KNOCKING OUT EXTRA DRY.

Nine Bottles of Champagne Bowled Down on a Fifty Dollar Wager.

Granville C. Smith, a Brooklyn man, dined last week with a New York wine dealer. Smith is an enthusiast on the art of bowling.

"I don't think anybody in creation can beat me," Smith observed as they opened a fresh bottle over the dessert.

"Get out," the wine dealer retorted. "You know that Billy Morrison of Nassau street has beaten you. I think he can do it again."

"I'll just bet $50 he can't," Smith cried, "and, just to make it lively for the boys, I'll bowl him against champagne bottles instead of pins. The loser pays for the smashed bottles."

The money was put up, and yesterday Justice McAdam and other lawyers, and a throng of people who were not lawyers, piled themselves up in tiers in the basement of 113 Nassau street to watch the annihilation of the champagne.

An attendant picked a single gilt-trimmed quart bottle out of a basket of extra dry and stood it on the king-pin spot in the alley. Each man was to have twelve shots. Young Morrison of Nassau street fitted his thumb and fingers into the holes of a big wooden ball and sent it flying down the centre of the alley. It struck the bottle square in the middle. There was an explosion like a pistol shot, and champagne and broken glass shot upward.

Another bottle was stationed on the king pin, and Judge McAdam leaned anxiously over the railing to watch its fate. Mr. Smith studied it a while with a smile. Then he doubled himself up suddenly, straightened out again with a jerk, and fired a ball down the alley with an air of easy confidence. It carefully avoided disturbing the champagne. Mr. Smith tried three times more with the same sensational absence of accuracy. Morrison knocked the bottle to flinders on his third shot, and ruined another irreparably on his fifth. Then Mr. Smith braced up against the stairway and knocked out one himself. Then three more zeros went up on his side of the blackboard, and the spectators began to protest audibly against the waste of fluid that might better be drank.

"That's all right," Mr. Smith retorted. "I'm going to break them all the same."

Then he sent four balls rolling successively down the alley. Each ball smashed a bottle, and splashed like a duck into the lake of champagne at the end of the alley. Judge McAdam and the lawyers shook hands with Mr. Smith. He had knocked out five bottles, while to Mr. Morrison's score there were but four.

"It's a great game," said Judge McAdam, "but it's too costly to become popular."

STRAW BAIL AND LOST SECURITIES.

A Reported $25,000 Defalcation of Old Date in the District Attorney's Office.

The Commissioners of Accounts have been engaged recently in investigating the offices of the District Attorney and Sheriff. The report is not yet ready. It treats of the straw-bail business, and declares the law to be defective which permits a man to be accepted as surety, although he may transfer all his property the next day. It is said that the securities for Mother Mandelbaum were found to be deficient in this way. It is expected that the Commissioners will present quite a formidable list of straw bondsmen whose names have been used for the past fifteen years to shield criminals.

It is said that while hunting up the straw bondsmen the Commissioners came across a defalcation of $25,000 that occurred in the District Attorney's office during the administration of the late Benjamin K. Phelps, owing to the failure of one of Mr. Phelps's subordinates to pay over to the city certain securities deposited for the bonds of prisoners. Some of this money, it is said, was refunded from Mr. Phelps's estate.

KATE FORSYTH SUES A DRAMATIST.

She Couldn't Get the Play She Wanted, and She Was Too Young for the Other.

The case of Kate M. Forsyth, the actress, against Telemaque T. Timayenis, dramatist, was tried before Justice Hyatt in the City Court yesterday. Abe Hummel appeared for the plaintiff, and there was no appearance for the defendant.

Miss Forsyth was dressed in a neatly fitting tailor-made suit of olive green. She says that on March 1, 1884, she made a contract with Timayenis, by which he agreed to write her a play. She paid $200 down at the time of the signing of the contract, and was to pay $300 more two weeks after the production of the play, as well as a royalty of $15 a night. Miss Forsyth said that Timayenis read her two acts of the play, which was called "Marcella," but never completed it. She sued to recover the $200 paid. In his answer Mr. Timayenis said that the play was written, and at her disposal.

The jury gave a verdict to Miss Forsyth. The proceedings in court were friendly, as Miss Forsyth and Mr. Timayenis had come to a settlement. Miss Forsyth said yesterday:

"Mr. Timayenis is a Greek, and I engaged him to write me a Greek play. When he failed to do it he offered me another play, "The Countess Adele," but it was all for a male character, and the only lady character, if I had taken that, would have forced me to be the mother of a child 24 years old, and I am not quite old enough for that yet."

Mr. Timayenis is a teacher. He is very Oriental in appearance, having black hair, beard, and eyes, and very swarthy complexion. He said that Miss Forsyth objected to "Marcella" because he had made her part too old.
