NEW YORK, 6; CINCINNATI (N. L.), 4.

CINCINNATI, May 21.—Ten sad red legs remained anchored on the bases at League Park this afternoon, waiting for the hits that failed to come. The expression upon the face of President Day as he gazed upon the 1,924 spectators from the directors' box was one of peace and good will. Young Sharrott was the hero of the afternoon. When hits were needed strike outs generally came out of the little box. Sharp fielding alone kept the visitors' score down. They batted the war horse all over the lot. For the first few moments after Sharrott walked into the box he seemed unable to locate the plate, and both McPhee and Latham posed until Umpire Hurst bade them go to first on balls.

Marr went up with an order in his pocket to sacrifice. There may be a few poor souls who believe that Lefty is an adept in that line. He waited till strikes had been called on him, and then made a feeble and sad attempt to bunt the next good one. He missed it by a foot, and sat down. Holliday's sharp grounder was stopped by Bassett. It was a star play, and in making it the third baseman fell to his knees. While in that position he threw the ball to Richardson in time to cut Latham. Gore took Slattery's fly, and the wildness of Sharrott cost nothing.

The "old hoss" tantalized Gore. He put up three wide balls, and then made him hit a good one. It looked like a fair fly, but Holliday, after a fine run, got under it. Radbourne was cheered when he got two strikes on Richardson, but the little gentleman from Elmira put in his order for a two-bagger, and sprinted to second on a fine drive to left.

Tiernan followed with another to centre, and Daniel lost no time in getting home. Connor was sent to first, but Glasscock's hit went bounding toward Smith, who gathered it in on the run and stepped on second, and threw to first for a double play.

There was an event in the second which sent a chill down the spinal column of every Kentuckian present. Col. Robert Blue Grass Clarke made his first hit of the year. It was a nice, clean, well-behaved drive, but as two men were out and Radbourne immediately made three motions in the air with his bat, it was as barren of results as seed planted in a stone quarry. The visitors did better. A bow-legged stop by Brother Smith of O'Rourke's hard grounder saved the barrister's life, and he was assisted home by Bassett, who tried to sacrifice and scratched out a hit. Clarke's tap, and Shyer Otis's entire field fly. Bassett stamped into death at the plate on Gore's little pounce to Latham.

When "Bid" McPhee led off in the third with a sharp hit, a fat man over in the terrace arose, pulled off his coat, and announced in a loud tone of voice that trouble was about to begin. Sheridan merrily smiled a Sixteen smile, and fooled Capt. Latham in striking out. McPhee bade farewell to Connor and sped to second, but Richardson had the ball there ready to show him the trade-mark. He arrived; there was no chance even for a slide. Who said the New Yorks had no catchers? demanded the fat man. It was a great throw of Clarke's, true as a shot from Fogarty's rifle. Connor planted a double in the outfield in the third, and in the wild scramble to reach it Smith and Holliday collided. Smith sent a low fly to centre, which Gore reached, but he was travelling too fast, and got himself tangled up with Mother Earth. In the skirmish he dropped the ball. Clark was hit with the ball. While Connor was putting Radbourne out of harm's way Reilly scored. Reilly made the jaunt around in the fourth. He leaned out his bat in order to reach Bassett. After Slattery had died on a fly, Sharrott posed himself to a single in the fifth, and he took his time while Richardson was scattering dust on his great rush around on a solid hit to deep centre. Latham had his wits about him in the seventh when he dashed home from second on Slattery's fielder out. Holliday followed a hit out away from Holliday in the same inning, and he easily scored. His jun and another was afterward earned on Tiernan's single, a sacrifice, and Glascock's double. The score:

PITTSBURGH, 7; BROOKLYN, 4.

PITTSBURGH, May 21.—Just score another for us. It was a well-observed victory, and it may be noted as a matter of history that sound, hard hitting, just at a stage when it was needed, did the damage. Every day the fact is being emphasized that, while brilliant fielding is a very nice and essential thing, hard slugging is the element that will drive victory into the ranks of the enemy. This great thing of banging the ball out, or, as Pete Browning would say, "lining 'em out," told its tale again to-day in very loud tones. The aggregation of sluggers—now known as the Pittsburghs are able at any stage to light into any very best of pitchers and knock the covers off a dozen balls in one inning. This afternoon they let loose on such a smooth article as Robert Caruthers, and he was almost knocked out of sight in a very short space of time. Five hard cracks in rapid succession was what Bobby had to stand.

