DR. HAYES SUES DR. WEBSTER.

Damages Wanted for an Arrest Caused by the County Medical Society's President.

The case of Dr. Robert H. Hayes against Dr. David Webster came up for trial yesterday in the Superior Court, before Judge Freedman and a jury. The suit was brought for malicious prosecution and imprisonment.

For the plaintiff, his counsel, Edward W. Searing, said that Dr. Hayes had his diploma from the Royal College of Physicians, Edinburgh, and from Apothecary's Hall, London, and also had a certificate from the Queens County Medical Society, which he obtained in 1869. In July, 1883, when he was practising in this city, he was arrested on the application of Dr. Webster, who was then President of the County Medical Society. Dr. Webster had obtained a warrant from Justice Kilbreth upon the allegation that Dr. Hayes was illegally practising medicine without a license.

When the officer went to Dr. Hayes's house to serve the warrant, Dr. Hayes showed his diplomas and certificate and his name in medical registers and directories. This so impressed the officer that Dr. Hayes was not arrested at that time, but was permitted to go to court alone. In the Police Court Dr. Hayes was placed among other prisoners, although he vehemently protested that he had been lawfully practising medicine in this State for nearly twenty years. He offered to prove his innocence by the production of his diplomas and certificate. Dr. Webster insisted that Dr. Hayes had violated the law by not registering. Justice Kilbreth told Dr. Hayes that he must register in the County Clerk's office in order to comply with the law, and Dr. Webster and his counsel said that unless that was done the prosecution would be pressed. Justice Kilbreth, upon this, held Dr. Hayes, and adjourned the case, in order to give him an opportunity to be registered. Dr. Hayes had not then a knowledge of the fact that he could claim to practise by virtue of his certificate of registry in Queens county in 1869. But, to comply with the directions of Justice Kilbreth, he went to Queens county and got a certificate of his registry, after a good deal of trouble, and was then informed that he could not get registered in this county unless he obtained the endorsements on his diplomas of some medical institution in this State. Then, upon applying to various medical institutions for such endorsement, he was informed that he was already entitled to practise by virtue of his registry in Queens county.

Then the case was taken before Justice Ford, sitting in the place of Justice Kilbreth, to whom Dr. Hayes described his efforts to get registered, and also his belief that he had a right to practise without further registry. Then Dr. Webster's counsel insisted that Justice Ford should convict Dr. Hayes, but Justice Ford refused, and directed the parties to go before Justice Kilbreth, who was busy at Essex Market, and another adjournment took place. There was some misunderstanding as to the date to which the case was adjourned, and Dr. Hayes was not present in the Police Court when the case was next taken up. Finally, after Dr. Hayes had been arrested, imprisoned, published as a quack, kept dancing for weeks at the Police Court, sent out to Queens county on a useless errand, and treated with indignity and insult, he was discharged on July 29, 1883, by Justice Ford, who endorsed on the papers, "There being no sufficient cause to believe the within Hayes guilty of the offence within mentioned, I order him to be discharged."

Mr. Searing claimed that the prosecution of Dr. Hayes was dictated by professional malice, and that he was entitled to $50,000 damages.

The answer of the defendant admits the arrest and discharge, and states that the Medical Society of the County of New York has for its object the purification of the medical profession, and the elevation of the standard of morality, efficiency, and medical ethics in the medical profession generally; that Dr. Hayes appeared voluntarily before Justice Kilbreth; that upon his acquiescence in the demand that he should register as directed by Justice Kilbreth, the complaint was withdrawn, and that there was no malice in the prosecution.

Dr. Hayes told his story to the jury with much animation. Justice Kilbreth was called as a witness for the defence. His version of the case was:

My best recollection at present is that on his arraignment upon this charge it appeared to me that he had neglected to comply with certain provisions of the law. I told him that he was not qualified to practise medicine in the State of New York, and that it was necessary, in order that his diplomas might be of service to him in this State, that he should have them endorsed by some State or county society. I adjourned the hearing of the case to some future day, and remember distinctly stating to him that he was not qualified to practise medicine in this State. My best recollection is that he did produce some diplomas or certificate of his alleged qualification, and I stated to him that those documents were of no avail unless he had something else. The complainants said they had no desire to persecute Dr. Hayes, but only to see that he complied with the law.

The case is still on.

THEY WON'T ELECT A PRESIDENT.

Johnny O'Brien Controls Only One Alderman —Proposing a Recess of One Year.

Mr. John J. O'Brien, the Republican machine leader, has been trying for several days to make a combination between the Tammany and Republican Aldermen. At a caucus held yesterday in the Assessor's office in the City Hall, at which all the Republican Aldermen except Charles B. Waite were present, he renewed his efforts. He told them that the Republicans could not get the Presidency of the Board if they held out for a year. Then he asked each Alderman to vote for William P. Kirk, Tammany's candidate for President.

