YOUNG MRS. SAULT ACCESSORY.

The Coroner's Jury Hold that Abram Sault Killed Frederick Pfister.

At the close of the inquest in Williamsburgh yesterday in the case of 17-year-old Frederick Pfister, whom 15-year-old Mrs. Florence May Barton Sault in her second confession says her husband killed because he found them together in a vacant lot near the head of Scholes street, on the night of July 25, Coroner Hesse said to the jury: "All the information obtainable has been presented to you. The testimony of the witnesses shows such a condition of immorality among the young people of this part of Brooklyn that is astounding. You have heard these young girls and boys unblushingly give testimony concerning their own degradation that is appalling."

Morris Cohen, 16 years old, a pretzel vender, testified yesterday that he thought the pistol shown him was like one he had seen in young Mrs. Sault's possession. She had told him she intended to use it on Lena Pitz if she did not give back her dress.

Minnie Fischer testified that at the last session of the inquest she said to Mrs. Sault: "Mary, who did it?" and Mrs. Sault replied: "Mike Fenton (a variety actor) did it, but I would not give it away if I had to swing for it. I'll put my husband, Sault, in a hole. Don't give me away." This witness also testified that on the Sunday after the body was found two young men met her and told her that May Barton (Mrs. Sault) was in the job.

Bella Levine, 17 years old, testified that Mike Fenton was performing at a variety show on Coney Island on the Sunday night that Pfister was killed. "I was with him and another person," she said, "all that afternoon and night."

Detective Inne testified that he had ascertained that Fenton was engaged as the witness had described. The theory held by the detective is that Pfister was killed by Mrs. Sault, who, in her desire to go to Coney Island to see Fenton, went out to get some money. She met Pfister, and they went to a place near where he was afterward found, dead. When, however, Pfister refused to give her any money, she was so enraged that she drew her revolver and struck him the blow on his head which killed him. It would seem to follow from this theory that Pfister must have climbed into the grain wagon, or he was afterward found dead.

On the theory that Sault killed him it is supposed he was lifted into the wagon, dead or dying, to prevent the immediate finding of the body. One pistol shot was fired. Mrs. Sault said in her first confession that Pfister fired it to frighten her, and that then, in a struggle, she got the pistol from him and struck him with it. In her second confession she said Sault, in a struggle with Pfister, struck him with the pistol. According to Detective Inne's theory, Mrs. Sault must have fired the pistol to frighten Pfister into paying her.

George Frank, a boy, testified to finding the pistol on a shed near where the body was found. The jury rendered the following verdict:

From the confession made by Florence May Barton Sault, we find that her husband struck the blow which produced death, and we hold the woman as an accessory.

The prisoners will be arraigned before Justice Naeher on Friday.

NEITHER COLLEGE NOR HOSPITAL.

Another Decision in the Litigation as to Millionaire Wood's Will.

Samuel Wood died in 1878, leaving an estate worth more than $1,000,000. By a will made in 1872 Mr. Wood gave $137,000 in distant relatives, and $100,000 in annuities to other relatives, the principal to revert to the estate. The remainder of the estate was to be devoted to founding a hospital. Edward T. Schenck, Martin Wood, and Alfred L. Simonson were named as executors and trustees. Three years later Mr. Wood changed his mind, and by a codicil gave the greater part of his estate to found "The Samuel Wood College of Music." Mr. Schenck was not continued as trustee. Dr. William Elmer, Mr. Wood's physician, being named in his place. The testator's only heir at law, Abraham Hewlett, a nephew, who was named as trustee in the codicil, refused to act, and contested the probate of the will and codicil. Both were sustained by the Surrogate. Then a partition suit was begun to determine whether Dr. Elmer or Mr. Schenck should be recognized as trustee. Judge Van Cott decided in favor of the latter, but his decision was reversed by the General Term. The executors proceeded to carry out the directions of the will, but Mr. Hewlett claimed that the provision for founding the musical college, as well as that for establishing a hospital, was void. To determine this point, the executors recently began a suit in the Supreme Court, making Hewlett defendant.

Ex-Judge James C. Spencer, before whom the case was tried, as referee, yesterday reported that the provisions were invalid and inoperative, and that the trustees must administer the estate as if they were not in the will or codicil, and judgment was entered to that effect.

THE PIRATES OF GRAVESEND BAY.

Six Clamming Sloops Captured and Their Skippers Put in Prison.

