NEW YORKS WIN AND LOSE,

AND ARE THREE POINTS BEHIND THE CHAMPION BOSTONS.

The Chicagos Thrash the Beaneaters Without Mercy, While Ward's Men Break Even with Comiskey's Team, but the Baltimores Defeat Cleveland and Increase Their Lead—Brooklyn Wins Twice from Louisville—St. Louis and Philadelphia Defeat Each Other, While Washington and Pittsburgh Do Likewise.

The New Yorks lost one of their two games with the Cincinnatis yesterday, and thereby lost an opportunity to slip ahead of the Bostons, who were beaten out of their bouts by the Chicagos. Meanwhile the Baltimores defeated the Clevelands again and strengthened their lead. They are now twenty-one points ahead of the Bostons, who hold second place by a margin of only three points. Brooklyn beat Louisville twice, St. Louis broke even with Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh and Washington won and lost. The results:

Cincinnati, 8; New York, 8 (First game).
New York, 8; Cincinnati, 6 (Second game).
Brooklyn, 6; Louisville, 5 (First game).
Brooklyn, 20; Louisville, 7 (Second game).
Chicago, 17; Boston, 7.
Baltimore, 5; Cleveland, 2.
St. Louis, 8; Philadelphia, 8 (First game).
Philadelphia, 19; St. Louis, 9 (Second game).
Washington, 11; Pittsburgh, 4 (First game).
Pittsburgh, 15; Washington, 6 (Second game).

CINCINNATI, 8; NEW YORK, 6—FIRST GAME.

The fact that the New Yorks had beaten the champions on Friday and were in a position to jump into second place by taking two games from the Cincinnatis, providing that Boston lost, served to attract another great crowd to the Polo grounds yesterday. Long before 2 o'clock the cranks began to arrive in droves, eager for the battle to begin. Everybody talked baseball. The great game of the day before was the leading topic and those that didn't see it mentally kicked themselves as they heard of Rusie's wonderful pitching and the discomfiture of the Beaneaters. The double bill with Cincinnati looked rather easy for New York, so the rooters said, but, like a great many favorite events, it was filled with uncertainty in the eyes of those who make a study of the game. But even this latter class were slightly off in their calculations. They didn't bargain for defeat with Meekin pitching for New York, although they did have some apprehension about the second game, in which German was slated to pitch. But, as it turned out, the New Yorks were very lucky to get away with one victory.

The cranks occupied nearly every seat in the vast enclosure by 1:30 o'clock and were still pouring down the "L" road stairs like a huge waterfall. The unwatered roadway and the dusty sidewalks were churned up into a blinding cloud of dirt and ashes, which made many a throat parched and drove hundreds to the various lager beer emporiums in the neighborhood. This proved a blessing to venders of Coney Island sausages and Roman candle cigars, while the chewing-gum men couldn't sell enough of their wares. The practice of the rival teams cut a very small figure with the perspiring hordes who were there to see blood and not grandstand plays, so that, when the opening yang and Arlie Latham said, "They're off!" a great shout for joy swelled itself into a reverberating roar as the ball tossers prepared for the struggle. It was 2 o'clock then, but the game didn't start. Where was Davis? Anxiously the cranks looked in vain for the star third baseman, but he came not. Ten minutes later he was seen limping down the dressing-room stairs, and then it became known that he couldn't play on account of a gimp leg. So "Yale" Murphy was sent to third base instead. The little fellow did the best he could, but before the game was over it was evident that Davis's batting was sadly missed.

Of course, many people came to see and hear Clown Latham, but his antics were quickly cut short by Umpire McQuaid, who apparently is not a lover of wit and satire. When Canavan was clearly safe at second base in the second inning, but McQuaid declared him out, Latham rushed toward the judge of play, and screamed:

"What's that, Mr. McQuaid?"

"He's out!" came the firm reply. Then Latham fell flat upon the ground as if struck with a club and rolled over and over in the dust, yelling all the time:

"That's a great decision, I don't think. It's a brute! Whoa! Hey! Hi! Hi! Hi! Well! Well! Well!!!"

"Go to the bench!" shouted the now thoroughly enraged umpire, at the same moment slapping on a fine.

"All right!" answered the Dude, with a laugh. "That's the way they win their games here!" Then Latham sat down. When his side took the field, in the last half of the inning, the Dude continued to guy McQuaid, who finally put him out of the game, Morgan Murphy taking his place. Arlie then made so much noise coaching from the bench that McQuaid ordered him off the field, and Latham took a seat among the bleachers, where he continued his chatter until the second game began.

The New Yorks were beaten simply for the reason that they couldn't hit Dwyer at the right time and gave poor support to Meekin. The latter was not in his best form, as may be seen by his five bases on balls and the ten hits gathered from his curves. Farrell's catching and throwing could not be called up to the average, as he was responsible for two of the visitors' runs, all alone.

