MR. POWER ON GUARD.

A Grim Warning to Sabbath Breakers in a Vacant Lot in Woodside.

Mr. John S. Power, Chairman of the Law and Order Committee of Woodside, Long Island, stood upon the railroad platform in Woodside yesterday surrounded by the other nine members of the committee and the four policemen who have been specially deputized by Sheriff Garrett Furman to keep order in the place. He stood there to warn all excursionists and picnickers not to violate the law by trespassing in the beautiful groves surrounding the village. The green is just beginning to show in the groves, and a perennial spring bubbles forth from the highest hill a tempting invitation to all picnickers to come and drink. The trouble is that, notwithstanding this invitation on the part of the spring, the excursionists have back beer brought into the groves by the proprietors of beer gardens in the village. These beer drinkers, the committee say, come principally from New York, and they get drunk on the beer and raise pandemonium in the groves and along the roads and streets. The Sabbath is thereby desecrated, and the residents are virtually imprisoned in their houses.

The sign board at the depot warning excursionists off the grounds still stands menacing all picnickers, and is the first object seen on leaving the train. No other attempt has been made to paint out the letters since the police fired upon two men carrying paint pots on the night of the 19th inst., and killed a buff-colored dog across the street in the dark.

The body of this dog still lies in the vacant lot unburied.

"It shall stay there," said Police Captain Carpenter, "as a warning to all evil-disposed people who contemplate a raid upon our sign board."

The saloon keepers had something to say about the doings of the Law and Order Committee yesterday. Mr. Meyers of Meyers' Hotel said:

"We agree with the committee in their laudable attempt to keep order in the village. But when they say that no picnics will be allowed upon the grounds of the village, they assume more authority than the law gives them. I have a garden attached to my saloon, and picnickers have a perfect right to use it, and the Law and Order Committee have no right to object. But if they publish in the newspapers that all picnickers must keep away from Woodside, then you see our business is injured. I have spent $10,000 in building my house and establishing my business. The taxes and licenses that I pay go to the support of this township, and I think that I have a right to protest against any action of the Law and Order Committee which will operate to scare Sunday excursionists from this place."

Julius Adams, who is the proprietor of Saenger Hall and summer garden, said that he had spent fifteen years in building up his place. He has extensive summer gardens, which are used by various German singing societies of New York and Brooklyn, who come out with their families during the summer season. But now, after reading that no more picnics will be allowed in Woodside, they would go somewhere else, he said, and he would lose his business.

Chairman Power of the committee said that there would be no interference with beer gardens, except to keep the front doors of saloons closed. Order in the street also would be maintained.

THE NEW SCHMIDT BABY.

A Widespread Interest in him that Greatly Bothered his Father.

A stout, florid German went up to a policeman in the Bowery yesterday and said: "I vant to haf some beebles arrested."

"How many?" asked the policeman.

"So many as I don'd count mit all der fingers un toes of my left handt."

"What have they done to you?"

"Everydings! Dey trive me most grazy. You see, my vife she haf a leetle poy yesterday. I dolt my gustomers apout it, and ve all trink dot leetle poy's sugess at my oxpense. I tink I open as many as dree kegs of peer. Vell, dot vas all righd, for I don'd vas a fadder efery tay."

"So soon as 7 o'clock to-tay I hear dot delephone in der saloon. I put dot plack speaging drumpet mein ear against und sayt, 'Helio!'

"'Heart somepody say, 'Is dot Carl Schmidt?'

"'Yah,' I sayt.

"'How's der leetle poy?'

"I vas bleased to hif mein frends ask apout der paby, so I schmiled und sayt, 'Pully.' Somepody sayt, 'Goot-py,' und I put ub dot speaging drumpet.

"Presently dot delephone rings vonce more. I heart somepody inquire if dot was me. I sayt, 'Yah,' und he sayd, 'How's der leetle poy?' I schmiled vonce more und sayt, 'Pully,' und put ub dot speaging drumpet. In a couble minutes dot delephone rings again. I sayt, 'Helio! who vos dot?' Somepody sayt, 'Herr Ehret, der prewer.'

"'What's der madder?' I sayt.

"'How's der leetle poy?' sayt Herr Ehret.

"'I did not schmile so much, but I sayt all der same, 'Pully.'

"I went behint der par to trink der leetle poy's health, when der delephone again rings. Dot makes me mad, so I oxgiined toutly, 'Helio! Who you vas, und what you vant?' Der man sayt he vas Prince Beesmarck, und vanted to know how dot leetle poy vas. I dolt him dot poy vas more as a ghentleman vot he vas, und put dot speaging drumpet. Dot delephone rung so many as twendy dimes more, und made me vish dot leetle poy never hat peen born. Boliceman, I vant to have dose fellers vot ring my delephone arrested."

"What are their names?"

"Besides Herr Ehret und Prince Beesmarck, dere vas Shorge Vashington Shilds, Henry Pergh, und odder pig fellers."

"You had better go to the Essex Market Police Court and see Justice Patterson about it."

Mr. Schmidt walked in the direction of Essex street.

THE SOAP AND COFFEE SERMON.

Dr. Kennion Preaches to 2,000 People at Roosevelt Ferry.