In accordance with the arrangement completed between Supervisor McKane of Gravesend and Supervisor Ferguson of New Utrecht, Supervisor McKane, as Chief of Police of Coney Island, borrowed yesterday the little steamer Governor Hill, in which Supervisor Ferguson in his capacity of Shore Inspector is accustomed to watch garbage scows, and made a raid upon the bold outside fishermen who have been yanking clams from the beds of the Gravesenders. Chief McKane took with him on the Governor Hill twelve policemen, and captured six of the intruding clam sloops. Their gallant skippers were taken to the Coney Island lockup.

Each sloop had, beside its skipper, a crew of one, which in each case was allowed to navigate the vessel home.

The names of the offending sloops and their skippers are: S. B. Rogers, Patchogue, Skipper Edward James; Lucille, Unionport, Skipper James Bailey; George P. Putnam, New York, Skipper John W. Cole; Fearnaught, Canarsie, Skipper Peter Miller; Wellspring, New York, Skipper C. H. Segman; and Annie Island, Canarsie, Skipper James Dixon. Some resistance was offered to Chief McKane and his marines, but the arrests were made without bloodshed. The prisoners will be tried before Judge Waring of Coney Island on Monday.

Dr. Barney's Creditors Uneasy.

Dr. Charles S. Barney came to this city about a year ago from Glens Falls and engaged in stock speculation. Yesterday Judge Potter granted attachments against his property in suits brought by Mrs. Lavinia S. Hawley for $15,000, and by Gurden Conkling for $250. Mrs. Hawley's claim is for money loaned at various times. Conkling says that on Friday evening last he visited Barney at the St. Denis Hotel and found him packing his valise for a trip to the Delaware Water Gap, as he said, which might last a week or a year. Barney asked his visitor to give him a check for $250 on the First National Bank of Glens Falls in exchange for his check on the Bank of the Metropolis of this city. Mr. Conkling did as he was requested. They left the room together that night and had walked as far as the hotel office, when Barney turned to the clerk and handed for an envelope. It was handed to him, and he took a $5·50 bill from it. The clerk then returned it to the safe. When they reached the side walk Conkling told Barney that he thought his method as to money matters a strange one. Barney replied that he feared he would be stooped by people from whom he had borrowed large sums, and that he didn't propose to be caught. On Saturday Mr. Conkling presented the check for payment at the bank and was told that Barney had withdrawn his account. Since then nothing has been seen or heard of Barney.

Miss Muller's Cat Colony.

The health officers scattered the cat colony of Miss H. Muller, a school teacher, at Pleasant avenue and 125th street, about two months ago. The neighbors had complained that she was maintaining a nuisance. She kept ten cats in her house, and in the yard she had a feline lodging house in which tramp cats slept. The health officers ordered her to get rid of her collection, and this resulted in her moving away. She carried four cats with her.

A letter was received from Miss Muller at the Health Department on Monday in which she complained that the sanitary authorities had not taken away the thirteen cats of the Misses Valentine of 319 East Twenty-fifth street, though they had driven her "to the verge of committing suicide." "The Board of Health," she wrote, "has injured me in my health, in my purse, and in my position, and I sincerely hope God will reward all those people who have persecuted a lone, unprotected woman as they deserve."

The health officers say that the Misses Valentine have but three cats, and that their premises are clean.

Somebody Tried to Scare the Soldier.

Charles Ellison of 549 West Thirty-seventh street, a member of the Eighth Regiment, got permission on Tuesday to wear his uniform to leave his picture taken. He was going through West Thirty-seventh street at 9 P. M. When he was in front of 448 somebody cried "Sez me scare the soldier," and a revolver was fired at him. Policeman Hazard heard the shot and arrested Peter Dervien, who was sitting on the stoop of 448. Dervien and Ellison, who, the police thought, was not sober, were both locked up. There was no proof in Jefferson Market yesterday that Dervien had fired the shot, and he and Ellison were discharged.

The Policemen Thought of Burglars.

A big pile of goods in one of Simpson, Crawford & Simpson's windows at Sixth avenue and Twentieth street tumbled against the glass about 1½ A. M. yesterday, and the huge pane, yielding to the pressure, fell out upon the sidewalk with a tremendous crash that aroused the sleeping policemen in the neighborhood, and made them think burglars were about.

Burglary at Harry Hill's.

Burglars stole a lot of tools and other things from Harry Hill's basement last Thursday night, and on Tuesday night they broke into the window of L. Jacobson's tailor shop next door, and collared five pairs of trousers besides smaller articles.

STOLE DAUGHTER AND YACHT.

