CUSTOM HOUSE GOSSIP.

THE PRESIDENT WILL LET COL. BURT STAY ANOTHER YEAR.

New York Republicans Do Not Like This, But the Democrats Say Gen. Harrison is Welcome to the Colonel—Tips Recognized by the Government—A Row Between Mr. Hiscock and Mr. Woodruff.

The President has determined to recognize Col. Burt's claim that his commission as Naval Officer does not expire for a year. This in a measure explains the pensive countenance of Mr. Theodore B. Willis. But it does not explain to eminent Republicans the words of Senator Hiscock at the Union League Club just after the Presidential battle. At the meeting of the silk stocking Republicans, called at that time by the Hon. Warner Miller to boom himself for a Cabinet place, Senator Hiscock generously attended and made a speech. He had bitter words for the Mugwumps—"the men who deserted the Republican party in its hour of peril, and who accomplished its defeat in 1884." Then the Senator presented a sublime picture of confidence in the fate of the Mugwumps under President Harrison. He jammed his hands deep into the pockets of his dress trousers, and strolled up and down the platform, nodding his head at his audience, as he concluded: "And I want to say right here that the Administration just elected will not be controlled one step by these theorists and traitors." It should be said for Col. Burt that he still insists that he is a Mugwump. In this respect he has not followed the course of other Mugwumps in the Custom House. They quickly announced their allegiance to the Republican party when Mr. Cleveland was defeated. The security of Col. Burt for another year has provoked swear words from the New York Republicans and paeans of joy from the Democrats. The Democrats say that President Harrison is very welcome to Col. Burt and his services.

The Hon. Thomas Collier Platt will be in New York on Aug. 1.

Senator Hiscock and all the other high-perch Republicans in the state say they haven't the faintest notion when the President is to appoint a successor to Surveyor Beattie. They agree that Mr. George W. Lyon is to have the place, but the President refuses to say when he will make the appointment. There are some who profess to believe that the chances of Surveyor will not be made for some time. This, though, is only conjecture. The President smiles at the New York visitors, and says he is fully acquainted with the situation in New York, and that is all they can get out of him.

That notorious Executive Committee of Kings county Republicans adjourned last week subject to the call of the Chair. The next day they rushed to the Custom House to present Col. Erhardt with a list of their demands. The list is one of the curiosities of modern political times. It covers most of the last places outside of the Chinese regulations. There never was a list like that once on the face of the earth. Col. Erhardt says he isn't talking much about Brooklyn just now. It's too hot. It comes from excellent sour as that the Brooklynites are now almost convinced that they made the mistake in the danger in delay in giving them recognition. It is now said, though, that the swell Republicans of Kings county who have the confidence of Mr. Hiscock, Mr. Platt, and Secretary Tracy are disposed to await Col. Erhardt's convenience.

It is stated that Col. Erhardt will insist to the Chinese Commissioners that the chief clerkships of the divisions belong as much to his personal staff as the deputy collectors, and that they should be removed from the influences of the Chinese regulations. Col. Erhardt declines to discuss such matters, but it is known that Mr. Roosevelt, Judge Lyman, and Mr. Thompson are expected to be called upon to give a decision in the matter. Gov. Thompson, it is asserted, will oppose Col. Erhardt but Mr. Roosevelt and Judge Lyman seem to favor him. They apparently feel that the Collector of the Port should have latitude where the selection of his personal staff is concerned.

Up to date none of the Hon. John James O'Brien's lieutenants has appeared as a claimant of Cede at Saranac. There are some funny people who say they would be intensely interested if Mr. O'Brien, Mr. Brooks, Mr. Kraus, and Mr. Rourke went to the Custom House and asked Col. Erhardt to receive them.

It is all over the Custom House that Senator Hiscock and Franklin Woodruff have had a still quarrel. Senator Hiscock, it is said, asserts that Mr. Woodruff did not exercise due discretion in handling certain information given to him by the Senator, and Mr. Woodruff on the other hand is fully convinced that the Senator treated him rudely. The quarrel came when Senator Hiscock flatly told Mr. Woodruff that he would "have nothing to do with Mr. Willis." This was in reply to Mr. Woodruff's remark to the Senator that Mr. Platt had not been sincere in his support of Mr. Willis for Surveyor of the Port. Senator Hiscock said the statement was not true, and closed the conversation with the remark concerning his own feelings. If anybody knocked out Mr. Willis for the place it was Senator Evarts, according to the best information.

