GROBLEWSKI AND WINIFRED HANLEY.

Was Mrs. Groblewski Forced to Drink Poison out of a Bottle?

Joseph Groblewski, the Brooklyn saloon keeper, and Winifred Hanley, his servant, arrested on suspicion of having caused the death of Mrs. Groblewski by arsenical poisoning, were before Justice Walsh for examination yesterday. The papers in the divorce proceedings instituted by Mrs. Groblewski against her husband two months before her death were put in as evidence. The following letters, the first written by Mrs. Groblewski a few days before her death, and the second by Miss Hanley a few days after that occurrence, were also admitted:

DEAR UNCLE: Your letter has been received, and was very glad again to hear from you. You would like to know how everything is ever here. * * * I have been married on the 5th of April, at Easter Sunday, in the evening at 7 o'clock, by a Catholic priest, whose name I have forgotten. I was going to write before this, but I had neither time nor opportunity. Emma and Robert come to see me often, and we live quite happy, if it does not turn worse. * * * We do no more see Canters now, for they have acted badly on me, and they have led me into my misfortune. Later I shall write you more about it. I cannot now, for my husband wants to know what I have written. But believe it surely, dear uncle, no roses have been scattered on the path of my life. They might come later, perhaps, when the thorns have already torn my fingers. I have not followed the good advice which you have always bestowed on me, and I have run blind into my own misery. Bitter tears I have wept already, and sister Emma with me. But after the fact has been accomplished repentance is too late.

Therefore, dear uncle and aunt, I ask you again, do not push me away from you. He as kind to me as you have been before. Emma says she would like very much to come to you now. She has saved some money, but she says she would not be happy in Texas unless I was with her, and she would have to think always in what misery I am.

This last part of the letter I have written after my husband went away; therefore it is so much contrary to the first part; but I now must close. Pray, dear uncle, write soon back to me, and instead of sending me exhortations, as heretofore, send me your pity.

With the heartiest regards we remain, after all, in love, your children, and I an unhappy young wife.

JULY 15, 1885. CLARA.

170 MYRTLE AVENUE, July 25, 1885.

MY DEREST JULIA: I received your ever kind and most welcome note. Glad to hear you were doing so well, as this leaves me the same. I am delighted to hear you got such a place. Any port in a storm, Julia. I have a good tale to tell you, as I have some trouble since Friday last concerning the death of our lady, Clara Groblewski, who got ill on Sunday week, died on the following Friday. She had a doctor three times, and her friends reported she died of foul play and that he poisoned her, which is a lie. The boss was arrested and discharged, as there was no evidence against him. There was an inquest held, and the verdict was that she died by some unknown at present. They took her stomach and the medicine to be analyzed, and when that examining is over the cause of her death will be known. Her friends thought he or I must have poisoned her. Therefore I am in almost as much danger as he is. There was a warrant for my arrest, but luckily I was not home when they went to serve it.

Julia, I am very much troubled about it. Still a clear conscience fears no accusation, but it appeared horrible in the papers. We cannot do anything until after the analysis of the stomach, the inquest will be held, and our trial will come to court. The boss and I have two good liars, and her friends and sister made two statements on Sunday, and they ain't much, except they have more witnesses. Well, I have up to this five, and six, two, and perhaps more before trial. If I can find the papers I will send you some. You can come over soon, as I am so troubled.

I have a chance again of the boss, but that don't trouble me much now. Hoping you are going on well with that crazy old hag. Perhaps if she died you would get the house, property, and furniture. I would like you to come over soon to console me in my present difficulties. My sister sends you her love. Your unfortunate chum, WINIFRED.

TO JULIA.

Several witnesses testified that Groblewski's treatment of his wife was cruel, and that he refused to provide her with medical attendance and to allow her to be taken to the hospital.

Theodore Waehlen, a former bartender of the accused, testified that Groblewski was improperly intimate with Miss Hanley.

Gotlieb Ruehl, a Myrtle avenue baker, testified that Groblewski said to him that if he got rid of his wife he would get a better one in Winifred Hanley. This conversation took place early in June.

Emma Germann, a sister of Mrs. Groblemski, testified that Dr. Briggs had ordered medicine to make her sister sleep. She was to take half a teaspoonful in water. One night her sister could not sleep and got up to get some of the medicine. Her husband took the bottle from her and said: "That's not the way to take medicine. You must put the bottle up to your mouth and drink out of it." She declined to do this, and then he forced her to drink from the bottle. Her sister said the medicine burned like fire. Thirty hours before her sister died her husband called her down stairs to open the door, and she was so weak that she fell and struck her head against the wall.

The prisoners offered no testimony. They were held to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Advised to Heist Safes and Make a Test Case.

The Marvin Safe Company and William M. Pownall, a safe mover, obtained an injunction restraining the city from suing them for violation of the city ordinance which prohibits any person from hoisting or lowering safes on the outside of buildings. On a motion yesterday before Judge Donohue to continue the injunction Mr. Edward C. Graves for the plaintiff contended that to force this ordinance would be practically to stop the business of the city clerks, which had been in operation for many years.

Judge Donohue suggested that when such suits were brought for damages the city might plead that the safes had been violated and the cases be thus tried on their merits so as to raise distinctly on appeal the question of the power of the Common Council. He vacated the preliminary injunction.

A Lunatic Drowned Near Ward's Island.

Fifty-seven lunatics, under the care of Keepers Hurley and Geary, were marched from the Ward's Island Lunatic Asylum on Sunday afternoon for an airing. When they neared the river August Murscher jumped into the water. The keepers did not notice his absence till one of the lunatics told Hurley. Murscher was then drifting toward Hell Gate. Hurley plunged overboard to save him, but the current carried the lunatic away so rapidly that Hurley could not catch him. He had all he could do to save himself from being engulfed. He caught hold of a convenient rock and rested until some men in a yacht near by flung him a life preserver, with the aid of which he got back to the island. Murscher was drowned.

Plenty of Watered Milk.

Dr. Edson of the Health Department said yesterday that seldom or never was milk watered to the extent that it is now. A milk inspector in a single day last week found thirteen places on the east side where watered milk was sold. Urea was so many are not discovered in a month. As milk has recently been selling at the rate of 12½ cents a quart wholesale, the dealer who retails it at 20 cents a quart, as hundreds do, must put water in to make a profit. The reason the milk supply is short is because the drought has dried up the pasturage, and because the heat sours the milk while it is on its way to this city.

Three Yachtsmen Rescued.

A despatch received yesterday from Key East, on the New Jersey coast, relates that three yachtsmen had a narrow escape from drowning. They had been thrown into the surf by capsizing of their yacht, the Sea Foam. A lifeboat, which had one first trial to get out through the surf succeeded on its second attempt to rescue the yachtsmen. They are A. Hoobert, who is connected with the Adams Express Company; E. J. Hallstead, and A. P. Stanton. They left the city on Saturday on a week's cruise, intending to go to Barnegat. All three are good swimmers. The Sea Foam is a twenty-foot boat.

The Fruit was Green, but Marketable.

A delegation of West Washington Market fruit dealers called at the Health Department yesterday to protest against the seizure, last week, of fourteen baskets of peaches and three baskets of pears on the ground that they were green. The dealers said that, although apparently green, the fruit was marketable. The fruit inspectors who made the seizure said that the fruit not still showing green was wash, and if permitted the dealers that they must appeal for satisfaction to the Health Commissioners, as he believed the inspectors.

Dog Catchers Arrested for Cruelty.

Agent Evans of Mr. Bergh's society saw a dog catcher's cart at the corner of Third avenue and 119th street on Sunday, and in a cage in which six dogs would have been uncomfortable he saw twenty-five dogs piled one on top of another, all of them barking, snapping, and biting. He arrested Dennis Ford of 1 Pleasant and East Twenty-eighth street and Thomas Canary of 227 East Twenty-ninth street, who were with the cart. In the Harlem Police Court, yesterday, Ford and Canary were held for trial, on a charge of cruelty to animals.

Kelly's Death in the Sixth Ward, Brooklyn.

Patrick Kelly died on Sunday at 87 Pacific street, Brooklyn, aged 55. When he went to Brooklyn and opened a liquor store in 1866 he gave out that he was the man who shot Police Sergeant Brett during the attempt to rescue Fenian prisoners in Manchester in the previous year. This gave him a strong political roll in the Sixth Ward, which rapidly waned when it was ascertained that he had informed on the Fenians, he lost this and had to give up his business.

Expediting Custom House Oaths.

One of the newly appointed Deputy Collectors, on assuming the duties of his office in the rotunda of the Custom House yesterday, began administering oaths to importers and brokers in a formal way. "Do you solemnly swear, &c." Pretty soon he merely asked, "Is this your signature?" Business moved expeditiously at the last when affiants handed him papers to sign. He nodded his head and they nodded in return, and that completed the oath.