River Pirate Thomas James Recognized at Greenwich as Dick Berrian.

Superintendent Murray received a telegram from Greenwich, Conn., on Aug. 7, announcing that the yacht Sarah A. Dexter, belonging to Simon Morrell of that town, had been stolen. The yacht was described as sloop-rigged and black in color, with a yellow stripe running all around it. The West Harlem police noticed a craft corresponding to this description cruising about Edgewater in a piratical manner four days later, and Capt. Smith went in search of her in the police steamboat Patrol. He found her in the course of time concealed under the bluff at Edgewater, to all appearance abandoned. Boarding her, he discovered that she was laden with all sorts of ship's stores, which had evidently been stolen. On the deck were several truck loads of junk.

While these discoveries were being made, a man stole out from under a lot of canvas and looked around irresolutely. He was collared and asked to give an account of himself. He said he was Thomas James, a resident in Avenue A, and that he had taken service on the sloop, which was called the Willie James, at Port Richmond, S. I. The vessel's miscellaneous cargo, he continued, had been collected at Bayonne, Perth Amboy, and contiguous ports, and was to be delivered that day to a purchaser, whom the owner was to bring to the foot of Canal street. This story didn't bamboozle Capt. Smith, and Policeman Quigley recognized the teller of it as a river pirate. An examination of the sloop discovered that she was really the Sarah A. Dexter. The name had been erased, but the initials S. and D. could be traced, as could the yellow band, in spite of its being painted over. Two pairs of oars marked Philip Finn, and which proved to have been stolen, were found in a boat that was attached to the sloop's stern. The oars were muffled and the oarlocks were wound with ratline. The boat had evidently been used for making raids on the shore.

Mr. Morrell came to town and identified his yacht. He failed, however, to identify the prisoner James, when that worthy was sent to Greenwich to answer to the local authorities for stealing the Sarah, but his son repaired his omission.

"Why, father," he said, after he had seen James in Greenwich jail, "that fellow is Dick Berrian, who eloped with sister."

The young man told the truth. James proved to be the scamp who, while Mr. Morrell's farm hand half a dozen years ago, had won his daughter's heart. The two ran away to this city, where they were married. Mr. Morrell never saw his daughter after her elopement, and all that he ever heard of her was that she had died in want about a year after she had left her home. Of Berrian he heard nothing until his son recognized in the yacht stealer the man who had stolen his sister.

The prisoner will meet with no mercy when he is tried for the lesser crime, for public sentiment in Greenwich is strongly against him.

THERE WAS NO JUSTICE FOR IT.

Justice Patterson Discharges the Man Arrested Through Acting Capt. Doyle.

Contractor P. Cunningham's driver, who was arrested last Saturday night while removing ashes from the Eagle Pencil Company's works, Fourteenth street and Avenue D, was discharged yesterday by Justice Patterson. Policeman Cook, who made the arrest, told Justice Patterson that he had only acted according to the orders of Acting Captain Doyle. He admitted that he had seen the drivers of Thomas Kelly, the contractor who had preceded Cunningham, remove ashes in the same way and under the same kind of permit, but had never interfered with them.

Justice Patterson said that the permit was the strongest that the Department of Public Works could issue, and that there was no cause for the arrests that had been made. The permit gives Cunningham's drivers the right to cross the sidewalk in order to get the ashes.

Superintendent Crouse of the Eagle Pencil Company, who said on Tuesday that Doyle had requested him to remove Cunningham and reinstate Kelly, was in Essex Market Court yesterday. He had a long talk with Justice Patterson in his private room, and made an affidavit. Neither the Justice nor Mr. Crouse would tell what the affidavit was about.

FOR THE ITALIAN ORPHAN ASYLUM.

The Need of Such an Institution Forcibly Set Forth in a Mother's Letter.

The following letter, with $1 for the fund for building in this city an asylum for destitute young Italian girls, has been received:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN—SIR: Please find enclosed $1 for the Italian Orphan Asylum. I have two little girls who, I often fear, may be left alone in the world helpless, as I am their only support. Looking at them as I read in your paper some days ago your appeal for the little Italian orphan children, the thought came in my mind, what if such a fate were theirs? I imagine them left fatherless and motherless in a strange land, whose language they did not understand, whose habits and customs were totally different from their own, and I think understood the beautiful charity which you are so much interested in, and which cannot fail to interest every charitable person in the city.

THE SUN fund in aid of the Italian Orphan Asylum now stands:

The Man who Tried to Save Miss Wyckoff.

