the same night.

Q—Were you under the influence of liquor on the 12th January? A.—No.

Q—Were you the day before? A.—No.

Q—Were you the day before that? A.—No.

Q—Had you sworn off? (Question ruled out.)

Q—Had you not for a couple of months up till that time been almost constantly drunk? A.—Not at all.

Q—How many times within a year and a half have you been brought into court with either a criminal or civil action against you? (Question was ruled out.)

Q—How many times have ladies or girls complained to your Bishop of charges of this kind against you?

This question also was ruled out. He denied that Miss Cronin scratched his face, or that there were any marks on his face after the time of the alleged assault.

Agnes McDougall, aged 15, said that she had seen Miss Cronin go into the box to confession to Father McCarthy regularly every Saturday evening for some time after Jan. 12. There were no scratches on his face about that time. Her mother washed Father McCarthy's clothes, and she used to go to the church for them.

Mrs. Bridget McDougall, the mother of the last witness, said that she had seen Miss Cronin enter the confessional box one Saturday evening when Father McCarthy was there. It was after Jan. 12.

Mrs. Ellen O'Brien, sister of Father McCarthy, said she saw her brother frequently in January, February, and March, last year, and had never seen a scratch on his face. Subsequent to Jan. 12 Miss Cronin called at her house and inquired for Father McCarthy. This visit was in February. On that occasion Miss Cronin played the piano, and she was lively, sociable, and cheerful. A person in the kitchen of her brother's house would not be likely to overhear even an animated conversation going on in the parlor up stairs.

Sarah Donnelly said she had been a domestic in Father McCarthy's house in January and a part of February, 1882. Bridget Cronin frequently came there during that time. She never agreed to have her go up and see Father McCarthy, and would say that he was either sick or away. On one day in January she came and rapped at the basement door. She asked if Father McCarthy was in. The witness said she would go up and see. She returned and told Miss Cronin he was not in, although he was lying sick at the time. She had a little can with her, and said it contained jelly, and was a present for Father McCarthy. Miss Cronin went away, but returned again with the jelly in an hour. The witness was surprised to find her up stairs standing at Father McCarthy's door, with one hand on the knob of the door. The door was partly open.

On cross-examination the witness said Father McCarthy was sick the most of the time during January.

The question "During the time he was sick do you know how many quart bottles of whiskey he drank?" was excluded.

Carrie Mahoney, on rebuttal, said she was with Miss Cronin on Saturday night, April 28, when she gave up the keys of the organ and vestry to Father McCarthy. Miss Cronin said: "Father, here are the keys. I'm not going to play any longer." Father McCarthy said: "Why didn't you tell me about this before?" After Jan. 12 Miss Cronin went to St. Mary's Church to confession on Saturday evenings, and the witness went with her. On Feb. 7 Miss Cronin informed her of the assault by Father McCarthy.

Miss Cronin, being recalled, positively denied that she ever went to confession to Father McCarthy after Jan. 12. Her visit to Father McCarthy's sister occurred in October. She admitted having brought a can of jelly to Father McCarthy, but this was in December. To a juror she said she was educated at a Catholic academy, and had been brought up as a Catholic from her youth. The case was then given to the jury.

ESCAPED FROM BLOOMINGDALE.

Lieut. Augur Eludes his Attendant and is Found Dead in the Morning.

Men with twinkling lanterns scurried hither and thither through the fog that enveloped Bloomingdale Asylum before daybreak yesterday searching for an escaped patient. He lodged in a room on the first floor of the building, and was visited by the nurse when the latter made his regular rounds at 3 A. M. Shortly afterward it was discovered that some of the iron guard rails that enclosed the outer window of his room were ripped from their lower fastenings, and that he had fled. The search was kept up for three hours, but it was not until 7 A. M. that John McLoughlin, a lamp lighter, suddenly stumbled upon the missing man, lying dead, on the Boulevard roadway near the curbstone at 107th street, ten blocks below the asylum.

He was clad in an undershirt, drawers, and stockings, and was stone cold. The hospital authorities hurried to the spot, and recognized the corpse as that of Lieut. John J. P. Augur of the United States Navy. The body was removed at once to the asylum, the Coroner was notified, and telegrams were sent to Gen. C. C. Augur, father of the dead man, who is in command at Fort Leavenworth, and to Capt. Augur, his brother, at West Point. Dr. Nichols, who was in charge of the asylum, said:

"Lieut. Augur was recently admitted to Bloomingdale, suffering from nervous prostration, accompanied by paroxysms of excitement, arising largely, if not wholly, from loss of sleep and severe professional duty while on a voyage to the Arctic seas last season. He had been passing through a period of excitement, and had not slept at all for forty-eight hours. At about 3 o'clock he succeeded in making his escape by bursting the window guard and jumping to the ground a few moments after his attendant had been in his room.

