CUPID IN THE SEVENTH WARD.

A Manly Irish-American Police Officer Marries a Handsome Young Heiress.

The Seventh and Thirteenth wards are in a flutter over the elopement and marriage of a beautiful young heiress. The young lady is the only daughter of Mr. Wm. H. Bostelmann, a wealthy merchant engaged in business in West street, who resides at Jackson and Water streets. She has a prepossessing face and faultless figure, with the fresh bloom of nineteen Junes on her cheek. Mr. Bostelmann has been for ten years back a widower. Shortly after his wife's death he took his little daughter Mamie to Europe and placed her in one of the first seminaries for young ladies in Germany. She returned two years ago the possessor of all the musical, linguistic, and other accomplishments the seminary could confer. Having a bright, receptive mind, the toil of her teachers was not by any means wasted on young Miss Bostelmann. Her arrival home was marked by one of the most elegant receptions ever given in that quarter. Miss Bostelmann became the reigning belle of the Seventh ward. In addition to her amiable manner and educational acquirements, she is the prospective heiress of her father's large estate. Suitors for her hand were neither few nor tardy in their attentions, but if any impression was made on the fair damsel it was neither deep nor lasting. The father frowned on all suitors, fancying that plenty of time yet remained for his daughter to wed. He did not at all welcome the thought of having his home deprived of the light of her presence.

His wishes might have been realized had not the Board of Police Commissioners about six months ago transferred Roundsman Edward G. O'Brien from an uptown station to the Thirteenth precinct in Delancey street. He came with an excellent record and a fine physique to his new post of duty. He made friends and admirers, but among them all there was none so ardent as the old merchant's daughter living on Jackson and Water streets. "Ed," as his comrades call him, had a roguish eye and winning ways, and before he had made many rounds of the precinct the tendrils of Miss Bostelmann's heart were twined around his. They had trysts by the East River and twilight drives to Central Park, until on Tuesday last the pair, unknown to relatives and friends, started for Middletown, Orange county, N. Y. There they were made one.

When the wealthy father learned the facts, he flew into the seventh heaven of indignation, and vowed vengeance against both; but it is said by those who are intimate friends of the old gentleman that there will be no serious difficulty in effecting a full reconciliation as soon as the bride and groom return from Niagara Falls, where they are now spending the honeymoon.

Roundsman O'Brien was born in Liberty, Sullivan county, N. Y., thirty years ago. His father, an honest and sturdy Irishman, settled there over forty years ago. The young man came to this city and got on the police force when he was 21 years old. Two years later, for his quickness, tact, and fidelity, he was made a roundsman, and for the last seven years has filled that post satisfactorily. In a recent civil service examination for a police sergeantship, he scored 98.

Few of the rich suitors who previously sought Miss Bostelmann's hand are able to match that figure. As to their competing with Roundsman O'Brien in any physical tussle, it may be said that he is one of those blunt, unpretentious fellows who neither brags nor takes water.

PAULINE SPEEGER'S DESPAIR.

She Takes Laudanum to Kill Herself, but Fortunately Takes Too Much.

Pauline Speeger, pretty and 18 years old, stopped Policeman Kelly in Sixth avenue, Brooklyn, at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, and, handing him an empty bottle, labelled "Laudanum," told him she had swallowed its contents. She was removed to the City Hospital, where it was learned that she had taken three drachms of laudanum. In the afternoon she had recovered from her, but she will be kept in the hospital till to-day.

Her father, Charles Speeger, formerly kept a barber's shop in Fulton street and Myrtle avenue. For some time, she said, she had been stopping with her cousin, Jennie Newbaur, at 359 Sixth avenue, New York. On Friday night she had a quarrel with her cousin, who ordered her out of the house. She then went to Brooklyn to look for her father, and, not being able to find him, and having nowhere to go, she became very despondent and purchased the laudanum at a Music Hall drug store and took it in order to kill herself. She was glad that she had not succeeded. She took too much laudanum. Had she taken half as much, the doctors said, it would have killed her.
