NEW YORK.

To our thinking, the best way to get things done right is to find a good doer and to stick to him. A dealer gets to know your wants often better than yourself; and a wise shoeman keeps the same shoes year after year—except for the few butterfly styles that come and go in a day.
That is true to some extent in clothing, hats, and furnishings—the other things that we sell; but it is eminently true of shoes, because, if they are not right, they are so very wrong.
