LOST A $500 BANK NOTE.

The Great Misfortune of a Hard-working Woman—Advertising Without Success.

The bank book marked "Madelina Smith," which an old woman thrust through the paying teller's wicket in the Emigrants' Savings Bank on Oct. 28, contained entries of $681.26, and she called for all of it. The teller handed out a $500 bill, a $100 bill, and the balance in small bills, nickels, and a copper. The old woman grabbed it all in her right hand, thrust it in the pocket of her brown dress, and started out into the rain storm again. Half an hour later the same woman climbed the marble steps of the Bleecker Street Bank, slid $181 in bills into the receiving teller's window, and asked to have it deposited in the name of Madelina Smith as $250.

"You've counted this wrongly," cried the teller: "can't you see it's only $181?"

The old woman stared at him wildly, pressed her hands to her temples, and sank insensible to the floor. Depositors lifted her up, and bank assistants bore her to a sofa and poured water down her throat. She revived slowly.

"My God!" she cried, when fully recovered. "I've lost a $500 bill."

The teller deposited the $181 for her, and the old woman hurried back to the Emigrants' Bank, with tears pouring down her cheeks, and said she had missed the big bill before she had gone a block from the bank, and asked to have it advertised for.

"Give the finder anything you like for its return," she said.

Yesterday the teller advertised for the lost bill. Nobody called to claim the reward of $50 that was offered. Mrs. Smith was tending over a scoured washtub in the rear tenement at 132 East Eleventh street yesterday afternoon. The room was cramped, but neat and clean, and cheap ornaments decorated the mantel and walls.

"It's a great misfortune," she said in broken English, "and I'm very unhappy. I could not have lost the money but for my daughter's unwise choice of a husband. Last year I had $920 in the bank, and took out $250 and transferred it to the Fourteenth street German bank in my daughter's name as a marriage portion. I kept the bank book myself, locked up. Two months ago she married. Her husband was thriftless, however, and began to drink. When she told him that she had $250 in the bank in her name he kept asking her to get the money out. I positively refused to let her have the bank book when I found out what kind of a man her husband was and that he wouldn't work. She got the book, drew the money, and ran away with her husband to Rockaway. They are there now keeping watch at a summer hotel that is closed up for the season. I asked my lawyer what to do after the theft, as I had not the rest of my savings in my daughter's name too. He told me to put the money in another bank. I lost the $500 in trying to carry out his advice."

TWO WIVES, POSSIBLY THREE.

C. Reginald Barker's Exploits Among Young Women and his Final Discomfiture.

In April, 1880, Caleb Reginald Barker came over from Sixth street, Williamsburgh, and joined the Second Street Methodist Church. He was a tall, powerfully built young fellow, with moderately good looks and a fine tenor voice, which he exercised in the choir. The little organist, Mary Elizabeth Wade of 76 Avenue D, returned the love that he began to profess for her, and on Aug. 6 they were married. She had a little money, and with it she furnished apartments, and afterward maintained herself and him for weeks. He took up bricklaying, and in a year and a half abandoned her and enlisted in the navy. In May, 1883, he was taken sick in Marseilles, and his vessel left him there. When he returned it was rumored that he had married in that city a Miss Emma Pite.

Last August he had a flirtation with an Italian girl named Secchi whose father keeps a fruit store in Williamsburgh. In September the two were married as Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baker. Secchi turned his daughter out of his household in anger. Barker and the girl went to boarding in Sixth street, Williamsburgh. On Oct. 15 he told her he had another wife and had married her under an assumed name. He seemed to expect her to overlook the offense and remain with him. She sought Barker's first wife, and the two went together before Justices Duffy and told their stories.

"I'm married to both these women straight enough," said Barker when he was arrested, "but not to the girl in Marseilles." He is held.

The Mystery Adrift.

Harley Curtis and Henry Malony, wreckers employed by Woolley & Sinn, found the sloop yacht Mystery floating off Scaley Rock, Hell Gate, early this week. The anchor was overboard hanging at the end of ten feet of hawser, the sails hung overboard, and there was considerable water in the boat. The door of the cabin had been broken open, but it could not be ascertained whether any of the property had been stolen. The clothing of the crew disappeared between Stratford and Nelsonville. Before firing the bridges a party of unknown men stopped in Murray City and threw bombs from the windows, which were exploded.

Dinner to the Farmers' Club.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—Mr. George W. Childs gave the Farmers Club dinner today at his country house, Wootton. Among those present were Gen. Simon Cameron, ex-Speaker Samuel J. Randall, the Hon. Wayne MacVeagh, George R. Roberts, President Pennsylvania Railroad, Senator J. R. Cameron, Judges Strong and Biddle, D. O. Mills, R. Lewis Kennedy, and White, law field of New York. Twenty-four gentlemen sat down to dinner.

Plucky Miss Byrne.

As Miss Nellie Byrne of 301 Greene avenue, Brooklyn, was passing through Clermont avenue, in that city, on Wednesday afternoon, two young highwaymen put her, one of them taking from behind and snatching her bag, which she had held tightly. Instead of giving up her bag, she fought the assailant of the other. Assistance came to her rescue, both ran off and made their escape.