The Cincinnatis went to the bat first and scored one run on Holliday's single, a passed ball, and a bad throw by Farrell, after Fuller had fumbled McPhee's grounder. The New Yorks took the lead in the second inning by making two runs on four singles and a force. Then the visitors forged ahead in the fourth by rolling up three points on a base on balls, two doubles, an out, and a single. They also increased their advantage in the fifth, when Merritt reached another man on his base on balls, a passed ball, and two wild throws by Farrell. Again, in the seventh, a single and a two-bagger, coupled with Van Haltren's wild throw, netted two more runs and made the score 7 to 3.

The New Yorks rallied in the eighth, an error by Smith, two singles, and a two-bagger putting them within one run of tying the score. But in the ninth, Comiskey's men clinched their victory, when Holliday hit for two bases and ran home on an out and Merritt's scratch. The score:

NEW YORK, 8; CINCINNATI, 6—SECOND GAME.

The result of the second game was in doubt until big Amos Rusie was called upon to take German's place in the points in the sixth inning. Then the visitors stopped batting and scoring, while the New Yorks held their lead of two runs until Umpire McQuaid called the game on account of darkness after the first half of the seventh inning. In this game Mike Tiernan and Shorty Fuller were the heroes, both of their home-run drives coming at times when men occupied first base. Fuller also played a brilliant short field. Wittrock pitched for Cincinnati and showed up pretty well, but his magnificent support pulled him out of several tight places. Latham was permitted to resume his place at third, which he did with a series of bows and scrapes which made the crowd roar with laughter.

The visitors started in to touch up German at the very start. The only Latham got his base on balls and scored on a two-bagger by Dummy Hoy. The latter also ran in on Holliday's double to right. McPhee took four balls and with Holliday attempted a double steal, but Wilson's throw to Farrell killed the "Bug" easily. Then Merritt and Canavan went out on infield grounders. In their half the New Yorks scored one run on Holliday's muff of Burke's fly, a wild pitch, and two outs. Holliday complained of a sore finger, so Comiskey put him in right field and shifted Canavan to left.

The New Yorks tied the score in the third. Burke was safe on Smith's error and stole second. Tiernan drove a single to left, and a quick return of the ball caught Burke off third. Tiernan taking second, whence he counted on Farrell's clean baser to centre. In the fourth the New Yorks took what looked like a strong lead, by scoring four runs. Fuller got four balls, Wilson doubled to right, and Meekin sacrificed to Holliday. Fuller ran in, Burke then sent Wilson home with a pretty base hit, and Mike Tiernan lifted one into the crowd in right field for a home run. Farrell was safe on Latham's fumble, but was thrown out at second. That made the score 6 to 2, but the Cincinnatis didn't quit. They went at German in the fifth and pounded out four runs, tying the score again. Wittrock gave his base on balls, Latham moved him to third with a single, and Hoy's out brought the pitcher home. Holliday got a life on Fuller's fumble, Latham crossing the plate, and McPhee drove the ball clean to the left field fence for a home run. The New Yorks had luck with them in their half and scored twice when the odds were against them. After Doyle had flied to Holliday, Ward took his base on balls, but was cleanly thrown out in a try for second. Van Haltren also took his base, and then Fuller shot a liner through the ropes in left centre for one of the prettiest four-baggers of the season.

Rusie began pitching in the sixth, and although Comiskey and Wittrock made base hits, a double play by Ward and Doyle prevented any runs. After that the Ohio crowd died easy. The score:

BROOKLYN, 6; LOUISVILLE, 5—FIRST GAME.

In addition to the game regularly scheduled for yesterday afternoon between the Brooklyns and Louisvilles the postponed game of June 6 was also played. The Brooklyns succeeded in winning both games, and the Eastern Park cranks went home tired but very happy. There were some extremely pretty catches during the day, and in several innings in either game the playing was decidedly poor.

This latter style of play was particularly noticeable in the first game. The Brooklyns hardly deserved to win the opening contest. Their fielding was loose and their batting not at all strong. By great luck they managed to win the game in the ninth inning. Hemming weakened and gave bases on balls. With the score 5 to 4 in Louisville's favor the Brooklyns began the ninth with little hope for a victory. Hemming had settled down after his first inning and was well supported. But when Griffin came to the bat he got his base on balls, and hope was bred in the breasts of the Brooklynites. Billy Shindle cast a cloud over the crowd by striking out. But Corcoran hit safely. Burns got a base on balls, filling the bases. Daly hit the ball so hard that it caromed off Pfeffer and Griffin and Corcoran made the coveted runs. The score:

BROOKLYN, 20; LOUISVILLE, 7—SECOND GAME.

As Pfeffer had dislocated his thumb in the first game, Catcher Grim was booked to play second base and Zahner to catch for Louisville in the second game. Wadsworth was to pitch. The Brooklyns' battery was changed to Kennedy and Kinslow. The crowd now numbered 3,400 persons, each one anxious for the Brooklyns to make it two straight. This Foutz's men started to do, earning four runs in the first inning. And they never let up on them. When Wadsworth, for when Lynch called the game at the end of the eighth inning the Brooklyns had just a moment before made their fourteenth earned run of the game. The sixth, seventh, and eighth innings their batting was terrific. The score:
