THE OLLAGAWALLA TALKS.

Answering Lawyer Whitridge with Sententious Indian Brevity.

Mr. Stevenson Towle, Chief Engineer of the Sewer Bureau in the Department of Public Works, told the Senate Investigating Committee yesterday that he had never received money from contractors.

Then Col. James J. Mooney, Chief of the Ollagawallas, took the stand. He said that he was Superintendent of Streets and Roads in the Public Works Department, and was appointed by Commissioner Fitz John Porter. He was not interested in any contracts with the city, and no contractors' warrants had been endorsed to him.

Lawyer Whitridge asked whether the witness had ever advised anybody to apply for city contracts. Col. Mooney answered that he had, and named John Barry as one of the men. He added that Mr. Barry had furnished earth and sand to the department for 15 cents a cubic yard, and that other contractors had charged from 45 to 59 cents a yard. Mr. Barry had control of the property from which sand and earth were taken, but it had belonged to Mr. Florence, who was Mr. Barry's father-in-law.

"Why did you not first interview Mr. Florence?" Lawyer Whitridge asked.

The Ollagawalla chief twirled his eyeglasses between his fingers and answered, "Because he is in Woodlawn."

Lawyer Whitridge abandoned this part of the case, and asked the Colonel where he kept his material.

"It is piled in heaps on the streets," the Colonel replied, "handy for use."

"What is to prevent persons from taking away material and selling it again to the city?" Lawyer Whitridge asked sharply.

The Colonel again twirled his eyeglasses and answered, "The police."

Lawyer Whitridge smiled, and then, showing the witness two orders for the same kind of material, issued on the same day, asked him to explain the cause thereof.

The Colonel put on his eyeglasses and showed the lawyer from the same orders that the two sets of material were delivered at different places.

Mr. Thomas Keech, who was dismissed from the superintendency of the Repairs and Supply Bureau by Commissioner Thompson, seeing that Lawyer Whitridge was confused by the Colonel's answer, whispered something in his ear. The Ollagawalla chief, noticing it, removed his glasses and said: "Counsellor, your prompter may be an authority on soaps and scrubbing brushes, but when it comes to earth and sand he knows little or nothing."

The committee will meet again on Friday.

When the Assembly committee met yesterday, Chairman Roosevelt read a statement, which he said Register Reilly had handed in as an estimate of the annual receipts, expenses, and net earnings of the Register's office, based on the receipts, expenditures, and net earnings for the month of January just past. The receipts were put down as $10,773.36, and the expenses as $8,140.93, leaving $2,632.43 net gain.

"For a year the net gain is, therefore," said Mr. Roosevelt, "about $31,500."

Lawyer Mitchell—Oh, well, we can't really tell until we get hold of the books.

Mr. Roosevelt—That reminds me. We have a right to get ex-Register Docharty's books, and we must have them. The committee will take steps to get them. Now, why isn't Under Sheriff Stevens here?

The committee waited till Mr. Wm. Burke Cockran came in, out of breath, and said: "Here is a certificate from Dr. H. Griswold that Mr. Stevens is not able to leave his house."

Ex-Auditor Jackson of the Finance Department testified that he had examined the Sheriff's vouchers for the first three-quarters of the year 1883, and found that there were no charges for conveying prisoners from the police courts to Blackwell's Island. He had been Assistant Auditor in Tweed's time, and remembered that Sheriff Brennan charged for conveying prisoners from the police courts to Blackwell's Island, and also for prisoners who, to use a technical expression, Mr. Jackson said, went over the bridge; that is, they went over the bridge leading from one part of the Tombs to another part. Because the city refused to pay the Sheriff for transferring prisoners from police courts, the Sheriff sued to recover. Whitridge the decision was, Sheriff's charges for carrying prisoners from police courts were not afterward allowed by auditors in the Finance Department, and no Sheriff made any such charges, except once in Connor's or Bowe's time, and that claim was disallowed.

Mr. Cockran said that the Brennan suit was settled, the city withdrawing a counter claim which had been entertained by the jury and then admitting judgment. The case was compromised, because the law was not clear.