Shot Dead While Beating his Wife.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Nov. 6.—George Alberts, a desperate criminal of this city, was shot dead at his home last evening by John Benner of Somerville. Benner gave the alarm, and pleaded self-defense. Alberts was beating his wife, and Benner interfered. Alberts turned on him and Benner shot him.

Election Day Is Past.

The election being over, the Excise Commissioners ordered their inspectors yesterday to report on the 15th and 30th of each month every saloon which they found unlicensed. All such saloons will then be reported to the police, so that they can be closed.

Mr. Ward's Residence Not Sold.

The sale of the late residence of Ferdinand Ward, at 81 Fourth street, Brooklyn, which was to have taken place yesterday, was stopped under a stay granted by Justice Cullen of the Supreme Court.

COL. BRANSCOM'S STATEMENT.

He Says he had Plenty of Chances to Defraud Creditors, but Never Meant to Do So.

Col. Alex. C. Branscom, the gentle-mannered, one-armed Southerner accused of forgery, who lost his right arm on the other side of the rebellion, was taken to Jefferson Market yesterday and accused of issuing forged checks purporting to be signed by Richardson & Oliver of Wesson, Miss. Justice O'Reilly set the hearing down for Saturday next.

Col. Branscom said to a SUN reporter that he did not wish to say anything about the charges of forgery made against him. He said that the guide book in the hands of the American Bank Note Company would realize, when completed, a profit of $9,000 or $10,000 on the advertising alone. He expected to sell 100,000 copies at fifty cents a copy, and the American News Company was to sell the whole edition. The guide book would realize a profit of $30,000 on a cost of $20,000. The Peter Adams Company furnished most of the material. The printers had in their hands 150 pages of the book, and by Wednesday next they would have had the final copy. By the end of this month the book would have been completed. He said the American Bank Note Company $1,751 in cash for work done by them. The "Resources and Attractions of the South" was being done by J. J. Little & Co. The copy for that was nearly in, and 10,000 books would have been sold at $10 each. They were to pay $50,000 for the whole edition. The National Cotton Planters' Association was to push the sale of books. He said he had laid out large sums, and that it was absurd to suppose he had intended to defraud any one.

Most of his expenses had been paid, and he could have made $50,000 by selling paper in his hands at a discount. He said he had paid Conrow Bros. $1,500, Hastings & Todd $1,000, and would rather be in prison than a fugitive from justice. "If I had intended to defraud," he added, "I could have left those sums unpaid, but I had no such intention. I would have paid the Bank Note Company $5,500 on Wednesday next, and other claims would have been paid as they matured. F. C. Moreheed, Commissioner-General of the Exposition, authorized me last summer to sell books at the fair, and later the Board of Managers repudiated this contract, and thus it was that I became involved in these complications. Neither Mr. Morehead, who is President of the National Cotton Planters' Association, nor Mr. Grady, Secretary of that body, is involved in any way, nor did they know of my transactions. They are not responsible."

THE FOURTH WARD IS SOLID.

Comforting News for a Mazed Old Lady from Richmond County.

"Please, mister, who's elected?" She was a little old woman in a gray stuff dress, a bright plaid shawl, and a poke bonnet carefully concealed by a bright blue veil. She carried a big market basket on her arm and circulated in and out of the crowd in front of the newspaper offices yesterday with a very anxious expression. Nobody paid any attention to her question, which she kept repeating mechanically as she struggled here and there. Finally she seemed to grow desperate. She seized an old benevolent looking gentleman by the arm and said:

"Please, mister, I come on from Staten Island this morning to get some things, and the men folks told me to come here and find out who's elected. I dassent go back home without finding out, and so won't you please tell me?"

The old gentleman smiled and told her that nobody on earth knew anything about it except Dan Manning and Steve Elkins, and that they wouldn't give it away.

The old lady turned around in the mud a few minutes longer, and finally solicited information from a member of the Growler Gang who had flooded up from Cherry Hill.

"Well, you must be very lazy," said the member contemptuously. "Wasn't Patty Walsh elected? Yer don't know? What does yer know, fer Hivea's sake? Go home an' tell dose chumps what's watin' fer yer that ther Fort ward has gone Democratic an' that Cleveland 'll be ther nex President."

The old lady thanked him warmly, and started across City Hall Park with a relieved expression.

The Trial of Capt. Dudley for Murder.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The trial for murder of Capt. Dudley and the mate of the wrecked yacht Mignonette for having killed the boy, Parker, to keep themselves alive, was concluded to-day. The jury brought in a special verdict, finding the facts as stated, and referring the question of law as to whether a murder had been committed to the Superior Court. The verdict was coupled also with a recommendation to mercy. The prisoners were released on bail.

The yacht was wrecked in the Indian Ocean, near the equator, on June 11. Four of the ship's company escaped in a small boat, but with almost no provisions. On the twelfth day after the wreck the boy Parker, who was nearly dead already, was killed and his body devoured by the others. The survivors were picked up July 5 by the German bark Montezuma, and brought back to England early in September, where they were arrested for murder.