"It is the opinion of the physicians that the cause of Lieut. Augur's death is somewhat obscure. It may be said to have been caused by the exhaustive effects of his disease, aggravated by his recent excitement and insomnia and the dampness and cold of the morning."

Lieut. Augur was born in New York, and was 33 years old. He was admitted to the Annapolis Naval Academy in 1866, and graduated in June, 1870. He rose to a Lieutenancy, and in 1882 was commander of the Alliance. He accompanied the recent Greely relief expedition. His brain became affected by prolonged anxiety and nervous strain during the voyage, and on the return of the expedition his condition was such as to render his removal to Bloomingdale imperative.

Buried with Chinese Ceremonies.

Capt. Allaire yesterday arrested Wah Lee of 36 Ludlow street who, it was said, quarrelled with Loo Ling a few weeks before the latter was killed in his laundry at 17 Clinton street. Lee denied yesterday that he had ever quarrelled with Ling, but Coroner Martin sent him to the House of Detention, and Loo Fung, the dead man's cousin, was sent there also. Joseph Harris of 20 Clinton street told the Coroner that he was in Ling's laundry on Sunday and saw Ling talking with two of his countrymen. Harris recognized Wah Lee as one of the men, though the latter denied that he had seen Ling on Sunday.

Loo Ling's body was buried in Evergreens Cemetery yesterday. The body was dressed in the dead man's best clothes, including his shoes and fez. Prayer slips were scattered over the body, and the eleven Chinamen, who followed the hearse as mourners, scattered slips of paper from the carriage windows when they reached the ferry. They relate that the devil in pursuit of the body stops to gather these slips and count the holes which are punched in each of them. By the time the devil has picked them up the body is under ground and out of his reach. Food sufficient for three meals was left on the grave.

Heavy Losers by Running Waters.

Somebody left the water running in a closet on the third floor at 51 Greene street on Monday night. The occupants of the lower floors of the building, Max Blau, dealer in trimmings; Stanton Brothers, silk handkerchiefs, and J. J. Wenig, dry goods, sustained an aggregate loss of $15,000 in consequence.

The Menhaden Fisheries.

At the annual meeting of the Menhaden Oil Association yesterday it was reported that the fish ran very thin this year and the business had been unremunerative. The average yield of oil per 1,000 fish was only 1.90 gallons, against 5.57 gallons in 1882.

Removal of a Church.

The New York Presbyterian Church has sold its buildings on West Eleventh street for $52,500, and has bought four lots for $35,000 at 126th street and Seventh avenue. Church buildings are erecting on the new site.

JULIUS HALLGARTEN'S WILL.

Thousands of Dollars Scattered Among Charities and Friends.

Julius Hallgarten's will has been filed for probate. It is dated July 9, 1883. Its executors are the testator's widow, Matilda Hallgarten; Charles Wehrkane, his business partner, and Jacob H. Schiff. Mr. Wehrkane and the Central Trust Comnany are the trustees of the estate. The will gives $750,000 to the trustees, with directions to pay the income from it to the testator's widow during her life, and after her death to his son, Albert Hallgarten, and to give the principal to his son's issue after his death. The will also directs that $750,000 be invested and the income be paid to the testator's son when he becomes 21 years of age, and that the principal be paid to his son in annual installments of $100,000 from the time when he becomes 22 years of age until he is 28, when he will receive the rest of that sum. After his son's death, if he should leave no issue, the two sums of $750,000 are to be divided into twelve equal parts and given to Yale, Harvard, Columbia, and Williams Colleges, Cornell University, the New York Free Circulating Library, the American Museum of Natural History, the Nursery and Child's Hospital, the Mount Sinai Hospital, the German Hospital, the New York Infant Asylum, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