The testimony taken by the Assembly committee concerning the Sheriff's office will be laid before the Grand Jury to-day.

'SQUIRE WILSON'S GAME SUPPER.

The Complications it Caused in Law, Love, Politics, and Business.

ROLLANDSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 4.—THE SUN of Jan. 29 published an account of the arrest of James Wilson, one of the Justices of the Peace of this township, on a charge of having venison in his possession in violation of the game law. He had won a deer at a raffle. It had been put up by Jordan Mapes and Frank Grover, who asserted that they had killed it in self-defence. They were threatened by John Rollands with arrest for killing deer after the season had closed by law, and compromised with public opinion by raffling it off and dividing with the township the money thus received. Justice Wilson was arrested on his way home with the deer, on a warrant sworn out by John Rollands, who is a candidate against Wilson for Justice of the Peace for a new term.

On Thursday night last 'Squire Wilson invited a number of personal friends to join him in a game supper at Rice's tavern, when the choice morsels of the deer were to be served. The party broke up late in the evening, and Wilson went home. Others of the party went to Rollands's house and serenaded him by pounding on tin pans, hooting, and firing off pistols. Rollands finally appeared at a window with a shotgun. He pointed it at the crowd and told them that if they did not leave at once he would fire into them. They dispersed.

On Friday morning Rollands met Wilson in the street. He charged him with being in the crowd the night before. Wilson denied the charge and declared that he knew nothing about the affair. Rollands called him a liar, and Wilson knocked Rollands down. Rollands had the Justice arrested on a charge of assault and battery. Justice of the Peace Clark held him in $300 bail to answer the charge in court. Rollands then swore out warrants against 'Squire Wilson, William Wilson, his son, Jordan Mapes and his son, Frank Mapes, and several others, on a charge of disturbing the peace. Justice Wilson and young Mapes were discharged, as they proved an alibi, and the others were held in $200 each to answer.

After leaving Justice Clark's office, Mapes, who was a member of the lumber firm of Mapes & Gunn, went to the sawmill belonging to the firm. Samuel Gunn, his partner, is a son-in-law of John Rollands, and has warmly espoused his father-in-law's cause through all the difficulties the political campaign has made. He took Mapes to task for his offensive conduct toward Rollands, and hot words followed. The men finally clinched, and but for the interference of others a bloody fight would have resulted, as both are powerful and passionate men. Gunn soon afterward apologized for words he had used, and made Mapes an offer for his share in the business. The offer was accepted, and in fifteen minutes the firm was dissolved. It had been in existence twenty years, and there had never been one word of difference or dispute between the partners.

Frank Mapes, the son of Jordan Mapes, is an industrious carpenter, and one of the most respected young men in the neighborhood. He is engaged to be married to John Rollands's daughter Mary. On Friday night he called upon her as usual. While they were talking together in the parlor, the girl's father entered.

"Frank," he said, "who are you for in this fight?"

"Under the circumstances," said young Mapes, "I think I ought not to be expected to take sides at all in the matter."

"Yes you are!" exclaimed Rollands. "I expect you to side with me, all the way through, or you can't enter my family. If you're not for me, you must leave this house at once!"

Miss Rollands protested against her father's decision, but to no purpose, and the young man left the house. Efforts are now making by friends of all concerned to have the difficulties amicably arranged.

A Rejected Suitor's Double Crime.

RACINE, Wis., Feb. 4.—Andrew Johnson, a young Dane, who was of dissipated habits, and was enamored of a girl of 15 named Bertha Brassman, yesterday entered the restaurant where the latter was employed. The girl, on seeing him enter the place, said: "I don't want anything more to do with you." Johnson seized her by the shoulders, and, drawing a revolver, fired, the shot striking her in the breast. As she turned he shot her again in the back. He then put the pistol to his heart, fired, and expired instantly. The girl died a few minutes later. On his way to the restaurant, Johnson met August Gulbranson, against whom he had a grudge, and fired once at him, the ball going through Gulbranson's trousers, but not harming him. A letter found on Johnson's person shows that the crime was premeditated.

Death Caused by Too Much Sleep.

BUFFALO, Feb. 4.—Anthony Kamm died yesterday at the poor house of too much sleep. He was a German, 37 years old, and used to work in Bell's soap works. Kamm got the idea two years ago that the Lord had commanded him to sleep until he ordered him to awake. The man either slept or pretended to sleep continually after that. He was taken to the poorhouse a few months ago. Fins could be stuck in his flesh and he seemed to have no feeling. The cause of death was consumption and exhaustion due to abstinence.

LEARNING NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Capt. Kirwan, British Army, in the Hands of Capt. Williams's Philistines.

A man lay on his back in the street in front of the Madison Square Theatre at 3 A. M. yesterday shouting unintelligibly, and another man stood astride him. Policeman Kemp arrived, and the prostrate man was allowed to get up. The man who had been standing over him described himself as Capt. Maitland Kirwan of the British army. The under man, he said, was his servant, Lovering.

"What's the matter?" asked the policeman.

"Nothing, Bobby, nothing," said Capt. Kirwan.

The policeman reports also that Capt. Kirwan contumeliously declined to explain how Lovering had been hurt on the head. Accordingly, Kemp made both men prisoners, in the New York fashion, taking each by the collar and saying, "Come along."

He says they resisted. He rapped for help, got two more policemen, and made a quickstep of it to Capt. Williams's station house. A charge of intoxication and disorderly conduct was made against the prisoners, and they were searched and locked up. Nine dollars was taken from the Captain's pockets.

Capt. Kirwan told Sergeant Tims that he had only recently come to this country and that he intended to get out of it on Tuesday next.

In the morning Policeman Kemp invited the prisoners to Jefferson Market Court. The Captain suggested that he should walk on one side of the street and that the policeman should walk on the other side. The policeman stared at him, and then collared him again and marched him along, telling him, on the way that he was no better than anybody else. The Captain interrupted the lecture by requesting the policeman to carry his overcoat. The policeman disdained to do so.

At Jefferson Market Capt. Kirwan told Justice White that he and his servant had been attacked as they were coming out of the Hoffman House bar by two strange men. Justice White fined them $10 each. Not having any money with him, the Captain sent a note to Mr. W. F. Douglas of 21 North Washington square. Mr. Douglas came to the court and paid the fines.

"Don't you know," said Capt. Kirwan, "they put me in a pen among a lot of cutthroats and thieves."

"You were in Capt. Williams's police station," said a court officer.

"What! Captain Williams, the man that clubs people? By Jove, I've heard of him in England."

The Captain then left the court room and went to the Thirtieth street police station. He asked Sergeant Tims for his money. The Sergeant told him he would have to give a receipt for it. The Captain emphatically refused to do this; and the Sergeant sent the money to the Property Clerk.

A watchman at the Hoffman House said that he saw Capt. Kirwan, his servant, and another man talking loudly in West Twenty-fourth street before Policeman Kemp arrived. The servant resented an insulting remark of the third man, who thrashed the servant. The servant wanted to know why the Captain allowed the third man to do this, and the Captain then pitched into the servant.

Capt. Kirwan is stopping at the Hotel Dam. He came recommended to the proprietor by the Marquis de Mores, the Western ranchman, who distinguished himself recently by vanquishing the bandits who attacked his ranch. Capt. Kirwan has been travelling in the West.

Sleepers Roused by Fire in Grand Street.

The lives of twenty persons were imperilled by a fire which broke out in the basement of the three-story frame house at 405 Grand street at 6 o'clock yesterday morning, and spread to 403, 407, and 407½. The upper parts of these buildings were occupied as dwellings, and the occupants, who were sleeping when the fire broke out, made their escape with difficulty. The Whig headquarters was for many years in the store at 407½, at the corner of Clinton street, and was kept by Robert Onderdonk, who lived at the time of the fire in the upper part of 405. He estimates his loss on household effects at $10,000. He lost several paintings, among them a portrait of Henry Clay for which he recently refused $500. The total loss by the fire is estimated at $30,500. The buildings at 403, 407, and 407½ were owned by Morgan Jones, whose loss is $10,000. Valentine Schuler, tailor, owned 403; his loss is $5,000.

Wanted—Females.