Killed with a Parader's Torch.

Jeremiah Lynch, 14 years old, of 338 East Forty-eighth street, carried a torch in a section of the Tammany parade that passed through the Nineteenth ward on Saturday night. Lawrence Phoenix, a hard citizen without a home, wrested young Lynch's torch from him and made him get out of the line. The boy followed the proud Amazon, Sixty-first street, within sight of Phoenix, at Forty-eighth street somebody hit Phoenix with a tomato. He rushed out of the line and struck Lynch with the torch, setting fire to Lynch fell on the pavement. He was picked up and assisted to his home, where he died on Wednesday. His skull was fractured. Phoenix was arrested yesterday.

Failure of a Millionaire Coffin Maker.

Abel D. Breed, capitalist, of 39 Broadway, made an assignment yesterday to William Lindsay, giving preferences to Marian P. Breed $1,000.00; Mary F. Williams, $800; Henry Clews & Co., $8,000; A. Harjending, $1,000; total, $10,800. Mr. Breed made a fortune out of coffins in Cincinnati, where he was a partner in the firm of Crane & Breed. When that firm was succeeded by the Crane & Breed Manufacturing Company, about a year ago, he continued in it as one of the largest stockholders, and his son became the President. He was also one of the firm of A. L. Stimson & Co., of Cincinnati. He was largely interested in mining, and was regarded by his friends as a millionaire.

Salvation Major Moore Ordered Home.

Major Smith, who was appointed commander of the United States branch of the Salvation Army when Major Moore seceded, arrived in this city on the steamer Oregon last Sunday. He at once began overhauling the books. He told a reporter yesterday that were Booth the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, he would order Moore to return to London. If Moore obeyed the command, everything would go on peaceably, he thoughtfully added; but if he refused, stringent measures would be taken to compel him to surrender the property he is holding.

Watching for the Flag.

The Paterson Press (Republican) asserted yesterday that Blaine was elected, and kept its flag flying all day. A large crowd went to the office of the Guardian (Democratic), and demanded that the flag be run up in honor of Cleveland's election. The office posted a notice on the bulletin board that when the flag was put up it would be to show that Cleveland's election was settled beyond a doubt. Two or three thousand people stood all the afternoon watching the staff. The flag that will be raised, if there is occasion for it, is the one that floated in honor of Tilden's election.

Cold Days for Schaffer.

George Schaffer grabbed two cardigan jackets off the hooks in front of Mack Levy's store, 707 Tenth avenue, on Wednesday night, and made off with them. He was arrested. He said he had been prompted to steal them because he was cold.

"You didn't need two jackets to keep off the cold, did you?" asked Justice Power.

Schaffer did not answer. As he was conducted to the prison Roundsman Muldoon remarked: "This is a colder day for schaffer than yesterday."

Tried to Vote as Abraham Levy.

Henry Seaman of 210 Cannon street, who was arrested on Tuesday on the charge of Election Marshal Patrick Brennan of the First district of the Fourth Assembly district of attempting to vote fraudulently on the name of Abraham Levy, a registered voter of 2 Pike street, failed to appear for examination yesterday, and Commissioner Little issued a warrant for his arrest. Seaman said that the police wanted him to vote in another man's name.

A Mining Town Burned.

DENVER, Nov. 6.—A special from Silver Plume to the Tribune reports that the entire business portion of that town was burned this morning. The loss will reach $100,000. The streets are filled with crowds of excited and homeless people. Several lives have been lost, the body only has so far been recovered. Silver Plume is a small mining camp of a few hundred inhabitants, three miles West of Georgetown.

Beheaded on the Track.

Kate McCue, while walking on the track of the Pennsylvania Railroad yesterday morning at New Brunswick, N. J., was struck by a fast train and instantly decapitated. Both arms were also cut off near the elbow. Mrs. McCue was about 50 years old, and was going to the depot to take the train for Somerville.

PAT'S NEW OVERCOAT.

PAT—"SAY, GURLS, HOW DOES IT SITT IN THE BACK?"
MARY ANN—"FAITH, PAT, YE'RE A REGULAR DUDE!"
BRIDGET—"HOW TRUE FAR YOU, FOINE FEATHURS MAKES FOINE BURDS."

AT 177 BROADWAY, between Dey and Cortlandt, we yesterday opened a store for the sale of MEN'S OVERCOATS ONLY.

This is something unique in the way of a clothing sale. The store is too small for a complete stock of clothing, but of overcoats alone the exhibit is perhaps larger and more varied than was ever offered in a single retail stock, including garments of every grade, from the cheapest worth buying to the finest tailor-made satin-lined overcoats, while the goods and prices are warranted, the same legal guarantee system prevailing as at the principal store. To the many gentlemen who prefer to shop on lower Broadway we commend this as a favorable opportunity to select a winter overcoat.

At the old store we were never so fully able to meet the demands for everything worn by man or boy. People out of New York should write for samples and our fall book of "Clothing News."
