TEBEAU'S TEAM SHUT OUT.

TWO HITS OFF RUSIE AND TWO RUNS FOR NEW YORK.

Ten Thousand Persons See a Great Game at the Polo Ground—Cincinnati Beats Brooklyn and the Bostons Strengthen Their Lead by Defeating the Pittsburghs—Philadelphia Downed Again by St. Louis—Baltimore and Chicago the Other Winners—Many Games Among Amateurs.

The New Yorks won a great victory from the Clevelands yesterday in the presence of 10,000 spectators. The visitors made but two hits off Rusie and were whitewashed. The Bostons played two games with the Pittsburghs, the first one resulting in a defeat for the Smoky City team and the second ending in a tie. The Cincinnatis won a ball from the Brooklyns, and are now in a position to pass Foutz's men on Monday. St. Louis outplayed the Philadelphias again, and the Baltimores toppled over the Louisvilles. It was an easy matter for the Chicagos to thrash the Washingtons, who are now completely demoralized. The results:

New York, 2; Cleveland 0.
Cincinnati, 4; Brooklyn, 3.
Boston, 13; Pittsburgh, 10.
Boston, 5; Pittsburgh, 5.
St. Louis, 3; Philadelphia, 2.
Baltimore, 7; Louisville, 3.
Chicago, 15; Washington, 4.

NEW YORK, 2; CLEVELAND, 0.

The most miserable set of men on earth last night were the members of the Cleveland baseball team. Naturally hard losers and always kickers from Kick-a-Too, it was unusually rough for them to suffer defeat at the hands of the New Yorks, but it was even worse to be shut out without a single run. There were fully 10,000 persons on the Polo ground when the struggle began, and there wasn't a moment when the cranks were not excited. Such cheering, shrieking, and hooting has seldom been heard at a ball game, but the fact that the naughty Clevelands were here to be taken into camp made the vast throng wildly enthusiastic as inning after inning was played without a run for Patrick Tebeau.

The principal obstacle in the way of the Cleveland players was that iron-armed wonder, Amos Rusie. The big Hoosier pitched his best game of the season. He hurled the ball over the plate so swiftly that the Clevelands couldn't see it, and as the game progressed he became speedier and more accurate, until he wound up the day by striking out none other than the great William Ewing, popularly known as Buck. So magnificent was the pitching of the Indiana boy that the visitors secured but two safe hits, and Burkett made them both, a single in the first inning and a double in the third. In addition to this Rusie gave two bases on balls and hit a batsman, but beyond these little blemishes his work was accuracy personified.

But let not the impression go abroad that Amos won the game single handed. The New Yorks played a grand game in the field. Connor, Ward, Fuller, and Davis formed an adamantine wall through which a cannon ball could not have forced its way. Then, too, the outfielders were right in line for every chance offered, and Milligan, with the exception of a low throw, caught splendidly. The nearest the Clevelands came to scoring was in the sixth inning, but Burkett was nipped at the plate in the very nick of time on a great double play by Ward, Connor, and Milligan. It was Tebeau's only chance to save his team from disgrace, but it didn't work worth a cent. In all his experience as a National League umpire John Gaffney never received such a roasting from spectators. He was manifestly wrong in two decisions against New York, and the crowd went simply wild with rage. In the sixth inning Stafford made a clean base hit to left field. Burkett ran in on the ball and took it on the short bound, close to the ground. Gaffney called Stafford out, claiming that the ball had been caught on the fly. In the seventh inning Burke made a hit, and when McKean threw Fuller's grounder wildly to Tebeau, Burke ran all the way to third, clearly beating Tebeau's throw to McGarr, who made two ineffectual attempts to touch Eddie. Although safe beyond a doubt, Gaffney called Burke out. After the game Burkett admitted to a SUN reporter that he slid over at Stafford's fly, and McGarr also admitted that he did not touch Burke. Johnny Ward had the honor of making the only runs for New York, which he did by careful batting, good base running, and a little head work. Tiernan, Davis, Burke, and Connor also batted well, although Young pitched what under ordinary circumstances would have been winning ball. The Clevelands kept up a continual grumbling and kicking. Before a ball had been pitched Tebeau wanted to have a ground rule agreed upon allowing a home run for a hit into the right field seats. Ward argued that there was nothing in the rules that would warrant such an arrangement, saying that a batter could take as many bases as he could get on a hit into the right field in question. Tebeau was unreasonably obstinate, and kicked until Gaffney told him to play ball. He finally consented with bad grace, while the big crowd hooted. Tebeau's move was a shrewd one, as there are a number of left-hand hitters on the Cleveland team, and they might have plunked the ball into the right field seats just at the wrong time. Ward saw through the scheme, however, and wouldn't yield.

