O'SULLIVAN WANTS HIS DIPLOMA

Reasons Prof. Chase Gives for Refusing to Countersign It.

Thomas C. O'Sullivan, chief recording clerk in the County Clerk's office, moved through Franklin Bartlett, before Justice Andrews of the Supreme Court, for a mandamus to compel Prof. George Chase, Dean of the New York Law School, to countersign a diploma issued to O'Sullivan by the State Board of Regents.

When the New York Law School was formed, after a split over the methods of teaching at Columbia Law School, O'Sullivan went with the new school, and in the examination for graduation last spring he secured an average of ninety per cent. in the studies required on the examination. He went to commencement last May and learned that Prof. Chase had declined to approve of his diploma. It appeared that O'Sullivan had had personal differences with Prof. Chase. The latter gave as the reason for his action that he did not consider O'Sullivan's moral character good enough.

Mr. Bartlett in the argument yesterday, said he had come 300 miles to argue the motion. He feared that if the Court did not interfere the action of Prof. Chase would be a blight on the career of O'Sullivan. He said that Prof. Chase was a scholastic man not in touch with the world. He compared him to Richard II., who had said, "The law is in my mouth, and not in the estates of England." O'Sullivan was a college graduate, and had earned a reputation as school superintendent at Cohoes. In 1888 he had been nominated for Lieutenant-Governor of the State on the Democratic ticket. He had assisted in securing the charter of the New York Law School.

The Board of Regents of the State, which controls the school and which had a representative present at the examination of O'Sullivan, had issued a diploma to him. The diploma should have been countersigned by Prof. Chase, who should not have allowed any personal feeling he had toward O'Sullivan to influence his action.

A. E. Boardman, in behalf of Prof. Chase, said his client believed that in countersigning the diploma he would necessarily bear witness to the good moral character of O'Sullivan, which he could not conscientiously do. O'Sullivan, as a student, had made misrepresentations to him. The Professor's action was grounded on O'Sullivan's untruthfulness. He had not discovered O'Sullivan's disqualification in this regard until after his examination. Mr. Boardman also made several technical objections to the writ.

It is understood that the differences between Prof. Chase and O'Sullivan arose over the question whether or not ex-Congressman M. Alfred Ely should deliver an address at commencement. O'Sullivan, as president of the graduating class, was in favor of inviting Mr. Ely, and said that many of his classmates were of the same opinion. Prof. Chase would not give his countenance, fearing, it was said, that the address would probably be of a political character.

Justice Andrews reserved his decision, and gave Mr. Bartlett until to-day to put in affidavits in rebuttal.

Summer Resorts.

New York.

ROUND LAKE SUMMER HOME.

This most charming resort was never better equipped to greet the public than this season of '92. Everything desirable in delightful grounds, extensive summer sitting-halls, spacious parlors and boarding houses; heat and gas for cooking; current; a beautiful lake for boating and bathing. The water is the purest and the drainage perfect. The social, intellectual and moral advantages unsurpassed at any resort.

During July and August various meetings and schools are held. Music School for two weeks. Music School for six weeks, National Seminary President's Convention, Music Festival, Carl Zerrahn, leader; Ministers' Institute, for all denominations, with Bishops Newman and Foster, Drs. Buckley, Bonnell, Strong, and other eminent men; Sunday School Assembly, with a capital program; and five speakers for three weeks; Camp Meeting the last week in August, led by Thomas Harrison. The best-equipped Museum of Art and Archaeology in New York. All these make Round Lake a most safe and pleasant and yet thoroughly instructive resort in the country. Send for journal and circulars to JOHN D. ROSE, Round Lake, Saratoga county, N.Y. For programs of Round Lake Academy, a boarding school, address the principal, Miss Clarity, and to JAMES E.
