THE GERMAN CLUB'S HOME.

A HANDSOME STRUCTURE IN WEST FIFTY-NINTH STREET.

Laying the Corner Stone—President Motz's Review of the History of the Oldest German Club in the United States.

A company of about fifty good-looking gray-haired young men and some whose hairs were not gray gathered on a lot of rough planks laid over the foundations of a new building in Fifty-ninth street, just west of Sixth avenue, between 3 and 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Most of them were members of the German Club, and were there to lay the corner stone of what is to be the club's new home. It was a snapping cold afternoon for most people, but these gentlemen were of the substantial sort who consider such air only bracing.

The corner stone, a great piece of Ohio white limestone, had a rectangular cavity in the under side. In a shanty near by a tinsmith had a copper box, in which members of the Building Committee placed current coins, current paper money, the morning papers of the day, a list of the members of the Building Committee, and a printed copy of the speech which President Motz had prepared for the occasion. This box was soldered up tight and wedged into the cavity in the stone. Then the stone was lowered into position. President Motz assisting by hitting it three rans with a maul after it had been seated. Then he climbed on an elevated part of the foundation and the members gathered about him. He said:

"It was a happy thought to have the laying of our corner stone on this the forty-seventh anniversary of the organization of our verein. Our records show that on Dec. 4, 1842, twelve gentlemen assembled at 76 Broad street, where a resolution to form a social club and obtain rooms for its exclusive use was passed, together with such rules for its government as were necessary. The club flourished from its inception. In 1848 the entire house at 127 Chambers street was taken. In 1853 the club moved to 104 Fourth avenue, and a few years later it was found necessary to take the adjoining house, 106, as well.

"The removal to the present quarters of the club, 13, 15, and 17 West Twenty-fourth street, was effected in 1874, although at that time only two houses were taken. In taking the three houses we thought we had arranged for ample accommodation for a long time to come. In the course of years, however, it became apparent that the unit created among the Germans abroad through the restoration of the German Empire would also induce closer ties of fellowship and appreciation among the Germans here. And so it happened. Other German social clubs met this altered state of circumstances by erecting commodious buildings of their own up town. We waited patiently, until about a year ago, when we had to declare either for or against renewal of the lease contracts from May 1, 1891. A number of members then suggested the propriety of moving up town and erecting a home of our own. The idea found such general approval that we have since been going on to provide means, until we have now reached this present happy occasion, which, indeed, is one for congratulation and sincere thankfulness."

The society owns six lots, three on Fifty-ninth street and three on Fifty-eighth street. They are thus assured of good light and air in the rear as well as in front of the house. The house will front on Fifty-ninth street and the Park, beginning 125 feet west of Sixth avenue. It will have a sub-cellar and a basement, and will be five stories high above ground. The lower and the second story will be devoted to club uses. Above that will be apartments, single rooms, and servants' quarters.

The main floor is five feet above the sidewalk. It contains reading, reception, and card rooms, and a large dining hall, with two private dining rooms adjoining, which are so arranged as to be thrown into one large hall on festive occasions. All the rooms on the main floor, including the hall, open into each other to the best advantage for receptions, &c. The main hall is finished in hard wood, with a wainscoting of marble, and a floor of marble mosaic. The other rooms on the first floor will be finished in hard wood after special designs. The cornices and ceilings of the floor will be elaborate. The façade of the building is in the Italian renaissance style, and is constructed of buff Indiana limestone, the architecture being massive through the basement and first story, and lighter in character above, with a central feature in these upper stories of a loggia, surmounted by the arms of the club, and also of the city and of the State of New York, elaborately carved in stone. The fifth story is crowned by a projecting and richly carved modillion cornice and balustrade constructed of sheet metal. Messrs. Mead and White are the architects. The officers of the club are: Ferdinand Motz, President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; E. Wendt, Treasurer; Oscar Passavant, Secretary.