Six of the seven Aldermen refused to accede to his request. Alderman Kirk, who represents Mr. John J. O'Brien's district, was willing to vote for Alderman Kirk. Those who were opposed to voting for Mr. Kirk were Alderman Miller of John W. Jacobus's district, Alderman Rothman of Police Justice Patterson's district, Alderman O'Connor of Col. Geo. Bliss's district, Alderman Pearson of Hugh Gardner's district, Alderman Wendel of Police Commissioner Mason's district, and Alderman Sayles of Charity Commissioner Hess's district.

The Board met at noon and balloted three times for a President. On each ballot Alderman O'Neil (County Democrat) received 6 votes, Alderman Kirk (Tammany) 7, and Alderman John Chesterfield O'Connor, Jr. (Republican), 7. Aldermen Grant, Jaehne, and Finck each received one vote. The Board then took a recess until to-morrow noon.

One of the Republican Aldermen said after the meeting that if the Board did not organize to-morrow he would move that they adjourn to Jan. 1, 1885.

Half a Million Lost by Fire.

A smell of smoke was detected on Sunday night in the neighborhood of Tompkins and Grand streets, and a number of boatmen and watchmen searched in vain for the cause of it. At 7 o'clock yesterday morning the cause was discovered when the storage warehouses of Lawrence & Co., at 46, 48, and 50 Tompkins street, running through to 26, 27, and 28 East street, were opened. A dense volume of smoke burst forth from a fire which had been evidently long smouldering near the centre of the stores. The smoke was so dense that it was impossible for the firemen to reach the fire, and there was a destructive conflagration in spite of the efforts of the whole force of the department below Fourteenth street.

Lawrence & Co.'s stores are four stories high and 200 feet long. They were completely gutted. Among their contents was a large quantity of bagging, valued at $60,000 belonging to L. Waterbury & Co., bag manufacturers; 278 casks of varnish and other dye stuffs belonging to J. D. & D. S. Riker, valued at $21,570, and other stores belonging to Todd & Co., Francis Moulton, and Nash, Walton & Co. All were fully insured. The buildings belong to the Coe estate. The loss on these is covered by insurance.

The flames extended to 44 Tompkins street, occupied by the Manhattan Tobacco Company in the manufacture of cigarettes. These sustained great loss by fire and water. While attempting to assist in saving this building William Kipp of Fire Insurance Patrol No. 2 fell through a hatchway and was severely injured.

A building belonging to the Champion estate was badly damaged, but is insured. The flames extended to 52 Tompkins street, occupied by A. C. Paling for the storage of malt. Building and contents were damaged by fire and water. The corresponding buildings on East street were also damaged, and it was with great difficulty that the firemen saved the rest of the block.

The total loss will probably foot up $600,000.

A Crazy Italian's Run.

A shaggy-haired Italian with wildly shining eyes ran through Bleecker street yesterday afternoon, flourishing a piece of thick sharpened wire, which he held in his right hand by a hat-like loop. He crossed Broadway, running eastward. Women and children ran before him. He struck at a well-dressed lady on the south side of Bleecker street, between Greene and Mercer. She screamed and ran across the street. He followed her. William E. Parsons of 10 East Eighty-first street and Policeman Devine saw the madman and pursued him. They overtook him before he reached the lady, and, throwing him to the ground, wrenched his weapon away. He allowed himself to be led quietly to the Mercer street station. He was taken thence to Jefferson Market, where Justice Patterson committed him for examination. The prisoner said to the policeman: "If the physicians find that he is not insane, bring him back here again, and I will attend to him."

The policeman said he frequently had seen the Italian who said he was Cesar Vanforoli of 172 Bleecker street acting in a strange manner. In January, 1883, the Italian was arrested for attacking a colored woman in Bleecker street. A sharpened railroad spike and a stone were then found in his pockets. The colored woman failed to make out a case, and he was discharged.

Discussing the Quaker Bridge Dam.

Joseph Benedict of Katonah, Westchester county, told the Aqueduct Commission yesterday that 300,000,000 gallons of water was going to waste every day over the Croton dam into the Hudson River. He thought that the Quaker Bridge dam should be built to collect that water.

Commissioner Spencer said that the Commission had no power to bring any water from any other than the Croton watershed. Then, in reply to William H. Wells, Engineer Church said that the Quaker Bridge dam would cost over $5,000,000.

Commissioner Thompson said that the Quaker Bridge dam was not a pet scheme of the Department of Public Works. The report made by that department had been approved by the best hydraulic engineers in the country.