"Come and be veterans of the Cross," Dr. John Wilberforce Kennion cried out yesterday, after his assistants had put down his organ and camp chairs upon the walk over against the tall factory opposite Roosevelt ferry. Instantly there was a scampering of men, women, and children from all directions.

"How do you all do?" the Doctor asked. "I am pretty well, am right glad to see you, after the winter."

A number of elegantly dressed young women and a couple of preachers came in carriages and were let down on the outskirts of the crowd. They took chairs and sat down. The congregation numbered about 2,000. Half a dozen were policemen.

"This is the ninth year of my preaching," Dr. Kennion said. "Things have changed wonderfully. I used to be pelted with stones and garbage, and had to take to the Oak street police station. I am getting on pretty well now. You see my prosperous condition and my congregation thrives year by year. In a few weeks I will be able to hold meetings at the Battery, Horatio street on the west side, Cherry street, and Chatham square, and also at a number of the ferries. I have discovered that the coffee and roll distribution has won its way into the hearts of my congregation, and it will be kept up, with the addition of a bar of soap now and then." Coffee, sandwiches, and soap were distributed to inquirers.

Astonishing a Bird Catcher.

The bluebird has begun to sound its notes in New Jersey. Yesterday a travel-stained man was walking down Ocean avenue, Jersey City, with a large cage tied to his back. The top of the cage consisted of a broad, thin board.

"What have you got in the cage?" asked a peddler who was going in the opposite direction.

"It's a bluebird," said the man, setting the cage on the ground before him, "a beauty. Just look at his wings and his breast. There's not a better singer on the Jersey flats. Do you want to buy him? I'll let you have him cheap."

"I don't see much beauty in him," said the peddler, stooping down and peering under the roof of the cage.

"You don't?" said the bird catcher. "Why, man alive, look at the beautiful blue on his wings and breast!"

"Blue?" said the peddler. "I don't see any blue."

"Well, maybe the color's a little pale at this season, but it will get deeper in a month or so, argued the travel-stained man.

"Perhaps so. I think I'll wait until then before I buy the bird. But what is the matter with the cage? Won't the door shut?"

"Shut!" exclaimed the traveller. "Blast it, did I forget to shut the door after I had caught the bird and put it inside?"

The forgetful traveller, after staring at the empty cage for a moment, asked the peddler to buy it. It's a better cage for a mocker than for a blue," he argued. "A bluebird ain't of no account anyway."

Money that a Fleeing Man Dropped.

L. B. Phillips of 331 East Ninth street saw a man running after another man in Ninth street, between First and Second avenues, on April 9. The man who was being pursued dropped a roll of money, which Mr. Phillips picked up. The running men disappeared around the corner. While Mr. Phillips was counting the money, which amounted to $105, a third man tapped him on the shoulder and said that it belonged to him. As his word was his only proof, Mr. Phillips refused to surrender the money, and left it at the Fifth street police station to await an owner. It was sent to the property clerk at the Central Office, where it was claimed next day by a woman, who said that her brother, named Fanning, was the loser. She said Fanning was robbed in a saloon of what remained of $125 which he had collected for rent of premises for which he is agent. A friend named Libey pursued the thief, but did not catch him. The man who spoke to Mr. Phillips was not Fanning, for he was too drunk to leave the saloon.

The woman was told that she must get proof of her story. No such proof has yet been offered, and an owner for the $105 is now advertised for in the City Record. If one is not found within six months Mr. Phillips can claim the money.

ALL ABOUT PERMITS.

Some New Features of the Privileges to Occupy the Streets.

A great many permits to do all sorts of things are issued every year by the city Government. The tendency to use the streets for business purposes is very great, and it has been necessary from time to time to pass restrictive ordinances regulating the use of the streets. The Common Council has had much to do with granting permits. But on May 1, by an ordinance recently passed, all special privileges granted by the Common Council for anybody to use the streets for stands, show cases, signs, awnings, barber poles, lampposts, coal boxes, hitching posts, &c., will expire, and such privileges will be given only by the Mayor through the Bureau of Permits.

Under the new ordinance no person can obstruct any street with anything whatever without a permit from the Registrar of Permits. Last year Registrar Woltman granted 19,583 permits, which, with the dog licenses, yielded a revenue of $24,517. It is expected that the business will be much larger this year.

Heretofore a man could get a permit to put up a big stand or banner or sign which would annoy his neighbors, who would at once try to have the privilege taken away. The Permit Bureau will hereafter require the consent of neighbors, as well as the endorsement of the Aldermen, before a permit will be given for anything that may prove objectionable. The bureau reserves power to revoke all permits.

Superintendent Blumenthal of the Bureau of Encumbrances has charge of the granting of builders' permits for removing sidewalks or disturbing the streets. All street obstructions are removed by this bureau. There is no charge for builders' permits, of which 6,600 were issued last year. They are good only for thirty days.

Permits for the erection of new buildings or for alterations must be obtained from the Bureau of Buildings, and none are granted except upon filing full plans of the structure proposed to be erected. Since the Fire Department took charge of this matter the restrictions upon buildings erected within the city limits have been very stringent.
