FAST AND WINNING PLAY.

THE WORK OF THE NEW YORKS A DELIGHT TO SPECTATORS.

They Gave the Pittsburghs a Hard Beating—Brooklyn Thrashes Chicago—Boston, Louisville, Cincinnati, and Cleveland the Other Winners—Many Other Games.

For nearly two days New York cranks will revel in the delights incident to their team holding first place in the race. Of course Brooklyn divides the honor with us, and may take all of it on Monday, yet, no matter what may happen in the future, July 16 will remain a pleasant memory. It is not at all improbable that New York patrons are destined to enjoy the situation at greater length, for the Powers idea of the infusion of ginger seems to be a correct one, and there is ground for the belief that the youngsters who now represent the metropolis will not take kindly to defeat at any stage of the game. There is a prospect of keen enjoyment. Yesterday's games resulted:

New York, 13; Pittsburgh, 5.
Brooklyn, 9; Chicago, 2.
Boston, 8; St. Louis, 8.
Louisville, 8; Philadelphia, 8.
Cincinnati, 16; Baltimore, 5.
Cleveland, 6; Washington, 4.

NEW YORK, 13; PITTSBURGH, 5.

The reconstructed New Yorks appear to have some pretty well defined ideas as to the proper way of playing the national game of baseball. It may also be truthfully said that the 3,000 persons who saw Powers's men thrash the Pittsburghs yesterday afternoon, heartily approved the system on which the former are now proceeding. At least the enthusiastic manner in which they greeted the efforts of the lively young Gothamites seemed to indicate that the spectators appreciated that sort of thing. The New Yorks put up another fast fielding and base-running game, and in addition they hit the ball till Beckley and the other colleagues were weary and sad. That was a combination of playing the Pittsburghs could not withstand, and they were beaten most thoroughly. Ehret pitched three innings, and ten runs were scored off his delivery. Then the left-handed Smith was called in from the field, and he was rather effective. The New Yorks, however, got men across the plate in each of the first six innings, and came close to scoring in the remaining three innings. While the visitors did some rather yellowish fielding, still the fact that the New Yorks earned eight of their thirteen runs shows the character of their stick work. Rusie pitched five innings, and, with the exception of the third, was effective. He pitched good ball in spite of the fact that he was sick much of the time he was in the box. In the fifth he gave way to Crane, who finished the game in good style.

The field support of both Rusie and Crane was superb. Burke, Ewing, Fuller, and Doyle carrying off the honors. Burke's play was a sight to behold, and Fuller is charged with three errors his general work was of the first order. Doyle's work at third grows better each day. The base running of the New Yorks was again a feature that elicited the wildest applause. Nine stolen bases was their record. Just as soon as one of the lively youngsters got to first he hustled to second and third, and was ready to dash for the plate on the slightest provocation.

The New Yorks won the game in the very first inning. Burke started off with a base on balls, and as a result he came home on Davis's hit. Then H. Lyons hit to Ehret, who threw low to first. Burke promptly came home, and as the ball got past Buckley, Lyons ran to third on the error. He was standing there, when Tiernan hit the ball on the nose and sent it flying on a line into the Emporium. Donovan ran to the porch of the Emporium, but could not see the ball, and Tiernan was home before somebody threw the sphere out of the door. Ewing came next with a single to centre. Doyle hit a bounder that Ehret grabbed. The pitcher made another bad throw to first and Ewing scored. Doyle taking second. Then Richardson got a scratch single, on which Doyle came home. O'Rourke hit cleanly to right for a base. Richardson going to third. A passed ball put O'Rourke on second, and Rusie's out at first let Richardson home. Fuller's grounder was fumbled by Bierbauer, and O'Rourke scored the seventh run, which was all, as Burke on his second time at the bat hit a fly for Shugard, and Lyons went out at first.

The idea that they had seven runs on the blackboard did not seem to check the ambition of the young men. Ewing hit a high one to left in the third. Smith ran out, but the wind held the ball back, and it dropped before Smith could return. Ewing got three bases, and he scored on Doyle's good sacrifice fly to right. With one man out in the third, Fuller hit one to left that got so tangled up in the sun's rays Smith could not see it. Shorty took two bases, and H. Lyons's single sent him home. Lyons stole second, and scored on Ewing's bounder past short.

In the last half of the third the Pittsburghs did a little batting and their spirits revived in a measure. Ehret, Miller, Donovan, and Bierbauer hit good, clean singles in succession, and then, aided by a fumble and low throw by Fuller, yielded four runs. In the fourth a fumble of a hard grounder by Doyle, a base on balls, and a single by Donovan permitted Terry to cross the plate. At that point the Pittsburghs retire I from the run-getting business.