$25,000 WORTH OF JEWELRY.

A Suit Against the Public Administrator that Recalls a Famous Burglary.

A second trial of the suit of Frank Horton against Algernon S. Sullivan, Public Administrator of the city, began yesterday in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, before Justice Pratt and a jury. The suit grew out of a big robbery at Mr. Horton's jewelry store at 42 Fulton street on the night of Oct. 1, 1876. The store was entered from an adjoining building, the safe broken open, and almost the entire stock, valued at $25,000, was carried off. Mr. Horton's business was broken up. He now keeps a liquor store in Brooklyn. None of the stolen property was recovered. Mr. Horton advertised and offered a reward of $2,500 for the recovery of the jewelry.

John D. Grady, a diamond broker, who had an office in Bleecker street and Broadway, and who died in September, 1880, frequently called on Mr. Horton on relation to the return of the property. He advised an increase of the reward, but Mr. Horton said that, owing to his great loss, he could not increase it. Subsequently, however, he offered $5,000. Grady said to Horton once, the latter testified, "You could not get the jewelry for $50,000. Part of it has been melted and sold, and some has been distributed all over the country." Grady died intestate and the Public Administrator took charge of his effects and sold them. Mr. Horton insists that some of his property was so disposed of. Several months after Grady's death Mr. Horton sued the Public Administrator for the value of his stolen jewelry, on the ground that he had a valid claim against the Grady estate. The case was tried in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, in 1881, and a verdict rendered for the plaintiff for the full amount claimed. The case was appealed and the verdict set aside.

Mr. Horton and his former clerks and bookkeeper testified yesterday to the value of the articles stolen, the former also relating at length the negotiations which he had with Grady. The testimony was mainly a repetition of that given on the former trial. A richly dressed lady, with heavy diamond earrings, said to be a sister of Grady, was an attentive listener. The trial will be continued to-day.

SWORN FOES MEET.

Shipbuilder Roach Falls Foul of Capt. John Codman in the Talk Exchange.

The New York Board of Trade and Transportation considered yesterday afternoon the report of a committee on a communication of the National Board of Trade touching a plan for the revival of the mercantile marine of the United States.

Shipbuilder John Roach introduced a substitute for the report. Then Capt. John Codman pitched into Shipbuilder Roach and waved the free-trade flag until Mr. Van Vleck rose and objected that his remarks were too personal. Shipbuilder Roach, however, squared off for Capt. Codman, and hurled such a mass of Roach's patent protection statistics at him that Capt. Codman sank back murmuring, "Oh, give him all he wants. Give him everything except a bit for the American public."

Shipbuilder Roach said his experience was a sad one, and that he had been a target for unmerited abuse, and would soon retire to his humble cottage to spend the rest of his days.

Capt. Codman recovered sufficiently to get up and charge Shipbuilder Roach with receiving a subsidy now from a foreign Government, despite his claims that he was against subsidies. This Shipbuilder Roach was forced to admit, and stated that he had also $300,000 interest in three steamers in the foreign trade.

There was little or no chance for talking with Shipbuilder Roach in the room, and the rest voted to postpone further discussion for a week.

Met by Doubting Samson.

Policeman Thomas McCormack of the Thirty-seventh street station, popularly known as the Samson of the police force, saw a young man in Seventh avenue, near Thirty-fifth street, on Sunday afternoon, with two door mats under his arm. The policeman made inquiries of the young man, who nonchalantly remarked that he was helping a family to move. The policeman said Sunday was a queer day to move on. The young man said the family were Jews, and, consequently, there was nothing queer about it. The policeman said, "Well, I'll go with you and see that you deliver the mats safely." The young man said the family lived in Harlem, and the pair started Harlemward. After walking about a mile, the young man said he thought the family lived somewhere near the Battery. They then turned their toes southward. Before going a dozen blocks the young man confessed that he had stolen the mats from two houses in West Thirty-first street.

The young man was unable to remember the houses when conducted to Thirty-first street. The policeman rang all the door bells in the street between Fifth and Sixth avenues. He found that three householders had lost mats since Saturday night, but nobody identified the mats that the young man had under his arm. At 24 West Thirty-second street, the policeman found the owner of one of the mats, Mrs. Harriet Guillard. On her complaint, the young man was held for trial.

Laughing Mrs. Willems.

Egide Willems, a restaurant keeper at 144 West Twenty-sixth street, who had a disagreement with his young and vivacious wife Henrietta because of her peculiar and exasperating laugh, was at Jefferson Market yesterday morning for advice. He said that his wife and her lawyer induced him to go to the lawyer's office last week to sign, as he supposed, a retraction of all the impolite words that he had addressed to her. His wife was to continue living with him after he had signed the retraction. He said that instead of the expected retraction, he received at the lawyer's office a summons for his appearance at the Supreme Court in proceedings for separation instituted by his wife. Justice Patterson told Mr. Willems that the best way to get his wife back was to humor her.