The will also directs that every person who was a clerk for Hallgarten & Co. at the testator's death shall receive a sum equal to 20 per cent. of his salary at that time. The testator also bequeaths $100,000 to his nephew, Walter N. Hallgarten; $10,000 to his cousin, Edward Goldschmidt, $3,000 to Prof. Felix Adler, $5,000 to Theodore Thomas, $15,000 to Albert Nordheimer, $10,000 to Edwin C. Philbrick, $50,000 to Dartmouth College, $50,000 to the University of the city of New York, $3,000 to the Hahnemann Hospital, $1,000 to the New York Society for the Relief of the Ruptured and Crippled, $1,000 to the Nursery and Child's Hospital, $5,000 to the Children's Aid Society, $3,000 to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, $2,000 to the Association for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor, $3,000 to the Sheltering Arms, $5,000 to the Newsboys' Lodging House, $2,000 to the Five Points House of Industry, $2,000 to the Howard Home for Little Children, $2,000 to the Colored Orphan Asylum, $2,000 to the Colored Home for Aged and Indigent, $10,000 to Mt. Sinai Hospital, $5,000 to the Hebrew Benevolent Orphan Asylum Society, $2,000 to the New York Homoeopathic College and Dispensary, $2,000 to the Home for Incurables, $2,000 to the New York Infant Asylum, $2,000 to the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, and $5,000 to the Relief Society of the Society for Ethical Culture. The rest of the estate is left to the testator's son, and if he dies without issue, to the testator's nephew, Walter N. Hallgarten.

HE WAS VERY TIRED,

But He Made a Vigorous Effort to Get Even with Old Man Green.

An aged negro shuffled up to Justice Patterson's desk at Jefferson Market yesterday. Something besides old age contributed to the unsteadiness of his gait. He bowed profoundly, and said:

"Y'onah, I kem to see about dat wagon o' mine."

"What wagon?"

"De wagon dat ole man Green tuck away f'm me."

"Who is old man Green?"

"Ole man Green! Doan't you know him? Why, ebberybody knows ole man Green, de coach painter. Y' see, I tuck de wagon dar for to hab it painted yaller. He constipulated t' paint it fer a sartain 'mount o' money. When I went t' git de wagon I foun' de ole man had painted it red. He said de red paint cost mor'n de yaller, an' I'd hab to pay de diffe'nce, which I 'fused to do."

"I remember the case," said the Justice. "I gave you a summons for Mr. Green the other day. He was here and you were now. I think you are tired, uncle. You had better call again."

"Ise not tired, Y'onah. It's only age a-telling on de ole man."

"How much Jersey lightning have you drunk to-day?"

"I neb'er drinks nothin' stronger'n tea and water, fore de Lawd."

"The tea you had to-day was stronger than usual, I guess. You can go, uncle."

"Ain't I gwine to get de wagon, Y'onah?"

"Not to-day."

"What am I gwine t'do wif de hoss, Y'onah? What's de good of de wagon an' no hoss to haul it! Whar's de justice ob keepin' de wagon from de hoss?"

"Go home, uncle. You are very tired."

"Yes, sah. Ise tired ob de law's delays—de procrastinations ob justice. Ise gwine to see de Mars 'bout dis case."

With this the aged darky shuffled out.

Ex-Consul Farrell on the Customs Frauds.

Capt. R. F. Farrell of 115 Nassau street, formerly United States Consul at Cadiz, who was removed by Secretary Fish to please his son-in-law, Sidney Webster, the counsel for some of the Spanish wine merchants whom Mr. Farrell accused of defrauding the Government by means of fraudient invoices, has written to Secretary Folger with reference to the pending exposures of similar transactions. He tells the Secretary that he was instrumental in exposing similar frauds seventeen years ago, when, on information furnished by him, about $600,000 worth of foreign wine was seized in New York and Boston, and suits were brought to condemn the property. The Government settled the suits for $102,500. Mr. Farrell says that Mr. Fish, instead of rewarding him for his performance of duty, deprived him of his office without a hearing. But for this punishment, Mr. Farrell says, other Consuls would have been encouraged to continue like investigations.

Mr. Farrell says he has evidence to prove that, while exposing these frauds, a wealthy Spanish merchant offered him a heavy bribe. The act of Congress of March, 1883, which says that "the Consular officer must be satisfied of the truth of the shipper's statement and the value set forth in the invoice," gave a Consul all the power he needed to detect swindling, and it was for exercising this power that Mr. Farrell was removed.

The old wine frauds were so scandalous that one of the Spanish merchants, an agent of the leading exporters, committed suicide at Cadiz when they were exposed. Yet Capt. Farrell traced the cause of his removal to the influence of the accused Spanish merchants, exercised through Sidney Webster, the son-in-law of Secretary of State Fish, whose business it was to enforce law rather than to punish the officers of the law.

Mr. Farrell thinks it is this sort of thing that has discouraged other Consuls from looking sut sharply for frauds. If they had done so, it would have secured to the Government millions of dollars of which it has been defrauded.

The Aldermen Still Heedless.

The Board of Aldermen made a second ineffectual attempt yesterday to elect a President. Clerk Twomey called the roll at noon, and each Alderman named his candidate. Six Tammany Aldermen voted for Alderman William P. Kirk, and Alderman Kirk voted for Alderman Hugh J. Grant. Six County Democracy Aldermen voted for Alderman John O'Neil, and Alderman O'Neil named Alderman Henry W. Jaehne. The Republican Aldermen dropped Alderman Frederick Fink and voted for Alderman John Christopher O'Connor Jr. Alderman John Christopher O'Connor, Jr., named Alderman Frederick Fink. Alderman Thomas Shelis, who is an independent Democrat, was absent. Chairman Grant declared that there had been no election, and then, on motion of Alderman Kirk, the Board took a recess until to-day.

There is little probability of an organization of the Board to-day. The County Democracy members insist that they shall name either the President or the Clerk and deputy clerk, and the Tammany Aldermen demand all those offices. Some of the Tammany Aldermen favor a combination with the Republicans, but the Republican Aldermen are unwilling to make a bargain with either of the Democratic factions unless they can have the Presidency of the Board.

A Prima Donna's Coachman.

Martin H. Jensen, a cabman, while driving Miss Clara Louise Kellogg to the Clarendon Hotel on Tuesday evening, knocked down John Keehan, a District messenger boy, at Broadway and Thirteenth street. The boy was skylarking in front of Jensen's horse. Policeman Rome Volk arrested the cabman. Miss Kellogg got a gentleman connected with the hotel to furnish bail at the police station for the cabman's appearance at Jefferson Market yesterday. The boy, although unable to appear, is not dangerously hurt. Jensen was held in $500 bail for examination on Saturday. Miss Kellogg will probably be a witness in the case.

Schurenferberg's Way of Getting Watches.

Emil Schurenferberg was sent yesterday to the penitentiary for six months for stealing a watch from a Williamsburgh jeweler.

"I have four pawn tickets for watches," he said, "which I've stolen in the same way. I pretended that I had left each of them with some jeweler to be repaired, and he, believing me, gave me the watch, I paying the expenses for repairing it."

"Did you make much on that racket?" Clerk Wren inquired.

"This suit of clothes," was the reply, "and a good living for the last six months."

Pronounced Insane by a Jury.

A jury was impanelled yesterday in the General Sessions to decide whether John Scullin, who shot Foreman Owen F. Plunkett in the cigar manufactory at 22 Bowery on Nov. 24, was sane. Scullin was employed in the factory, and had been kindly treated by Plunkett. After he was indicted for murder he showed signs of insanity. City Physician Hardy and Drs. Field and Fitch testified that Scullin is incurably insane. The Jury found in accordance with their testimony, and Judge Cowing committed Scullin to the State Asylum for the Insane at Utica.

No Damages for Mr. Shim.

Henry Shine, a switchman in the employ of the New York Central Railroad, claimed $10,000 damages from the company for injuries sustained by him while uncoupling a car in the Grand Central depot on June 20, 1882. He alleged that one of the company's engineers was careless. At the trial in the United States Circuit Court, before Judge Wallace yesterday, a verdict was rendered for the railroad.

Trying to Get $5 for a $50 Confederate Note.

Treasurer Wyman has received a letter from a resident of Tarboro, N. C., enclosing a $50 Confederate note, and saying that he is informed that the United States is paying ten per cent. for such money for use in the manufacture of bank note paper. He was notified that he had been misinformed.

Five Strawberries for Seventy-five Cents.

Little round blue boxes with white paper linings stood in rows in the show case of a lower Broadway fruit dealer yesterday, with five strawberries in each box. A sign said: "These boxes for 75c." Larger boxes, holding seventeen larger berries, were for sale at $3 each. The berries were all very large and beautiful.

Ten-Dollar Bills at Five Cents.

Venders on lower Broadway offered Confederate States ten-dollar bills for sale yesterday at five cents each, and found many purchasers.