Physicians are puzzled by the case of Jesse J. Catlin of Elizabeth, who was injured in trying to save Miss Annie Wyckoff from being killed by a train at South Elizabeth four weeks ago. He has fully recovered physical health, it is said, and he weighs several pounds more than he did when engaged in his work as yardmaster in the Jersey City depot of the Pennsylvania Railroad. But his mind is seriously affected and he raves constantly. His limbs are tied and two men constantly watch him. Drs. Mraving and Pinneo visit him twice every day, but give very little hopes of the recovery of his reason.

The friends of the hero in Elizabeth have started a fund for presentation to him, and the subscription is headed by Congressman A. B. Darlton. Catlin's family do not want him removed to an asylum. Catlin had seized Miss Wyckoff, who appeared to be dazed by the approach of the train, and had lifted her from the ground when Miss Wyckoff was struck down. He was thrown twenty feet forward, but on one side of the track. Miss Wyckoff, who fell on the track, was killed.

Thomas Clifford, a John street glue manufacturer, who lives at 459 Thirteenth street, Brooklyn, and who has had so much domestic trouble lately, has now had James Rogers, his good-looking young coachman, arrested. Mr. Clifford had given strict instructions to his coachman not to drive out Mrs. Clifford or take any orders from her. The coachman paid no attention to these instructions, and on Monday afternoon he drove Mrs. Clifford down the road in a buggy behind her husband's favorite trotter, Frank. When Mr. Clifford learned of this he used strong language to the coachman, who, it is alleged, drew a razor and threatened to kill him. Mr. Clifford had him arrested for this threat, and the examination will be held next Tuesday by Justice Massey.

She Found the Cab Too Small.

Maude Bradford, a young woman, who lives at 128 West Thirty-second street, went to Brooklyn on Tuesday to visit friends. She engaged Cabman John Harding to take her home. When the cab got to the corner of Sixth avenue and Thirteenth street, Miss Bradford's feet were hanging out of one of the cab windows, the glass was broken, and she was practicing the Indian war whoop. Policeman Becker closed the cab for two blocks, and took the young woman to the West Thirteenth street station. The cabman, was not in court yesterday to prosecute, and Justice Ford discharged her.

Struggling with a Girl Burglar.

Annie Smith, 22 years old, of 22 Second street, broke into Mrs. Ida Flatow's room at 47 East Broadway, on Tuesday evening, and packed up for carrying away jewelry worth $100. Mrs. Flatow came in, recognized the girl as a former servant, and seized her. A struggle ensued, and the girl got away, leaving a piece of her gown in Mrs. Flatow's grasp and her hat and umbrella in the room. When a policeman caught her she had adorned herself with a pair of the stolen earrings. At Essex Market yesterday Justice Patterson held the girl in $1,500.

Quinine Habit!

IN KASKINE

Does not quinine do more harm than good? This is an important question, and upon the answer to it depends a great forthcoming change in medical practice.

That quinine is a powerful tonic and antifebrific cannot be disputed; but facts show it to be also a drug whose continued use is attended with results which are often worse than the diseases it is meant to relieve and cure. What these are every educated and thoughtful physician knows. In the light of long and wide experience it is at least a debatable point whether quinine has not actually sent to the grave more people than it ever saved from it. The late Dr. J. Marion Sims said there should be a law against the indiscriminate use of quinine.

A lady, Mrs. Leonard, living at 205 East 107th st., New York, had suffered five years with malaria in its worst form. She was young and had previously been strong and well. After a time both mind and body yielded and broke down utterly, and her friends feared she would become insane. Her physician gave quinine freely and continuously. The disease, transiently checked, returned, complicated now with quinine poisoning. Between the two Mrs. Leonard was physically wrecked, and in her despair told her husband she hoped for deliverance only through death.

At this crisis a circular accidentally fell into her hands in which occurred this paragraph: "There is no quinine that does not kill. Every patient in St. Francis Hospital treated with Kaskine has been discharged cured." Finding she could test Kaskine without general medical counsel, Mrs. Leonard procured the article, used it according to directions, and was virtually restored to health in less than three weeks.

In a word, Kaskine has the wonderful virtues of quinine without a trace of its dangerous properties; it is a quinine without reaction. It always helps—never harms.

Kaskine cures on the new septic theory of disease—it destroys all the disease germs in the system. Kaskine is the Quinine of the Future.

Send for the great book of testimonials unparalleled in the history of medicine. $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price.