Elmer Smith faced the New York batters in the fourth. Singles by O'Rourke, Fuller, and Burke yielded a run. In the fifth, bases on balls to Tiernan and Ewing, a fumble by Farrell, and Richardson's sacrifice gave one. The last run was scored in the sixth on Fuller's clean double to right and Burke's single. There was some fear that the New Yorks would not be able to hold their victory, but their steady play soon dispelled all doubt. The score:

BROOKLYN, 9; CHICAGO, 2.

The attendance at Eastern Park yesterday was gentlyingly large. The Chicagos, as usual, could not hit safely, while Daly was hard enough to bring in runs. The game in detail is more interesting than a criticism would be.

The Chicagos began where they left off on Friday in the matter of heavy hitting. In the first inning Wilmot and Dahlen, with O'Brien, however, did better. He sent a nice one past Ward into centre field and got a base. Kran did even better still by knocking the ball into Daly's O'Brien's territory for two bases, and Dahlen scored. Then for several innings the Ansonites lost all their knowledge of how to hit the ball.

The Brooklyns went out without a man reaching first base in the initial inning; but the next time they came to the bat there was an agreeable change. Brouthers got his base by being hit by a pitched ball. O'Brien hit to Ryan. Then Daly came to the bat. The Tourist hit the ball and it sailed swiftly toward the left field fence, made an extra turn or two, and dropped out of sight on the other side. That meant a run for Brouthers and a home for Tom F. Daly.

In the next inning the Brooklyns had no consideration for Anson's feelings. Shoffner hit a fly ball to centre field. Ryan had the ball right in his hands; but he didn't want it. The muff awakened envious feelings in Billy Sullivan's baseball heart. Ward made a bluff of getting away from first, and Schriever fired the ball over Anson's head into right field. Ward went to second and made for third. He got there, for Luby dropped the ball when Decker returned it. John also made home on the error. Corcoran hit safe. Burns hit a hot one to Farrott. It was only a single, but it enabled Corcoran to score. In the next inning O'Brien led off with a hit to left, and Daly followed suit. Just as Daly hit the ball Darby stole second, and the steal enabled him to get home on the single.

In the fourth Anson went to first on balls. Connor struck out. Anson cavorted around on first and got real gay; but Stein put an end to it by throwing him out. Brouthers assisting in the operation. Neither team scored in the fifth, and Chicago didn't get there in the sixth and seventh. The sixth was a great triumph for Stein. In succession he struck out Wilmot and Dahlen. Then he sent Ryan and Anson to first on balls. But Stein was only risking false hopes in Anson's noble breast. The next thing Adrian knew Connor had struck out.

The Brooklyns jumped onto Luby in the sixth. Dan Brouthers made his little single; O'Brien thought it was about time for that John-to-second question to be of some use to Brooklyn. He accordingly sent the ball behind it, and a two-bagger resulted, and Brouthers had earned a run. Daly hit to Parrott. The ball bounded away, but it was an elegant stop. Parrott recovered the ball just as O'Brien slid for third. By an incredible spurt Parrott reached Darby before he could touch the bag. The spurt was a fitting sequel to the stop. The eighth gave both teams an opportunity to score. Beriver for Chicago awakened his team's interest in the game by driving out a three-bagger to right field. He got home because Daly dropped Dahlen's fly. Additional runs were prevented by a double play. The Brooklyns didn't need runs in their half of the eighth, but they took them just the same. Burns started in with a single, stole second, and reached third on Brouthers's hit. Daly sent both men home with a single to left. A fumble by Wilmot of Daly's hit, and a wild pitch, gave the Brooklyns their last run. The score:

NEW JERSEY A. C., 7; STATEN ISLAND A. C., 3.

It is doubtful whether any series of games played in the Amateur League in seasons pas have attracted so much attention as the championship games between the Staten Island A. C. and New Jersey A. C. Yesterday they came together for their fourth game. The first two games were won by the Staten Island players, and although the New Jersey men secured the game played at Bergen Point on the previous Saturday, nearly every one of the 5,206 spectators who were at West Brighton yesterday fully expected the home team to win.

The interest in this game was even more than in the previous contests. Both teams were on nearly equal terms for first place, while the Staten Island team were in the lead they had to win yesterday's game to retain their position. As both sides claimed that they had weak teams on the field little money was bet. The home team scored a run in the opening inning, and when the seventh inning had been commenced they had the lead by that small margin. During this part of the game the New Jersey team was hitting Van Zant all over the field, but luck favored the home team. In the eighth inning the visitors got their hits together and their runs resulted. Alderson's hit put a place in the last inning, but three hits and Rassford's error allowed the New Jersey men to run their total up to seven runs. Kraus made the only hit off Westervelt. Wild Caton of a line hit in the third inning was the star play of the game. The score:
