NEW YORK BATS HEMMING'S CURVES AND WISE AGAIN.

Brooklyn Enjoys a Cincinnati Picnic—Chicago Beats Boston, Pittsburghs Win at Philadelphia, Baltimores Outplay Cleveland, and Washington Has No Trouble With St. Louis—Other Games—Notes.

The New Yorks and Brooklyns both won their games yesterday. Foutz's men are thirty points behind Pittsburgh and fifty-three ahead of Ward's team this morning. Baltimore defeated Cleveland and strengthened her lead, as Chicago downed the champions. Pittsburgh won from Philadelphia, and Washington trounced Von der Ahe's boys in vicious style. As New York meets Pittsburgh to-day and Brooklyn tackles Cleveland, the games will attract unusual interest, as a victory for each of the local teams will put Pittsburgh in sixth place and Brooklyn five points behind Tebeau's men. The results:

New York, 7; Louisville, 5.
Brooklyn, 11; Cincinnati, 5.
Chicago, 6; Boston, 2.
Pittsburgh, 8; Philadelphia, 6.
Baltimore, 9; Cleveland, 2.
Washington, 12; St. Louis, 3.

NEW YORK, 7; LOUISVILLE, 5.

The New Yorks won their third straight game from the Louisvilles yesterday. The tail-enders played a more spirited game than on the two preceding days, and really kept the rooters guessing for a while. Danny Richardson's arm was in such bad shape, owing to the accident in Tuesday's game, that he was unable to play, which necessitated a general shake-up in the team. O'Rourke went to short field, Weaver covered first, and Stratton played in right. Barnie shuffled his pitchers up, too, and took Hemming out of the grab bag for his second trial against the Harlemites. But the ex-Brooklynite was hit hard.

The New Yorks didn't pick "pennant bait" by long odds. They batted well, but their base running fairly bristled with blunders. Davis, Doyle, Tiernan, and Ruste being the principal offenders. Doyle, though using his bat effectively, played an inferior first base, both of his errors costing runs. Farrell was off in his throwing, and Ward made a crazy throw to the plate in the first inning that allowed Stratton to score. Ward, however, accepted fourteen out of fifteen fielding chances, some of his plays being very brilliant. There were just two instances there a hit would have won the game for Louisville. In each case Hemming struck out, leaving two on bases in the fourth inning and a man on third in the sixth. Rusie pitched good ball barring four bases on balls, and hit the bag on the nozzle. Burke's arpinting on the bases was refreshing. Tom Brown made the best play of the day when, with two men on bases in the seventh, he hauled Ward's long drive down with one hand. Grim's catching and throwing was also a feature.

The visitors were sent to the bat and Brown hit a beauty to left for a base. Twitchell also hit safely. On Peffer's wild throw to catch Twitchell at second Brown scored. New York promptly tied the score. Burke hit a grounder through O'Rourke's legs, took third on Davis's single, and scored on Doyle's out. New York made no more runs until the sixth. Rusie hit to left, but was out on a trial for two bases. Murphy also drove a safe one past Denny, and then Eddie Burke smashed a hot liner over second. The ball twisted through Tom Brown's hands, and both Murphy and Burke scored. Louisville made one run in the fourth. O'Rourke hit safely, ran to second on a wild pitch, and scored on Weaver's single to right.

Louisville's last run came in the sixth. Brown got his base on balls and reached third on Farrell's high throw. Twitchell bunted three feet inside the third base line and Brown ran in. The New Yorks gathered three runs in the last half of the sixth. Rusie made a second safe hit, a smasher to left. Little Murphy struck out and Burke got four balls. Davis hammered out a double, sending both men home and crossing the plate himself on Doyle's error on base hit. Louisville got another run in the sixth. Ward stopped Pfeffer's hard hit and threw the German out at first. He also bagged Stratton's hot grounder, but Doyle muffed the throw. Hemming struck out the third time, and Grim started to steal. Farrell threw nicely to Ward, and Stratton dashed for the plate. He wasn't half way home when Ward threw the ball over Farrell's head, while Denny ran to third. Hemming then struck out and Grim stole to first. In the eighth, with one out, Twitchell hit for two bases. Davis threw O'Rourke out but Doyle, in an attempt to nail Twitchell at third, burled the ball over Davis's head and Twitchell scored.

Rusie was hit by a pitched ball in the seventh, and with the assistance of Davis's base on balls and Doyle's single scored the run that proved fatally clinched the game. Van Haltren bunted safely in the last half of the inning and stole second. A quick throw by Grim caught him asleep off the bag, and the players started to come in. Van Haltren turned toward the outfield as if he knew he was out; but when Emslie called "Safe" the Kentuckians nearly dropped dead. It must have been one of Emslie's jokes. The score:

BROOKLYN, 11; CINCINNATI, 5.

The quiet at Eastern Park yesterday afternoon, while the Brooklyn-Cincinnati game was in progress, contrasted strangely with Tuesday's uproar. Latham was still unlucky in his team started to make runs in the sixth inning. Then he started to let himself out a bit, but in a very modest way. He was quite funny for an inning or two. It was noticed that Comiskey acted as captain when the usual confab between umpire and captains took place prior to the game. Latham had evidently nothing to do with Swartwood. He could complain of none of the latter's decisions concerning himself in yesterday's game. Swartwood, in fact, umpired very satisfactorily.

The Brooklyns won the game by a superior quality of stick work. Parrott, whose arm has been in poor condition of late, pitched for Cincinnati, and the Brooklyns found him quite easy. Daub officiated at the pitcher's mark for Brooklyn. He was not very effective, the Cincinnatis showing a commendable tendency to bat strongly. This was particularly true of their work in the sixth, eighth, and ninth innings, when they made their runs. Daub was well supported by his fielders. The Cincinnati fielders were away off in their fielding and did not encourage Parrott very much in his pitching. It is very likely that Pfann, who hoped to get on the Brooklyn team, will help Comiskey out in the pitching department today. The score:

CAMBRIDGE, June 13.—Harvard suffered another defeat this afternoon at the hands of the Brown University players. It was a sorry exhibition of baseball considering it was the last game of the season, and June 21. Harvard lost through her weak batting, and squally through Brown's strength in this respect. The Providence men hit Andy Highlands hard, and in the seventh inning succeeded in knocking him out of the box. Up to that point the crimson stood a fair chance of winning. Harvard was heavily handicapped by the loss of Schmoll, O'Malley, and Wiggin, but this fact hardly explains the defeat. Harvard and Brown now stand even in the score of games, each having won twice. The score:
