TUESDAY, July 30.

To-day's stock market showed considerable stamina. Its movements indicated an increase of anxiety on the part of the short element, although the dealings gained but little, and the character of the trading did not widen. It is satisfactory, however, to discover some evidence that the controlling bull powers seem satisfied that the recent sellers of stocks have overdone their work and are preparing to take advantage thereof. The short selling of the morning based on the large Boston failure was not sufficient to account for the later change in sentiment. Had not an important influence been exerted there would have been less support to values at the start, and the subsequent tendencies of prices would have probably been checked. It was natural that the bears should have assailed Reading with vigor, so long as they had resolved to interpret the Boston suspension as unfavorable to stocks, for they were helped by other vague unfavorable rumors concerning the property, which, however, received no confirmation. On transactions which ranked first in point of activity Reading was broken ¾ ⅌ cent. It closed with a net gain of ¾ ⅌ cent. While third in the order of business, Atchison was also an attractive object of assault; it fell from 36¾ to 35¾, and quickly rallied to 36¾, last night's closing price. St. Paul, which in point of activity followed Reading, was depressed only a small fraction; it rallied from 69¾ to 70¾@70¾. All the Granger group was strong, and Chicago and Northwest, with particular buoyancy in the late dealings, closed 1⅜ ⅌ cent. higher. Missouri Pacific was also exceptional in gaining over 1 ⅌ cent. net. The Chesapeake and Ohio stocks made sharp advances, while their allied group—the Big Four stocks—halted somewhat.

Outside of the three leaders of the list the business was small and fairly well distributed. The gains of the day were in nowise due to what is popularly called good news. The recent experience of the short interest has been instructive to this extent: it has shown to them the difficulty of dislodging actual stocks on bad news, rumors of bad news, or falsehoods. Owners of stocks are content to wait for the expression of the coming large crop movement upon the already increasing volume of railroad earnings. The market closed firm. The bull leaders have seemed disposed recently to trifle with their advantage, but they are in a position, if they wish, further to increase it.