Both sides were quickly retired in the first. Cleveland going to the bat as a starter. In the second inning McGarr got as far as second for Cleveland, but was left. With one out, Connor hit to left for two bases and moved over to third on Milligan's sacrifice, but Burke couldn't bring Roger in. Burkett lined out a double in the third after two men were out, but he was left, and then the New Yorks were retired rapidly in one, two, three order. Davis made a great stop and throw of Tebeau's bunt in the fourth, and the crowd laughed at the Cleveland captain, and they continued in the merry mood when in the last half of the inning New York scored a run. It happened in this way: Ward pushed a hot ball between first and second bases that Tebeau did well to stop. He promptly stole second on a low throw by O'Connor, and took third on a passed ball. Meanwhile Tiernan, in attempting to sacrifice, put up an easy fly for Young and Davis, the next batter hit a ball high in the air over short left field. Burkett ran in and caught it just back of short stop, and then Ward made a dash for the plate. He got in just far enough to draw the throw from Burkett and then turned back. The ball, however, sailed five feet over O'Connor's head. Ward ran home and a tremendous cheer went up.

New York's other run was scored in the eighth inning. Ward bunted safely, Tiernan put a short hit in left field, and Davis bunted, reaching first on a close decision. Roger Connor now drove a long line fly clear to the ropes, but Buck was laying for him and caught the ball. Ward took his time running across the plate, because he knew that Buck wouldn't take chances with his explosive arm. It began raining in the first half of the ninth inning, but Rusie put on steam and the crowd rooted for a shut out. Burkett struck out, Miskey was settled at first by Fuller, and then William Ewing, popularly known as Buck, sawed the air thrice in dubious style. The game was over and a frenzied crowd cheered Ward's men all the way to their quarters. The score:

CINCINNATI, 4; BROOKLYN, 3.

Dan Daub was responsible for the defeat of Brooklyn by Cincinnati at Eastern Park yesterday afternoon. In the second inning he sent six men to bases on balls. Sacrifice hits came between the first three and pushed the men along toward home. When the next three came a trio of runs was forced across the plate. These runs practically won the game for the Chinamen. In every other inning Daub pitched well, only four hits being made off him. The Brooklyns not only outbatted, but outfielded Comiskey's men.

Several times, when the Brooklyns had men on the bases, a single hit would have resulted in run-getting. In the first inning Corcoran singled and stole second on a wild pitch. Griffin had previously been put out. Lachance struck out, and Foutz retired from King to Latham. Burns led off with a hit in the second inning. Daily reached first on balls. Dailey sacrificed and Hatfield went to first on balls. With all the bases occupied, Daub and Griffin sent up fly balls which were accepted. Corcoran led off with a three-bagger in the third, but the next three men were retired. Dair hit for two bases in the fourth, and Dailey got to first on balls, but as before, the next three batsmen went out. The Brooklyns first scored in the fifth on Corcoran's three-bagger and Foutz's single. Griffin made a run in the seventh on his two-base hit and sacrifice fly balls to right field by Corcoran and Shoch, who took Lachance's place, the latter being unable to do anything. Brooklyn's last run was scored in the eighth. Dailey and Hatfield hit safely. Daub singled and Dailey scored. Hatfield, who tried to make third, was nicely thrown out by Holliday.

In the second inning for Cincinnati Vaughn reached first on balls, Canavan sacrificed, and Smith was sent to his base on balls. Motz, who is an excellent player, sacrificed, and King got to first on balls, filling the bases. Then McCarthy, Latham, and McPhee were sent to first on balls, and Vaughn, Smith, and King tallied. Lachance ended the inning by catching Halliday's fly. A single, a steal by Canavan, Smith's sacrifice, and a wild pitch in the eighth, gave to the Cincinnati team what proved to be their winning run. BOSTON, 13; PITTSBURGH, 10—FIRST GAME.

BOSTON, Aug. 19.—Patsy Donovan's rustlers from Pittsburgh made the classic air of Boston ring with their hoarse war cries to-day as they engaged in battle with the champion bannerets before more than 8,000 spectators, and although they were forced to retreat in the first game, they made a gallant rally in the second, and fought with so much vigor that the Bostons were glad enough to cry quits in the seventh inning, when darkness settled over the field and closed the combat with the score a tie.