There have been times when Robert, with all his Parisian prestige, could keep the best of people guessing when he was in the box, but to-day he fell among J. Palmer's Philistines, and they left very little gilt on him. The contest was a hard one, despite the slugging of the home players. The weather was cold in fact, bad enough to keep the attendance down to about 900. At one time it looked as if there would not be a game at all, so threatening was the weather. The grounds, too, were in a bad condition, and fielding and base running were very difficult things to do. Indeed, pools of water were numerous in the outfield, and the mud was about ankle deep around the diamond.

Carroll proved himself a remarkably good mud horse, as he made a brilliant catch of a fly by plunging into a deep pool of water. Fred's heroic effort was cheered to the echo, and he deserved all the applause he got, because, had he failed to catch the fly, the result would certainly have been very disastrous. King did fairly well, but at stages he was hit very freely, and he also gave more bases on balls than is his wont. He was well supported, as the score and summary will show. The visitors made a plucky uphill fight of it, and not till their last man was out did their hopes vanish. They are a good lot of players, and certainly will knock some people out before the season is over. They are good mud horses, and they played to-day a game without an error. The score:

CHICAGO, May 21.—The 1,500 persons who took chances on the cloudy weather to-day were amply repaid by seeing a very exciting contest, in which a safe hit or an error by the opposite side would have won or lost the game for either team. Esper pitched five innings for the visitors and gave way to Gleason. The latter held Chicago down till the thirteenth inning, when a base on balls, a single, and two doubles won the game. The score:

Base Ball Players to Play Water Polo.

The game of water polo is becoming popular in Pittsburgh, so much so that some of the players of the Pittsburgh base ball team have organized themselves together for the purpose of having some sport in this direction. They are Sharsher, Bailey, Beckley, Fields, Fryer, and Baldwin. They have challenged the water polo team of the Pittsburgh Natatorium to play a match game. The challenge has been accepted, and the contest will come off shortly.

THE COLLEGE BASE BALL MUDDLE.

Harvard's Refusal to Play is a Great Disappointment.

Capt. Calhoun of the Yale College base ball team was in a very amiable and pleasant mood after his team had applied so disastrous a defeat to the Crescents at Eastern Park, but the victory did not work on him to such an extent that he was willing to talk on Yale's chances for defeating Princeton in the series of games between them to commence to-morrow at New Haven. In a talk with a Sun reporter he said:

"As Captain of the Yale team I have no public opinion. Of course, I have an idea of how the series may possibly turn out, but the up-to-date many conditions connected with base ball that are likely to come up at almost any moment and render the chances of victory for one team or another useless. A player may get injured, or something else may occur entirely unlooked for. The Princeton team is, this year, very strong. We all recognize this fact. It will take good, steady playing to defeat them. All I can say, in conclusion, is that Yale will, as ever, put forth her best endeavors to win the intercollegiate championship."

Capt. Calhoun deplored Harvard's stand in refusing to play Princeton, as it places Yale in rather a peculiar position. "We tried," said he "to bring about the old condition of affairs in having Harvard, Princeton, and Yale contest for the championship, but Harvard prevented it."

BOSTON, May 21.—"The present condition of affairs regarding the base ball interests of Yale, Princeton, and Harvard," said one member of the Harvard Advisory Committee to-day, "will have no effect on athletic contests between Yale and Harvard. They will take place just the same as ever. The explanation of the base ball difficulty is that Harvard has originally taken the position that she did not wish to go into a league with other colleges, but a young man, Capt. Dean, who held some position on the base ball team, made the mistake of conferring with some young men from Yale and making appointments for games for the future which he was not authorized to make. He then came back to Cambridge and announced that he had committed Harvard to these engagements. This placed the Advisory Committee in an embarrassing position. Some Harvard men think that Yale's position is correct, and others do not. It is a debatable question of college ethics."