In the afternoon Mrs. Willems and her lawyer saw the Justice. She wanted to know if she could get her money and her clothes from her husband. The Justice advised her to go to her husband and ask him for her property. She said she would not go near him, and would not live with him again for any consideration. She wanted him arrested. The Justice refused to give her a warrant. She laughed and went out of the court.

Small but Protected.

George Wilcox, a nervous little man with a long, iron-gray beard, was brought to Jefferson Market yesterday, charged with threatening to shoot Allan C. Warner, a jeweller at 425 Broadway. Policeman Owen Wheeler of the Broadway squad was the complainant against Mr. Wilcox. He said he did not see Mr. Wilcox point the pistol at Mr. Warner. He was called into the store, and saw Mr. Wilcox with a cocked and loaded revolver in his hand. The policeman added that Mr. Warner did not desire to prosecute the case.

Mr. Wilcox said that he was travelling salesman for Mr. Warner. He went into the store to see about the adjustment of some accounts, and had a wrangle with Mr. Warner, who, Mr. Wilcox continued, was a large, strong, and passionate man. Mr. Warner pulled off his coat and was preparing to attack Mr. Wilcox, when the latter drew his revolver and threatened to shoot. Mr. Warner then called in Policeman Wheeler. Mr. Wilcox said he believed his life was in danger, and Policeman Wheeler said Mr. Warner had said he also believed his life Wilcox's life was in danger. Mr. Wilcox was discharged, and his revolver was confiscated.

Hanged Himself with $50 in his Pocket.

A man's body swinging by a cord from an awning in front of Brun's tailor shop, on the northwest corner of Canal and Sullivan streets, was discovered shortly before 1 A. M. yesterday by W. T. Hone of 452 Varick street, who was on the platform of a passing street car. Hone jumped from the car and ran to the awning. Policeman Voorhees of the Prince street police arrived and held up the body while Hone cut the cord. It was a thin cord used to rig the canvas awning, and was attached to the frame work near to the building. From a convenient window sill the man had probably swung himself off, after tying a knot about his neck. The man was still breathing. He was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, and seemed to have been drinking. In his pockets were found $30.04, an open faced gold watch, and a bank book issued from the Troy Savings Bank to James Kay, in which $750 is placed to his credit. He is about 40 years old, has dark hair, and a full dark beard and moustache.

At Work After a Nine Weeks' Strike.

The bell of the carpet weaving factory of E. S. Higgins & Co., at the foot of West Forty-fourth street, was rung yesterday morning for the first time since the 2,000 operatives went out on strike nine weeks ago against a reduction of 10 per cent. in their wages.

The difficulties were arranged by a court of arbitration. The workmen say that by a system of equalization practically the same wages will be paid which were paid before the reduction was ordered. Nearly all the operatives answered the call of the bell and took their places in the factory.

Mr. Higgins said that it would take two weeks to make a just equalization of the rates. In the meantime they would work upon their old wages. Superintendent Campbell offered his resignation and it was accepted.

The Jury Goes to See the Statues.

The jury which is hearing the Di Cesnola case was taken to the Metropolitan Museum of Art yesterday to view two statues, which were too large to be taken to the court. During their visit the museum was closed to the public. Judge Shipman, Mr. Joseph H. Choate, and the other counsel were present. The statue of a priest holding a patera was taken from its case, and the jury had a chance to view the same shoulder which had been inserted as pointed out. The legs of the Hercules were also examined at the point where they had been replaced on the feet. No questions were asked, and the examination was soon ended.

Pleased with the Cable Cars.

The Rapid Transit Commissioners returned yesterday from Chicago, where they went to inspect the cable car system. President Daniel Drake Smith said:

"I was well pleased with the working of the grip cars. We rode over twenty miles of road as smoothly as in a sleigh, and with perfect safety. One stationary engine operates all the trains, drawing them six or seven miles an hour. One grip car only is necessary to propel a train. No shock is felt in starting and stopping."

It will be some time before the Commission will decide whether they will adopt the system or not.

Dying the Same Day.

Capt. Abram W. Richardson, formerly a shipmaster, died of dropsy early on Sunday morning. He was 87 years old. On the night of the same day his wife, Ellen, 78 years old, died of bronchitis. She was told during the day that he had died, but did not fully comprehend the statement. She thought it strange that he did not come and speak to her. Mrs. Richardson was interested in temperance work. They had been married sixty years. The funeral will take place this afternoon.