Secretary Windom has reversed Secretary Fairchild's decision as to the travelling expenses of the special Treasury agents and in so doing has recognized the claims of palace carporters. Under Mr. Fairchild's decision the Treasury Department paid the expenses of the agents only on ordinary trains and by ordinary cars. It would not reimburse the agents for tips to servants. If the agents travelled on limited express trains, the difference in the fare was paid by them, as well as the tips to the porters and expressmen. Mr. Windom decides that the agents can travel on the limited trains, and give "reasonable tips" to railroad and other porters.

The Treasury agents will now endeavor to have the thirty days' vacation with pay restored to them. Under Mr. Fairchild the custom was abolished.

TRYING CHIMES IN THE CATHEDRAL.

They Must be Hung Very High, and it may be will Sound Too Faintly.

The chimes which many attendants upon the cathedral thought would ring from the north tower yesterday morning were not in place. They will arrive, Father Lavelle says, early this week, and will probably be in place by Wednesday. These chimes are not a purchase by the cathedral. They are merely a set of four in E flat which have been hired from Clinton Meneely of Troy to experiment with. They will remain in the tower ab ut a month and will then be sent back to their owner. The smallest bell, the heaviest weighs 3,000 pounds, and the others 1,500, 1,000, and 600.

As soon as the stories were completed there was a good deal of talk about chimes, and a number of wealthy attendants at the cathedral volunteered to be responsible for the purchase of chimes which would do honor to the finest pieces of ecclesiastical architecture in the country. An order of expert was sought and the cathedral people were considerably dismayed when expert opinion declared that chimes would be of no value in the cathedral on account of the great height at which they would have to be swung. Chimes are seldom hung higher than ninety feet, and at this height only the very best chimes are effective in a windy city. The tower point possible to hang the bells in the cathedral was found to be 160 feet from the street. The effect at this height, it was declared, would be insignificant. Still there was no question of chimes having been hung that high and the opinion was only conjectural after all. So it has been decided to hire some bells, swing them in the north tower, and see what their effect would be. This is now about to be done. If it is found that they are effective at that height a fine a set of bells as can be made will be ordered.

The New Policeman Got the Evidence.

Superintendent Murray's recent order has stirred up the police to some effort at enforcing the laws against pool selling. In a number of recent cases, however, the arrests have been a farce, for the reason that the officers making the arrest did not secure the proper evidence. Yesterday, however, Policeman McCarthy of the Fifteenth precinct, a new man, had three of the pool sellers at Jefferson Market Court. They were Harry Shepherd, Isaac Henderson, and Lelaue Price. McCarthy told Judge Smith that he informed Shepherd and Henderson at 2 P. M. Saturday that he wanted to be on the horse inverwick, that they took the money and receipted the bet in the presence of Price, and he produced the written record. Judge Smith held the prisoners for trial in $500 bail and they were locked up, having no bondsmen.

He Walked Into the Net

Policeman Snyder of the Eighth precinct made complaint before Justice Smith yesterday that George A. Gage had violated the Excise law by selling him a glass of liquor at 303 Washington on Sunday. Gage pleaded that he was only a visitor to the place and had only come behind the bar in the absence of the bartender. The bartender was present and was called upon to corroborate Gage's story, which he did.

"Do you mean to say that you authorized this man to sell in your absence?" asked the Justice.

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I will let Gage go and take a complaint against you," said the Judge. And he did so, to the great chagrin of Fitzgerald.

In the Track of the Great Flood.

The great flood of May 31 in Pennsylvania, followed the line of the Pennsylvania Railroad for 61 miles. The scene of its greatest destruction is between Conemaugh and Johnstown, and the terrible extent of the devastation can well be seen from the windows of a passing train. The New York and Chicago Limited leaves New York at 9 A. M., the Western Express at 9:40 P. M., and the Pacific Express at 8 P. M., passing through the region by daylight, and afford a complete view of the ravages of the waters.—Adv.

THE TWENTY-THIRD AT PEEKSKILL.

How the Boys Spent Their First Sunday in Camp.

PEEKSKILL CAMP, July 14.—The sun has cleared the mists out of the valleys, dried the ground, and bleached the mildewed spots from the tents. He made it hot this morning, and then started a cooling northwest breeze. What work there was to do was done at once, in preparation for a day of rest or recreation. Passes were issued in plenty, and long before the time for divine service dozens of active soldier lads were plunging into the waters of the Hudson. A good many forgot the rule prohibiting bathing in the creek, and disported in its shallower waters.

Chaplain Robert R. Meredith was unable to be in camp, and his place was filled by the Rev. J. W. Malcolm of the Park Congregational Church, Brooklyn. He stood behind a pulpit of flag-draped drums on Flirtation Bluff, just beside Gen. Porter's tent. Col. Partridge and a number of his officers were in the congregation. They sat nearest the edge of the bluff. On the other side were Wilson's artillerymen.

"I hoped to have a fresh cartridge to explode at you upon this occasion," said the Rev. Mr. Malcolm, "and it is not my fault that I have not. You must put the blame on the clerk of the weather. It was too hot. I have turned over the barrel, and have taken an old one out of the bottom. My text is: 'What I have written I have written.'"

Bandmaster Fish had half the Twenty-third Regiment band on, with selected instruments, to furnish the music. His selections for the opening and closing pieces were Volkman's "Andante from Op. 1 Sonata" and Handel's "The Heavens are Telling." No one left the grounds until the last notes of the postlude died away.

The amateur photographer is already at work. Just now many there are of him in the Twenty-third. It is hard to tell. He caught several interesting pictures to-day. One was a portrait of the jolly man, Mellride, of the Battery squad, doing sentry duty.

The photographer also got a fine picture of the High and Dry Club of Company H. It has forty-one members. They are all twins, and their family resemblance is easily noticed in the picture.

Col. McCrath took all the First Sergeants and Quartermaster Sergeants to the battery camp this afternoon to show them just how the whole camp must look at inspection to-morrow. Lots of visitors began to arrive before dress parade to-night. It was a pretty ceremony. Among those who were here to-day was ex-Capt. Charles E. Truslow of Company B.

JOE FOGARTY BURIED.

He Declined to See a Priest and his Remains Went to Greenwood, Not Calvary.

The body of Joe Fogarty, assistant keeper of the Morgue, was interred yesterday in the plot at Greenwood owned by his wife. At least 300 persons crowded into the little apartment at 349 East Thirtieth street, in which he had lived, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. They had expected to witness the funeral service, but there was none. Joe came of a Roman Catholic family, and it was supposed by his friends that he would be buried in Calvary. His widow is a Protestant. On Thursday Mr. Ricard, an old attendant at Bellevue, and one of Joe's friends, asked Father Dealey of the Carmelite Fathers to sign a certificate setting forth that Joe had been a good Catholic during his lifetime and was therefore entitled to burial in Calvary. Father Dealey, although a regular attendant upon Bellevue patients, had never seen or heard of Fogarty. He inquired, as his duty compelled him to do, whether any priest had administered the last rites of the Church to him. Dr. Williams, who attended Fogarty, was appealed to.

"No," he replied. "I asked him whether he wanted a priest, and he replied that he did not. Of course I couldn't force one on him."

Father Dealey said that under those circumstances he could not sign the certificate. No one told him that Joe had been a Catholic, and he heard nothing further of the matter. He said yesterday that if he had been assured that Joe had attended mass and had otherwise shown his adherence to the Church, it would have made a difference. Sometimes, he said, good Catholics would refuse to see priests in their last moments because they did not think that they were dying.

Thirty-two carriages followed Joe's body to its last resting place in Greenwood. Many of his comrades at the hospital and many outside friends went along. There were no religious services.

DEATH IN THE WATER.

Absolute Poison in Nearly Every American City and Town—What Will Be the Result Before the End of Summer?

"What did you find?"

"Almost everything; it was just reeking with poison."

The above remark was made by a prominent scientist to the Board of Health Officer just after examining a drop of Croton (New York) water through the microscope. The water of nearly every city in America is filled with poison. It is caused by decaying matter and animal life. What is the result? A fearful increase of sickness and death, both among children and grown people. The papers are filled with accounts of it. Millions upon millions of germs of fever, cholera morbus, and contagion are in every swallow of water.

But people say:

"What can we do, stop drinking?"

"No."

"Resort to stimulants?"

"No. Kill the germs in the water and before they can come into the body. Three drops of Perry Davis's Pain Killer poured into a glass of water before drinking will kill the germs and make the most poisonous water pure and healthy. The best medical talent in the land have asserted this for years, and the experience of every man and woman who has tried it proves it.

Travellers through the jungles of India drink the swamp water even though it is filled with slime and covered with scum, but they invariably purify it by adding Pain Killer. Stanley, the African explorer, never undertakes a journey without a plentiful supply of "Bangala," as the natives call Pain-Killer. If this grand medicine is so effective in regions where death lurks on every side, where it reeks in every pool, does it not stand to reason that we can safely meet the dangers of our own drinking water by its careful use? It is an absolute cure for cholera morbus in its worst forms, but how much better it is to prevent disease than to wait for its approach. By keeping this remedy constantly on hand the dangers of the summer can be avoided and health positively preserved.