Couldn't Tell Who Cut his Throat.

Policeman Brown found a man wandering aimlessly on Kingsbridge road, near 171st street, on Sunday. There was a cut in his throat, and a handkerchief which was loosely tied around his neck was wet with blood. He managed to say that his name was Dennis Cronan, but could not tell how he got the wound. Yesterday Justice Power committed him to the care of the Commissioners of Charities and Correction.

Why the Piano Makers Struck.

The piano makers of Hardman, Decker & Co. of Forty-ninth street and Eleventh avenue notified the firm on Saturday last that if it did not reinstate A. Schneider, the discharged foreman, every man in the factory would come out. Mr. Hardman refused to reinstate Schneider. Only one hundred and twenty-five men went out on strike. About forty drill hands remained. Yesterday about twenty more came back and were put to work.

He Mistook Carbolic Acid for Medicine.

John Henry, janitor of the county buildings in Richmond, N. Y., died on Sunday morning from accidental poisoning. He mistook carbolic acid for medicine which he was taking for malarial troubles.

BRIDGE JEFFRIES BRIBED.

The Two Little Girls Pretty Sure he Snipped Off Their Braids.

Alfred Jeffries, the ex-naval officer, who is locked up in the Tombs on a charge of clipping off the braids of the two little girls, Kate Alfonsen and Rose Slenker, was brought up for examination yesterday. Kate Alfonsen said again that she was positive that Jeffries was the man. Rose wasn't so sure at first, but, on second thoughts, said she was sure that Jeffries was really the man who cut her hair. The two men from the steamer Continental, Christopher Hausman and Alfred Hewitt, were equally positive that it was Jeffries whom they saw take out his scissors and clip off the girls' hair.

Jeffries was his own lawyer. He denied that he had cut the hair from the girls' heads. He said that he had been stopping at Sweeny's Hotel for two weeks, and had intended, as soon as his arrangements were perfected, to go into business. Lieut. Walling of the United States steamer Dispatch corroborated these statements. Justice Smith said there was nothing left him but to hold Jeffries, and Jeffries was sent back to his cell underneath the roof of the Tombs.

Policemen Must be Tried if They Club.

Superintendent Murray preferred charges yesterday against Detective Chrystol of the Elizabeth street squad, under the amendment to Rule 259 of the Police Manual, which says that a policeman who while on duty shall draw his pistol on a citizen, or use his club, must be tried. It is alleged that Edward Nolan, janitor of the apartment house at Park avenue and Seventy-third street, and his nephew, Joseph Nolan, on refusing to pay for drinks which they had not ordered, while in a dive in the lower Bowery on Saturday night, were clubbed by Chrystol, who afterward arrested them, and, the next day, had them fined for being drunk and disorderly. The detective says he had to use his club to effect their arrest.

Jennie C. Dalzell Discharged.

Miss Jennie C. Dalzell, who was formerly a pretty fair amateur actress, appeared before Justice Massey, in Brooklyn, yesterday, to answer the charge of stealing $20 from Eugene McKenny, a builder. The alleged theft was committed two years ago, when Miss Dalzell and McKenny lived together. Miss Mary Miller testified that Miss Dalzell had confessed to her that she took the money. The accused wept bitterly as she testified that in the eyes of the law she was McKenny's wife, and that she charge was made at this late day to get her out of the way. She was discharged by Justice Massey.

Not a Pleasant Visit for Green.

Joseph Napoleon Green arrived from Philadelphia on Sunday night and put up at a Bowery lodging house. He could not sleep, and, leaving the lodging house, walked up the Bowery. He stopped under a street lamp to count his capital of $45, when two men assaulted and robbed him. He found Policeman O'Brien and told him of his loss. The policeman said he had no business to count his money in the street, and Green used impolite language to the policeman, who arrested him. At the Tombs yesterday Green was locked up in default of $5 fine.

Met a Bloodhound when he Went with his Bill.

Frederick Krauss, collector for a Williamsburgh brewery, preferred a charge of assault in the Keap Street Police Court yesterday against Mary Ponton, who keeps a beer saloon at 19 Keap street. He said that she owed him $60 for beer, and when he went to collect it said she had no money, and sicked a bloodhound on him. Mrs. Ponton said that her dog only howled at Krauss, and made no attempt to bite him. She was held.

Only Six Weeks, Perhaps, Before Frost.

A katydid has been seen and heard in Bergen County, N. J. There is comfort in this fact, since many persons have an abiding faith that frost comes just six weeks after the first appearance of these insects.