The club membership has always been composed of the best elements of German society, with a few scattering members from other nationalities, but all speaking the German language. Social intercourse is the sole object of the club. It is the oldest German club in the country. The list of members includes G. Ammerk, Count Arco, the German Minister at Washington; F. A. Von Bernuth, G. Bertschmann, Swiss Consul at New York; Phil Bissinger, F. De Bary, L. F. Dommerich, Theo. Dreier, H. W. O. Edye, A. Engler, A. Feigel, German Consul-General at New York; G. Gossler, Ingfried Graner, Karl Hauseh, Theo. A. Havemeyer, austrian Consul-General at New York; Count Kessler, H. R. Kunhardt, C. B. Marheinecke, German Consul at New York; K. Meissner, W. Mertens, Anton Meyer, George H. Moller, F. Muller, E. Oelbermann, Herman Oelrichs, Carl Otto Peters, Dr. Anton Von Palitschek, Austrian Consul at New York; John F. Punke, ex-Gov. Salomon, William Schall, G. Schirmer, Ch. F. Schmidt, R. A. Schnabel, William Steinway, Baron C. Von Thomsen, William Toel, George F. Victor, Henry Villard, Willard P. Ward, Dr. L. Weber, Hugo Wesendonck, and L. Windmuller.

There was a dinner at the club house in Twenty-fourth street last night in honor of the event.

A Connecticut Horse Thief Captured.

HARTFORD, Dec. 4.—The third of the gang of horse thieves which has been infesting northern and central Connecticut was captured last night by Officer Warren of Putnam. Six years ago Lewis Staples engaged to work for W. J. Bartholomew, a Pomfret milkman. He said he had been in State prison, but wished to turn over a new leaf. He worked along well until last spring, when he disappeared. Last evening he went to his old place and took a horse and carriage, hitched up, and drove off. Word was sent immediately to Putnam. At about 10 P. M. Officer Warren saw a man driving a jaded horse past the Post Office. The driver asked the way to Chepacet, R. I., and drove hurriedly on. Warren recognized the team, and gave chase on foot. He overtook it, jumped on behind, and asked the stranger to give him a ride. The latter acquiesced. Warren rode a short distance, until he had recovered his breath, then, jumping out, he grabbed the horse by the bits, and asked the driver where he got him.

"In Uxbridge, blass," was the reply, "and you let go or I will blow your brains out."

Warren drew his revolver and commanded the thief to throw up his hands or he would fire. He complied, and in this position the pair travelled through the streets to Carpenter's stables, Warren leading the horse with one hand and pointing his revolver with the other. Staples was taken to the lockup. This morning Justice Chesebro held him in the sum of $2,000. He was taken to Willimantic for trial.

Recovering Money Obtained Under Threat.

ALBANY, Dec. 4.—The judgment in the suit of $3,696,67, in favor of Helen D. Adams, against the Irving National Bank of New York, will stand, as the Court of Appeals has just handed down a decision affirming the judgment of the lower courts. The plaintiff is the wife of Jay L. Adams, who became bankrupt in 1878. The bank was a creditor, and after receiving its dividend of 50 per cent. had a remaining claim against the estate of Adams for $8,000. In the examination of the bankruptcy case it was shown that Adams had drawn $3,696 from his bank just prior to his failure to meet obligations. This was for the purpose of paying his sister-in-law, a poor woman. Subsequently Adams and his wife started for Europe, when an agent of the Irving Bank appeared, and, under threat of arresting her husband, frightened her into paying over $2,000, which she took from her father's estate. The suit was to recover the money obtained through fear.

An Insurance Rate War in Newark Predicted.

The Association of Fire Underwriters of Newark is troubled, because of the inability of the members to agree. A year ago the firm of Klotz, Ballard & Canon withdrew from the Board, alleging that it did not inflict severe punishment for violation of the prescribed rates of insurance. The insurance companies which this firm represented were among the strongest in this country, and they supported their agents. Other agents became dissatisfied with the Board and felt that the lines should be tightened and condign punishment meted out to members breaking rates. Because an agreement could not be reached the association was dissolved. It is said there will now be a great slashing of rates in Newark.

Ingalls Wants to Go to Russia.

WICHITA, Kas., Dec. 3.—A secret meeting of a dozen leading Republican politicians was held here last night, and the report goes out quietly that Senator Ingalls has reached the conclusion that he would rather take his chances on getting the appointment of Minister to Russia than make another fight for the senate. The meeting was called to consider the proposition and agree to urge on Ingalls such a step, giving a green land for Senator next year. It is said if he takes that line he will make his wants known to the administration before long.

ERRING POSTMASTERS.

Twelve Fined $50 and Costs Each for the Illegal Sale of Stamps.

HARTFORD, Dec. 4.—A comical scene was presented at the opening of the December term of the United States District Court in this city yesterday. From twenty to twenty-five country Postmasters were on hand. They had been arrested at various times during the past four months for violating the United States Postal laws. They sold postage stamps or stamped envelopes on credit to the New York firm of Palliser, Palliser & Co. In some instances, in making returns to the authorities at Washington, they advanced from their own pockets the amount due from the New York firm, and in other instances they put it down as cash on hand, although they had not received it. They came into court yesterday like a lot of erring schoolboys waiting to be disciplined. None of them entered any defence. A few cases were continued, in others no plea was entered, and in others a plea of nolo contendere was made.

Judge Shipman said that there was no course open to him except to fine them all. They had clearly done wrong. Then he smiled benignantly upon them and fined each $50 and costs, amounting in most cases to about $110. This is the minimum penalty. They all took their medicine like little men, and kept Clerk Marvin busy making change until his desk looked like a counting house. Their remarks were very curious. One man inquired if cigars for the officer who arrested him ought to go in as "costs." Another wanted to know if he could n't make the Pallises pay him for stamps they had.

"I sold 'em," he lamented, "just $5 wuth uv stamps. They hain't paid me, an' now you follers charge me a hundred cuz they hain't paid."

Still a third came into the court room, and, walking up to the reporter's table in a bashful manner, said:

"Haow much is th' tax?"

"Five hundred dollars," was the prompt reply, "and you may pay me."

The aged countryman took offense, and threatened to clean out the court room. A fourth man having paid his fine started to go out. He was called back by a reporter, who asked him what his name was. He gave it and inquired, meekly, "Ez there anything more you want uv me?" He was told that he could go, but that it mustn't occur again.

The names of the erring Postmasters are: James L. Downs of Columbia, L. B. Booth of Newtown, Samuel H. Platt of Saybrook, Frank E. Hull of South Coventry, William S. Ball of Gardner's Lake, Daniel T. Fuller of Liberty Hill, Daniel Gillette of Romford, Frederick D. Allen of South Windsor, S. O. Goodwin of East Hartford, Erastus Kilbourne of Newington, George C. Carr of Winthrop, and George H. Loomis of Chestnut Hill. About a dozen more are to be disciplined.

CROWDED PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Provision to be Made for Pupils Who Can't Find Room Now—Ward Trustees Elected.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Education yesterday afternoon the crowded condition of many of the public schools came up for discussion, and it was moved that a committee of three Commissioners be appointed to con er with the Ward Trustees to devise plans for instruction and hiring of new buildings for such pupils as are crowded out of the public schools.

These Ward Trustees were elected for the full term of five years from Jan. 1, 1890:

The trustees of the Normal College held a special meeting in the hall of the Board of Education, and appointed Ella Keith, Miriam L. Taylor, and Mary Belle Coles to fill the vacancies caused in the training school department of the Normal College, by the resignation of Fannie L. Butler, Martha F. Miller, and Emma A. Newman. On a resolution offered by Trustee Mary Hunter, six free scholarships in kindergartening were established, to be conferred as prizes for superior excellence in examinations upon the theory and practice of teaching.

The Homeless Eighth Regiment.

The Eighth Regiment will hold their annual inspection in their new armory at Ninety-fourth street and Park avenue to-night. The armory is not finished yet, neither has it been accepted by the city, but as the Eighth must be inspected to have its report included in this year's Adjutant-General's report, the contractor said that they might occupy the armory for Wednesday night. It will be cold work, for no fires can be started in the building.

The Eighth has been without shelter since August. It had the rink at 67th street and Lexington avenue, and the officers held their meetings in a beer saloon across the way, but that now has been done away with. The work of lighting the building, it is expected, will be finished by Jan. 1. Then the furniture men will take hold, and it will take up a month or so. When the Eighth does get in Col. Scott says that they will have a high old time with their friends.

Want a Christmas on Ward's Island.

Emigration Commissioner Stephenson wants the immigrant children on Ward's Island to have a Christmas festival this year as usual, and a few days ago he wrote to Secretary Windom for permission to spend $100 of the Commission's appropriation to give the festival. The Commission received a letter from Secretary Windom yesterday afternoon, setting forth that he could not grant the request, as the law making the Commission's appropriation did not contemplate such an expenditure.

Commissioner Stephenson sent out an appeal to the public after the receipt of the letter from Washington, asking that those interested in the children send contributions to Superintendent Maple at Ward's Island to buy a Christmas spread. Commissioner Stephenson said he hoped that $150 would be contributed between now and Christmas eve.
